TO END TRANSFERS OF DYING.

Coroners Moved to Action by a New York Hospital Case.

Moved to emphatic action by a case reported to him yesterday, in which a woman dying from heart failure was hurried from New York Hospital to Bellevue, and died in the ambulance on the way, Coroner Harburger, Chairman of the Board of Coroners, has called a meeting of the board for Saturday morning to discuss this procedure by other hospitals than Bellevue. Measures to stop it will be adopted.

"Bellevue is the finest hospital in the United States," said Coroner Harburger, "but the authorities of other hospitals in the city, not allied with it, in their desire to be rid of all undesirable cases where death appears imminent, transfer such patients hurriedly to Bellevue, in order that they may keep down their own mortality figures if the patient dies."

The case which aroused the Coroner was that of Mrs. Jeanne Cheno, a dressmaker, of 142 West Thirtieth Street. She became ill with heart disease on Monday evening and was taken to New York Hospital. There she became rapidly worse, but in spite of her condition she was put back into the ambulance and orders were given to take her to Bellevue. She expired on the way.

"It seems to me," said Coroner Harburger, "that common humanity in such a case would have urged that the woman be kept in the hospital where she was first taken and be allowed to die with as little suffering as possible, anyway."

Bayonne to Have a Theatre.

With many city officials looking on, ground was broken yesterday afternoon at Avenue D and Twenty-third Street, Bayonne, for that city's first theatre. E. A. Schiller, the promoter, turned the first shovelful of earth. The new playhouse will be called the Bayonne Theatre. It will cost $50,000, and will have a seating capacity of 1,271. The house will be opened on Sept. 8.

TO JAIL TO SAVE A WOMAN.

Witness Refuses to Tell Her Name in Brady Divorce Case.

The third trial of a suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Sadie Singer Brady against Daniel M. Brady, President of the Brady Brass Company, was continued before Justice Blanchard, in the Supreme Court, yesterday. Miss Gertrude MacKenzie, an actress, is the co-respondent. The testimony was practically the same as that given at the former trials. Ex-Assistant District Attorney William M. Rand, Jr., is counsel for Mrs. Brady, while the defendant is represented by ex-Congressman John J. Adams, and ex-Borough President Martin W. Littleton of Brooklyn.

Edward Lawrence, a member of the "Fantana" company, who was called as a witness, was committed for contempt by Justice Blanchard after refusing to answer questions, not for the reason that it would degrade or incriminate him, but because he was unwilling to reveal the name of a woman to whom he had related some information concerning Brady and the co-respondent. Justice Blanchard said he would have to hold the witness until the trial is resumed this morning.

Charles Singer, a brother of Mrs. Brady, testified that he had hired detectives to work on the case.

ESCAPES FROM POLICE COURT

Man Charged with Theft Gets Away, Nobody Knows How.

While awaiting examination in the Adams Street Court, Brooklyn, yesterday morning, Edward Wilson, who was arrested recently and charged with stealing a scarfpin from a man at the Brooklyn end of the bridge, escaped and is still at large.

The prisoners who entered the van at the Raymond Street Jail were checked twice, and were again checked off when entering the court pen. Sixteen prisoners were on hand on each occasion. But when Wilson's name was called in court there was no response. Magistrate Wahle examined every policeman in court. No one knew how the escape had been effected.

FRIENDS OF RATE BILL CLASH IN THE SENATE

Democrats Find Clapp Won't Try to Limit Power of Courts.

TILLMAN FOR COURT REFORM

Says It Would Begin with the Supreme Court—Opponents of Hepburn Bill Rejoice.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Friends of the Hepburn Rate bill found themselves in a sharp clash in the Senate to-day. Senator Clapp, one of the Administration's spokesmen, ran afoul of Senator Tillman, who is in charge of the bill, and Senator Bailey, the Democratic leader.

Senator Clapp held that in the case of dispute of a rate made by the Inter-State Commerce Commission the courts, as a matter of equity, would have power to suspend the rate and penalty for disobedience pending the litigation. This roused the Democrats to protest, and the dispute became so sharp that in the end Mr. Tillman stirred his listeners with this remark:

"If Congress is to be hedged about by decrees of courts, we would better begin at once and reform the courts, beginning with the Supreme Court. Sooner or later the people will be heard on this question and will demand relief from the intolerable condition that exists."

Senator Scott opened the debate on rates to-day with a demand for some changes in the pending bill that will satisfy the conservatives. He followed much the line of argument made by Senator Foraker recently.

Senator Clapp, with Senator Dolliver, has enjoyed for months the attention focused on those who are classed as Administration Senators. His discussion of the subject was therefore listened to with marked attention from both sides of the chamber. His argument was purely a legal one.

In opposing any court review amendment the ground was taken by him that the language of the Hepburn bill could not enlarge or take from the rights of persons and corporations under the Constitution, and that the courts to which the question of a disputed rate might be taken would have good ground to hold that the rate and penalty should be suspended until a final decision was rendered.

When Mr. Clapp had ended, Mr. Tillman was quick to ask for an elucidation of this view. Mr. Clapp had rested his opinion on a statement taken from the Pittsburg speech by Senator Knox, in which the latter said there were grave doubts if legislation by Congress could cut off the Constitutional rights of carriers in the courts. Senator Clapp thought that the common rules prevailing in equity cases would govern, and that it was fair inference from the language of the Hepburn bill that the courts could presume that Congress had so intended.

The reply seemed to take Mr. Tillman's breath away.

"Does the Senator mean to say," he demanded, "that this bill is so written that such a thing is possible? Is not the whole case given away if the Senator's contention is right? Are we not face to face with an absolute surrender of the relief to the shipper?"

Mr. Clapp responded: "If it is the design that the party seeking a restraining order should be subject to a penalty, and if after the lapse of some time the court should refuse to make this order permanent and vacate it, I am very fearful that the language of that provision would have to be changed. I want to add, I am very doubtful whether it would be valid if changed. We are face to face with the proposition, and if Congress fixes a rate below what the law recognizes as a reasonable rate, then clearly you are invading the property rights of the carrier."

Senator Bailey intervened then and declared that it was the belief of the lawyers on the Democratic side of the chamber that the position taken by Senator Clapp and his friends was an unsafe one and that the bill should be strengthened in this particular.

He asked if Mr. Clapp would join in an effort to amend the bill so it would retain in effect rates fixed by the commission until finally determined by the courts. Mr. Clapp said he could not on the ground that such a provision would affect the very life of the proposed law.

Mr. Bailey urged that as the bill read it was the right of the carrier to go into any Federal court through whose jurisdiction the road ran and appeal for a review of a new rate. Without opprobriously characterizing Federal Judges, he said this was a provision so broad that the railroads could search the length and breadth of the land for a Judge who would take the view, no doubt honestly, that the carrier had been unconstitutionally deprived of his rights.

He thought an amendment prepared by Senaotr Spooner of which many Senators have knowledge was strong enough to meet the demands in this respect. Senator Spooner sat gravely listening, and, sphinxlike, did not vouchsafe a word of enlightenment.

Mr. Tillman, who had been nervously listening to the debate, cut the whole discussion short with his crack of the whip about the courts. Silence followed in the Chamber among Senators, but in one corner of the gallery applause broke out, which no one rebuked.

It is understood that Senator Tillman will insist that the court review amendment that the Democrats deem necessary shall be framed so strong that there shall be no interlocutory decrees, and the new rate shall be put in force at once. He has asked Senator Bailey to draw such an amendment, and the Texas Senator is at work on the task.

Mr. Tillman wants the penalty of $5,000 a day for violation of the new rate to run from the first act of violation. He wants the penalty to operate as a deterrent so that the railroad companies will not go into court on the pretext that new rates are confiscatory and try to wear out the patience of shippers. In a suit, if the road should win, the penalty would be paid back. If it should lose it would be heavily punished for undertaking to defeat the law.

Senator Bailey to-day evidently endeavored to get Senator Spooner into discussion with him on the Constitutional ground they are both studying closely.

Senators Aldrich, Foraker, Crane, and other Republicans who are seeking to amend the bill so as to provide for judicial review of orders of the Inter-State Commerce Commission took the position that to-day's discussion demonstrated that the friends of the measure are divided, and that the bill should not be accepted in its present form. They say they are encouraged in the position they have taken from the first.

Discussing what he viewed as the wavering among the friends of the Hepburn bill, Senator Aldrich declared:

"Of this much I am certain. We have our end of the chamber firmly anchored, and if we go down it will be with flying colors."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CRAZED.

Mrs. Jarvis's Mind Upset by Meetings, Her Brother Says.

Mrs. Kate Jarvis, a member of an old Staten Island family, wife of William Jarvis, proprietor of a large hotel at Palm Beach, Fla., is at the home of her brother, William Decker, at Bloomfield, S. I., in a serious condition, it is said, as a result of religious excitement due to attendance on meetings held by a member of the Christian Science Church at Palm Beach.

Mrs. Jarvis is 32 years old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Decker. She has been twice married and has a daughter, Anna, 10 years old, by her first husband. Last July she became the wife of William Jarvis, the ceremony being performed at the Summerfield Methodist Episcopal Church, Mariners' Harbor. Her first husband's name was Flannery.

About ten days after her second marriage Mrs. Jarvis and her husband left for Palm Beach, and since then she has corresponded with her family on Staten Island until recently.

In response to telegraphic request, Mr. Decker went to Florida last Sunday morning. He said that when he arrived there he was shocked to learn that his sister had become mentally deranged, and that it had been necessary to confine her in a straitjacket so that she could not harm herself.

Mr. Decker says he was informed by his brother-in-law that about six weeks ago a woman who announced herself as a Christian Science teacher arrived at Palm Beach and began to hold a series of services. Mrs. Jarvis attended one of these meetings, and thereafter was a constant attendant at the meetings, and finally began to manifest signs of mental derangement. True to her new doctrine, she refused medical attendance, and it finally became necessary to place her under restraint.

Accompanied by her daughter and brother, Mrs. Jarvis left Palm Beach Tuesday morning and, on reaching Jersey City, was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, at Livingstone, S. I.

Mrs. Jarvis seemed improved after reaching the hospital, and last night her brother took her to his home. Dr. Wisely of Port Richmond, and two trained nurses, are attending her.

DENTIST SIMPSON INDICTED.

Grand Jury Charges Murder in the Killing of B. T. Horner.

Special to The New York Times.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., March 7.—Dr. James W. Simpson, the Fifth Avenue dentist who shot and killed his father-in-law, Bartley T. Horner, on Dec. 27, 1905, was indicted by the Grand Jury in Riverhead to-night for murder in the first degree.

While Mrs. James W. Wilkinson, wife of Dr. Simpson's lawyer, was calling on the dentist in the Suffolk County Jail this afternoon, Mrs. Simpson, the dentist's wife, was closeted with the Grand Jury telling her version of the shooting. Mrs. Simpson, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Horner, came to Riverhead this morning.

Mrs. Simpson received two days ago, from her husband's lawyer a letter making peremptory demand for $9,000 that Dr. Simpson had placed in her hands at various times, to be saved for him. Mrs. Simpson was taken by surprise and declined to discuss the matter. She has not answered the letter.

Dr. Simpson received the news of his indictment in the jail.

"It was what I expected," he said. "I am not sorry, because it will afford me an opportunity to vindicate myself before the world. Wilkinson, please do whatever you can to secure an early trial. I will take the stand at the trial and tell everything."

COAL CRISIS IN ILLINOIS.

Operators Decide to Reject All Demands of the Miners.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Unless rapid events happen within the next two weeks to change the situation a strike of 50,000 coal miners in Illinois on April 1 is practically certain. The crisis in Illinois makes that in Indiana and Ohio acute.

A development which led to this conclusion was the "stand-pat" attitude unexpectedly adopted by the Illinois operators to-day in their meeting. Not only were they aligned in a solid front against the granting of all or any of the demands of the miners, but they also agreed to bolt the Indianapolis convention in case a compromise settlement is accepted. The operators of Indiana and Ohio are ready to stand with the Illinois men.

The members of the Anthracite Miners' Sub-Committee of Seven, who went out of town last week, have not been sent for yet. Both sides are awaiting the result of the Mine Workers' Convention in Indianapolis on March 15 and the conference of the bituminous operators on March 19.

Ralph M. Easley, Chairman of the National Executive Committee of the Civic Federation, was a caller yesterday at the Ashland House and had a talk with Mitchell. Both stated later that the meeting had nothing to do with the coal situation. Mitchell is a member of the National Civic Federation.

Block in the Subway.

The blocking of an uptown Lenox Avenue Subway train under Central Park, between the Ninety-sixth and 110th Street stations, about 11 o'clock last night, and the enveloping of one of the cars in darkness, caused a delay and excitement among the passengers. Passengers on downtown cars declare that there was smoke in the tunnel where the train was stalled. Behind the stalled train others lined up until the cause of trouble was removed. Subway employes would say nothing about the accident, none admitting a delay longer than three minutes.

FRENCH MINISTRY OUT; CHURCH ISSUE FORCED

Cabinet's Resignation Accepted by President Fallieres.

INVENTORIES ARE SUSPENDED

Socialists Combine with Clericals and Nationalists to Defeat Premier Rouvier, Who Expresses Satisfaction.

PARIS, March 7.—Entirely unexpectedly the Rouvier Ministry was defeated in the Chamber of Deputies to-night, and immediately resigned. This action caused a profound sensation.

The Cabinet crisis comes at a most dramatic moment, when the Franco-German contest has reached a decisive stage, and may exert an important adverse influence on the Algeciras conference and on European affairs.

The defeat of the Government was the upshot of a comparatively minor debate over the church disorders. The Government succeeded in holding only 234 votes, while the various elements in opposition—Clericals, Socialists, and Nationalists—united and polled 267 votes, thus placing the Ministry in a minority of 33.

Premier Rouvier, with all of his colleagues, immediately went to the Foreign Office, where a joint letter of resignation was prepared. Later M. Rouvier presented this letter to President Fallières, who accepted the resignations. The President announced his intention of consulting the Presidents of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies to-morrow relative to the formation of a new Cabinet.

The debate in the Chamber of Deputies was upon the riot yesterday during the inventory of a church in the village of Boeschèpe, resulting in the death of a manifestant. Various orators severely criticised the Government's course, asserting that it threatened to bring about a religious warfare. Premier Rouvier responded:

"The Government's duty is to apply the law. It will apply it without weakness, but also with the prudence, tact, and wisdom consistent with public tranquillity. I ask the adoption of a resolution approving these declarations of the Government."

The resolution was put to a vote and defeated. The result was more expressive of personal antagonism to the Ministry than of opposition to church inventories.

Having returned from presenting to President Fallières the resignation of the Ministry, M. Rouvier was surrounded in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies by groups of members who expressed their regret at his abandonment of office. M. Rouvier displayed not the slightest emotion. Replying to one of his followers he remarked:

"I regarded it as a point of honor to fulfill the task I had undertaken. The Chamber's vote has relieved me of a burden the weight of which had begun to make itself felt. I do not regret it."

Responding to the declaration of another Deputy that he might have carried opinion with him, M. Rouvier said:

"I should have received 350 votes had I declared for more vigorous action, but the sentiment of the Chamber was against the Cabinet's remaining in office until the election and the struggle would have begun again. It was better to finish immediately."

The meeting of the members of the Cabinet at the Foreign Office lasted half an hour. After exchanging views with reference to church inventories it was decided to suspend operations in that direction until a new Cabinet has been appointed. The decision resulted from a disparity of the opinions expressed in the Chamber of Deputies relative to the method of carrying out the law providing for the separation of Church and State.

Had the Chamber voted a motion of confidence in the Government, the Cabinet would have been compelled to continue to apply the law, but the downfall of the Ministry having clearly occurred through disapproval of the methods hitherto adopted, which on the one side were considered as too violent and on the other side as too indulgent, M. Rouvier and his colleagues thought it better to discontinue the enforcement of the law. The promulgation of regulations, however, will occur in the ordinary course, as specific dates therefor are laid down in the bill.

BERLIN, March 7.—The fall of M. Rouvier awakens certain misgivings here lest it should lead to a resumption of the foreign policy of M. Delcassé. It is pointed out that the majority against M. Rouvier was composed chiefly of Nationalists who denounced as treasonable the attitude of the element whose opposition to M. Delcassé led to his resignation.

Much curiosity and some anxiety is indulged in respecting the effect of a change in the Government on the Algeciras conference, and it is feared that fresh complications will follow or that at least there will be a period of uncertainty and delay in the proceedings.

Foreign Minister Delcassé resigned on June 7 last. In submitting his resignation he said that he recognized that differences of view had arisen between himself and his colleagues relative to the foreign policy of France, particularly concerning the negotiations with Morocco.

CITY OWNERSHIP VICTORY.

Public Utilities Champion Elected Mayor of Seattle by 15 Votes.

Special to The New York Times.

SEATTLE, Washington, March 7.—William Hickman Moore, Municipal Ownership candidate for Mayor, was elected yesterday on a platform pledged to municipal ownership of public utilities, by a majority of 15. The vote was: Moore, 8,490; Riplinger, 8,475.

Seattle is nominally Republican by 3,500, and has always, since its foundation, had a Republican Mayor. Moore proposes to build in outlying sections of the city a street car system to meet the present system owned by Stone & Webster of Boston.

The charter amendment submitted to the voters providing that no franchise for street car purposes shall be granted in the future that does not contain a clause providing that the city have joint use of the tracks on payment of half the cost of construction and maintenance and also containing a provision for acquisition of the line in entirety by the city at any time it sees fit, was carried by a large majority. The cost is to be fixed by a board of arbitration.

SCHWAB'S ILLNESS A COLD.

He Wires His Wife That He is Not Seriously Ill.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 7.—Private advices received here to-night report that Charles M. Schwab, while ill, is not in a serious condition.

From Kansas City direct communication was established late this evening with Mr. Schwab's train, with instruction to the railroad men to ascertain his exact condition. The conductor of the train replied that Mr. Schwab was not dangerously ill, and that his condition was improving. A telegram had also been sent by Mr. Schwab himself to his wife, in New York, which stated that he was not seriously sick.

Mr. Schwab contracted his cold while making a trip from Tonopah to Bull Frog, Nevada. After spending the Winter in the mild Eastern climate, Mr. Schwab arrived in Tonopah in the midst of a fierce blizzard. He made the sixty-mile run to Bull Frog in an open automobile, and immediately afterward entered the damp mines. When he came out he was seized with a violent chill, which soon developed into a very heavy cold.

Reports from the southwest to the effect that Charles M. Schwab was seriously ill were denied almost as soon as they reached New York.

At the office of his secretary, Oliver Wren, 111 Broadway, it was said that Mr. Schwab was slightly indisposed when he left Los Angeles, but that the indisposition was not at all serious.

Dr. W. R. Ward is with the party. A dispatch received from him at 8:15 o'clock last night, dated Tucumcari, N. M., said: "Mr. Schwab somewhat indisposed in Los Angeles, but illness of slight significance. En route to-day, feeling much better."

HODGINS CLEANING HOUSE.

Twenty-two Policemen Transferred—Half Tenderloin Force Changed.

Things are happening daily to confirm last week's rumor that Capt. Hodgins, the new ruler of the Tenderloin, not only intends to make over the old force from bottom up, but that he has Inspector Schmittberger and Commissioner Bingham with him in the idea.

A few days after Hodgins came up from Mercer Street five Sergeants, two or three Roundsmen and practically all the old plainclothes men were sent away. The new men came primarily from Mercer Street, and had been with Hodgins in other precincts. The new Captain even got one of his old doormen from Mercer Street.

Then the patrol force began to move to other stations, their places being taken by policemen who had worked under Hodgins before. For four or five days Hodgins has been Acting Inspector in place of Schmittberger.

Yesterday twenty-two policemen were transferred from the Tenderloin Station and more than half the men assigned to fill the Tenderloin vacancies came from the Mercer Street Station. Most of the men sent away were old-timers in the White Light District.

No such wholesale transfer from the Tenderloin has been known for years. Already nearly one-half of the old force has been got rid of.

AGREEMENT ON WATER BILL.

Compromise Gives City Entrance to Catskills—Ulster Satisfied.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 7.—The Fowler Omnibus Compromise Water bill, the main object of which is to protect Ulster County interests while at the same time giving New York City rights to extend its water system to and about the Caskills, will be reported favorably to-morrow by the Assembly Committee on Electricity, Gas, and Water Supply.

At the hearing to-day before Chairman Agnew's committee, the bill was declared to be satisfactory to New York, Ulster County, and to the State Water Commission.

Assistant Corporation Counsels Guy and Sterling appeared on behalf of New York City.

"There are some things about this bill," said Mr. Guy, "that are not just what New York City wants. One of these is the provision that New York City must pay for indirect damages. But, in view of the fact that we are going into another county, the question of indirect damages may be justified. I can say, however, that the city administration will not oppose this bill."

CANADA EXPELS OUR SILVER.

Neat Trick Whereby Uncle Sam Pays the Canadian Piper.

Special to The New York Times.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, March 7.—The sweep of American silver from Canada has begun. All over the Dominion the banks are collecting American silver money and shipping it to Montreal, whence it is being sent to Washington and there exchanged for gold.

The removal of American silver from Canada will be a good thing for the banks and profitable to the Government. The banks will be paid three-eighths of 1 per cent. for collecting it, and the Government will bear all transportation charges. It is estimated the Government will clear at least half a million dollars.

It is calculated that at the present time there is half a million dollars' worth of United States silver circulating in Canada, and when it is removed Canadian coin will take its place. The difference in value between the bullion in a coin and its face value is about 55 per cent., so the Government will reap a profit of about 50 cents on every 50-cent piece, 25 on the American coin, and 25 on its own coin issued to replace the American money.

In many portions of the Canadian Northwest discounts as high as 20 and 25 per cent. are charged on American silver. Nickels and coppers are wholly refused.

TRAIN KILLS TWO SISTERS.

Death of Second Victim of an Accident on the West Shore.

Miss Hattie W. Rehain and her sister, Maggie Rehain, were struck by a West Shore Railroad train at a crossing at Little Ferry, N. J., Monday night while they were on their way to their home at Bogota. The former died Tuesday from the effects of her injuries. The sister, who was 18 years old, was picked up dead at the time of the accident.

The elder Miss Rehain was 35 years old. She was Secretary of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Englewood and was prominent in church and temperance work.

TWO KILLED IN CRASH OF MONTREAL EXPRESS

HIS HURTS NOT SERIOUS

Sharp Curve Cut Off Signal That Brakeman Used in Effort to Avoid Disaster.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, March 7.—Two persons were killed, another will probably die before morning, and several were injured in an accident this afternoon on the Delaware & Hudson Railway. George Foster Peabody was hurt.

Soon after 5 o'clock a freight train in the yard at the bottom of Church Street ran off the track at the switch. The engine and three cars left the rails and effectually blocked the track. The passenger train from Rutland, due at Saratoga at 5:30 o'clock, was unable to pass and came to a halt.

The Montreal express was due in five minutes on a sharp curve, and a brakeman, according to the regulations, was hurried back along the line to flag it. The engineer of the express could not see the flag at any distance, but, as soon as he did, put on the brakes.

The speed was reduced, but it was impossible to stop the train before the engine of the Montreal train hit the rear car of the Rutland, driving it into the one just ahead and telescoping it.

The floor of one car was driven over that of the other for about fifteen feet. Between them Gertrude Esmond, 16 years of age, the daughter of a farmer of Gansevoort, was caught and killed instantly. Her mother was also on the train, and was so badly crushed that at a late hour to-night it was stated at the hospital that she can hardly live till morning.

Frank Sindecuse of Buffalo, a travelling salesman, was taken out alive from the wreck. His arm was badly crushed and he suffered so severly from shock that he died in the hospital at 9:30 o'clock. Frank Cardes of Albany, an Italian, is also in the hospital with a crushed foot. He is expected to recover. Nelson M. Varney of Sandy Hill had his right hand and arm crushed and received internal injuries. He was taken to the home of his brother, Dr. Varney.

About a dozen other passengers were badly shaken. They were treated by the doctors of the town at the wreck, and did not go to the hospital. One man, whose name could not be learned, had a narrow escape. He was standing on the rear platform of the Rutland train when he saw the Montreal Express round the corner and make for his car. He jumped just in time.

Mr. Peabody was in the car that was telescoped, and was only a seat or two from those that were destroyed. He received a few bruises on the legs, but was otherwise uninjured. He remained over night in Saratoga Springs in accordance with the plans he had already formed.

DEAL WITH STANDARD OIL.

Hadley Reported to be Willing to Let Rockefeller Alone, on Conditions.

A. J. Eddy of Chicago was registered at the Waldorf-Astoria last night. At least the initials on the rooming list were "A. J." At 10 o'clock inquiry developed that Mr. Eddy was not in his room, nor could he be found in the corridors. Half an hour later the clerk in charge of the information desk denied that any Mr. Eddy was a guest of the hotel.

Alfred D. Eddy of Chicago, general counsel for the Standard Oil interests in the West, stayed at the Waldorf-Astoria when he attended the New York hearing in the suit instituted against the company and its offshoots by Attorney General Hadley of Missouri.

A report came last night from the West that Alfred D. Eddy was on his way to New York to arrange a compromise by which John D. Rockefeller would be freed from process servers provided certain other witnesses answered the questions put to them. Henry Wollman, counsel for Attorney General Hadley, said he had not heard of it. Mr. Eddy's negotiations, however, would not necessarily be through Mr. Wollman if he has already reached an understanding with Attorney General Hadley. His business in New York would be to see the Standard Oil officials whose testimony is wanted.

SAVED CAPTAIN AND CREW.

A February Gale Wrecked the Coasting Schooner Eliza J. Pendleton.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 7.—Capt. Henry Dodge of Portland, Me., and eight men, the crew of the schooner Eliza J. Pendleton, owned by Pendleton Brothers, New York, were put ashore at Elizabethport to-day by the schooner Anna R. Bishop, and told of the suffering they underwent after being wrecked. The crew re rescued from the Pendleton 200 miles southeast of Fire Island on March 2, after being nearly four days without food or water.

The Pendleton was on her way from Georgetown, S. C., to Bridgeport, Conn., with a cargo of lumber when she was struck by a gale on Feb. 27. For hours she withstood the blow, but late that day it seemed as if she had burst, so fast did the water pour into her.

Capt. Dodge was struck by a wave, hurled against a piece of lumber on deck and severely injured. Toward evening on March 2 the Bishop sighted the Pendleton, then almost completely submerged. A boat was launched and manned by the steward, Howard Nelson, and two sailors, who rowed alongside at the risk of their lives.

Capt. Dodge, suffering from his injury, had to be helped aboard. So had the negro cook and the mate, who had temporarily lost his mind from the privations he had endured. The vessel had been prevented from sinking by her cargo of lumber. When abandoned on March 2 she was still afloat.

For Albany, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and the West, the New York Central has trains at 8:30, 8:45, 10:20, 11:15 A. M.; 1:02, 1:06, 2:04, 3:30, 3:40, 3:42, 4:00, 4:30, 5:29, 5:30, 6:00, 7:30, 8:00, 9:20, 9:30, 11:30 P. M. Can you do better?—Adv.

CITY FERRY LOSING MONEY.

Bensel Attributes the Shortage Entirely to the Elements.

Dock Commissioner Bensel yesterday afternoon said that the new Staten Island Ferry had been, so far, a big loss to the city.

"The loss on the boats," he declared, "is entirely due to the elements. It must be remembered that they are the largest boats on the river, and run at the greatest speed. When the city ferry was first spoke of during the term of Commissioner Hawkes, a loss of $200,000 each year was anticipated, so this is no surprise. The receipts for the month of February are 24 per cent. greater than for the same month last year."

The Commissioner said that the Queens has been the lucky boat of the five, the Bronx and the Manhattan having been the unlucky ones.

AUTHOR STIRS METUCHEN.

Townspeople Think They Recognize Characters in Mrs. Freeman's Book.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., March 7.—The best society of the Borough of Metuchen, near here, believes that Mrs. Mary Wilkins-Freeman, the author, has portrayed in her latest novel, "The Debtor," some well-known persons of the borough. The scenes of the book, they are sure, are laid in New Jersey, and Metuchen people think Mrs. Freeman intended to describe places in and about the little borough.

One of the principal characters in "The Debtor" is a good natured and cultivated "dead beat," and the guesses at his identity have not increased Mrs. Freeman's popularity with some of the townspeople.

BRIDGE TRAFFIC BLOCKED.

Twenty-Minute Tie-Up Follows Trolley Accident—Steel Pillar Bent.

Half a dozen passengers, among them two women, escaped with a shaking up at 9:30 o'clock last night when Trolley Car No. 2,763 of the Bergen Street line smashed into the inner structure of the Brooklyn Bridge. The car lay across the tracks about 100 feet from the Manhattan terminal and blocked the entire roadway so that all traffic was suspended for twenty minutes. Finally the car was "jacked up" and placed on the tracks again.

One of the iron columns was bent by the force of the blow, and several pieces of iron rods which act as braces for the structure were broken. The hood of the car and part of its platform were damaged.

SWEARS OFF BEING MARQUIS.

Italian Takes Out First Papers—His Lawyer Has Been a Marquis.

Cruici V. Poscia, who said that in Italy he was the Marquis di Iriosa, applied to United States Commissioner Shields yesterday for his first citizenship papers and renounced allegiance to the rulers of Italy. With him was his lawyer, Achille J. Oishei, who reminded Clerk Donovan that he had been the Marquis de Souvia when he applied for his own papers years ago. Clerk Donovan looked up his records and found it so.

The two ex-Marquises to become Americans had to give up claims to their ancestral titles. The lawyer said that he'd rather be an American citizen than any sort of Marquis.

MORE MIDSHIPMEN QUIT.

Three Resign Following Hazing Agitation and Dismissals.

ANNAPOLIS, March 7.—Midshipmen B. McDaniel and William Wallace Searcy, both of Texas, and L. W. T. Wamer, Jr., the latter of whom was appointed by the President, have sent in their resignations.

The resignations are due to the agitation among the midshipmen following the dismissals and resignations of other midshipmen in connection with the recent hazing investigation. The Academy is feeling the embarrassment of the numerous vacancies, as there is a shortage of officers in the navy, and the midshipmen have been rushed in their studies to meet this demand.

KNIFE FOR SCHMITTBERGER.

A Cataract Successfully Removed from the Inspector's Right Eye.

Police Inspector Max Schmittberger had a cataract removed from his right eye on Saturday at the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, 218 Second Avenue. Though still in the hospital, it is expected that he will be able to go home in a few days. The operation was successful.

The Inspector went to the Eye and Ear Infirmary a week ago yesterday. Dr. Peter A. Callan of 35 West Thirty-eighth Street performed the operation. Dr. Frederick Shine, house surgeon, said last night: "Inspector Schmittberger is improving."

John R. McLean Explains Editorial on Franking Abuses.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—John R. McLean, owner of The Washington Post, appeared as a witness before the House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads to-day concerning an editorial which appeared in his paper on violations of the franking privilege by members of Congress, in which it was said that even live stock was sent through the mails.

Mr. McLean said the editorial was not written in a serious vein and not intended to be taken seriously.

PATTISON NOT TO RESIGN.

Governor of Ohio is Gradually Regaining His Health.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 7.—Reports were again circulated to-day that Gov. Pattison had decided to resign because of continued ill-health. Secretary Houck stated that there was absolutely no truth in the report.

"The Governor is gradually recovering," he said, "and has not the slightest intention of resigning."

Bill for Annual Accounting.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 7.—The Kentucky House of Representatives today unanimously passed a bill providing for an annual accounting and distribution by all life insurance companies doing business in Kentucky. The accounting shall be made on or before the third anniversary of the policy and apportionment and distribution annually after that time during the life of the policy.

FIASCO ON MOROCCO; ANGER IN GERMANY

Kaiser to Sacrifice Radowitz—Bulow's Resignation Talked of.

BACKDOWN FORCED BY RUSSIA

Her Open Move in Support of France Called Ingratitude—Relief in Commercial Circles.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 7.—Intense indignation and mortification are manifested here at Russia's action in throwing off her attitude of reserve and standing squarely by the side of her ally with the proposition that the control of the force for policing Morocco shall be intrusted to France and Spain jointly. This with Great Britain's intention, made unmistakable from the first, of throwing in her lot with France should the quarrel be forced to the arbitrament of arms, has compelled general recognition of the fact that the game is up, that no more concessions can be obtained, and that Germany must now show her hand and back down.

At least some such reserve as that shown by the United States was expected from Russia after the support given to her by Germany during her disastrous war with Japan. Ingratitude is talked of, and this, it is bitterly commented, is what the Kaiser gets for allowing Germans to be ill-treated on the Russian frontier and for Germany's kow-towing generally.

Much sympathy is expressed that the brilliant career of von Radowitz, who is one of Germany's best diplomats, should be spoiled by this Morocco fiasco. Some profess to believe that Russia's opposition is as much against Radowitz as against Germany. It was through Russian influence that he was removed as Minister at Constantinople.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

BERLIN, March 7.—The experience of eight weeks at Algeciras appears to have convinced the German Government that the moment has arrived for taking in sail, since the conference has determined that if it is to continue its deliberations it will discuss the bank question and police question pari passu.

The directors of German foreign policy seem to have arrived at the conclusion that no more concessions are to be obtained unless the German delegates practically acquiesce in the French scheme of organization of the police.

In the business world the reports to this effect were received to-day with great relief, and a far more hopeful spirit prevailed in commercial circles.

It is noteworthy that the improved prospect of a settlement at Algeciras was accompanied by rumors of the impending resignation of Count von Bülow. These reports, it need hardly be added, have no foundation, since the Emperor has been too closely identified with the policy adopted on the recommendation of his various advisers to make the Imperial Chancellor personally responsible for what some regard as a fiasco.

BERLIN, March 7.—Private conversations between the German and French envoys at Algeciras have brought them almost to an agreement on the Moroccan police controversy, so near, indeed, that the Foreign Office here regards a satisfactory issue of the conference as assured.

Germany, it is understood, accepts France and Spain as having the officers best fitted for policing Morocco, and France accepts international control in principle, undertaking to supply adequate guarantees that the police shall not be national in character. It is the specific form of these guarantees that remains unsettled and continues to be the subject for discussion.

It is likely that an international Inspectorship will be created, consisting of a single officer of repute from a power other than France, Spain, or Germany. One detail which continues to be discussed is the propriety of the Inspector being located in a neutralized harbor. The Ministers of the powers will also exercise general observation over the police.

PARIS, March 7.—Premier Rouvier, after the resignation of the Cabinet as a result of the adverse vote on the Church inventories question to-day, was anxiously questioned as to the situation over Morocco. He said:

"Regarding Algericas, I hope to leave my successor a better situation than that which I found."

It is generally believed that M. Rouvier, until his successor is appointed, will continue to carry on the same policy he has hitherto adopted, which has received the approval of the Chamber of Deputies on several occasions. The instructions already given to M. Revoil remain valid, as it is thought internal politics should not be permitted to interfere with France's foreign policy, and M. Rouvier desires to leave the future Foreign Minister entire liberty of action should complications arise at Algeciras.

Prior to the Cabinet crisis the Franco-German controversy over Moroccan control seemed to be in the balance with the inclination strongly toward an agreement. All depended upon Berlin's last word. If this was a frank concession of a Franco-Spanish police without impossible conditions, then agreement was assured; but if the concession involved further conditions France, whose pride was already much aroused, was prepared to reject it. The Foreign Office to-day stated the situation as follows:

"The reported German concession has not been communicated to us, and we are therefore unable definitely to state what action may be taken thereon. One thing, however, can be stated with absolute positiveness, namely: If the German concession on the police question is conditioned upon international supervision it will not be accepted."

In the Chamber of Deputies to-day Marine Minister Thomson in supporting the naval budget compared the French and German navies, saying:

"Although the composition of our squadrons is not perfect our armament is superior to Germany's. We have 190 heavy, 296 medium, and 780 small naval guns more than Germany. Two new battleships will be ready next year and four a year after, as well as a number of cruisers, torpedo boats, and submarine boats. The new German battleships will be of 18,000 tons and the new German cruisers of 15,000 tons. This is the situation with which we are obliged to keep pace."

ALGECIRAS, March 7.—A pamphlet containing the French police project was distributed late this evening among the delegates to the conference on Moroccan reforms. The proposition which will be presented to the conference to-morrow consists of five paragraphs, the substance of which is as follows:

The Moroccan police to be constituted for three years, composed of Moorish Mussulmans commanded by sixteen French and Spanish officers and thirty-two non-commissioned officers. The force to consist of 2,000 to 2,500 men, distributed among the eight ports in bodies of from 200 to 500. The State bank to advance funds for the administration and for the payment of the force.

No mention is made of international supervision, and the project therefore is practically the same as was outlined in M. Revoil's declaration on Monday.

Should the conference proceed to a vote on the rival schemes it is understood the American delegates will abstain, not even offering an opinion. This would leave the delegates in the position to continue their efforts to bring about an understanding.

Most of the delegates are cognizant of America's attitude, and some, including the French and British delegates, approve her abstention, considering that any open expression of partisanship would destroy her influence as a mediator. Others are inclined to the belief that America's taking sides would influence a successful issue of the conference.

WAR RISKS IN LONDON.

Premium Drops from Ten Guineas to Eight Guineas Per Cent.

LONDON, March 8.—The insurance correspondent of The Times writes:

"The importance of speculative insurances to cover losses which may arise as a result of the war can easily be exaggerated, and it is not usually desirable to take much notice of them, but the protracted conference at Algeciras has given rise to business on so large a scale that it cannot well be ignored.

"Yesterday the premium paid to insure the risk of war between France and Germany within six months was ten guineas per cent. To-day it dropped to eight guineas. Ten guineas per cent. is the highest rate paid on any substantial amount, and represents rather the reluctance of a small market to commit itself deeply to this kind of business than the result of the actual balance of probabilities in the minds of underwriters."

GEN. PORTER ON DIPLOMACY.

Says We Ought to Buy Houses for Our Legations—Eulogizes Roosevelt.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, March 7.—Gen. Horace Porter, ex-Ambassador to France, addressed a large audience at Princeton University to-night on "Diplomacy."

"Diplomacy," said Gen. Porter, "is not the science of representing the broadest falsehood with the straightest face, nor should the word carry with it a demeaning idea of craftiness, as many of our dictionaries define it. Such may formerly have been the case when Ambassadors were sent to foreign countries to act as spies, but now the profession has risen to a much higher plane." The lecturer spoke earnestly in regard to the housing of American legations, saying:

"It is a shame that the United States does not own quarters for its representatives in foreign capitals. It is a source of humiliation to the Ambassadors, and results in a delay of six or eight weeks after they arrive at their accredited posts before they can take up their duties. When the cabmen of Paris are asked where the American Legation is they laughingly reply that it is on wheels.

"The purchase of such property in the great capitals would be a paying investment, as real estate is on a steady rise in value. The British Legation in Paris was purchased originally for about $[illegible]000, and now it is worth over $3,000,000. I am glad to say that there is a prospect of appropriate action being taken, as the President and many high officials are interested in the subject."

In conclusion Gen. Porter referred to President Roosevelt as the greatest diplomatist of modern times.

DON'T WANT NEW BOARD IN THE NEW YORK LIFE

Some of the Policy Holders Meet at President Orr's Club.

A MUTUAL TASK FOR CHOATE

He Will Aid the Truesdale Committee of That Company, and May Direct the McCurdy Suits.

Some of the policy holders in the New York Life Insurance Company, men prominent in Brooklyn, met at the Hamilton Club in that borough last night to protest against some of the recommendations of the Armstrong committee to the Legislature. Alexander E. Orr, President of the New York Life, is one of the influential members of the Hamilton Club. The Rev. Arthur B. Kinsolving, a member of the committee appointed last night to carry the protests to the Legislature, is rector of Christ Church, in which Mr. Orr is a communicant.

The proposed law requiring the removal of all present Trustees and the election of an entirely new board is the one to which the policy holders expressed themselves as most opposed. They adopted a resolution declaring against it.

It was further resolved that such a law will make it possible for scheming and unscrupulous men to obtain important influence, if not an actual control, in the affairs of the company.

Henry Saunders Snow, Treasurer of the New York & New Jersey Telephone Company, was elected permanent Chairman of the policy holders' committee. Those who will serve with him are Clinton L. Rossiter, ex-President of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit; Simeon B. Chittenden, William H. Griffin, William H. Cary, the Rev. James T. Russell, Alexander M. White, Jr., Dr. William F. Dudley, Abner S. Haight, the Rev. Lindsay Parker, William B. Hurd, Jr., Virgil S. Parker, and the Rev. Arthur B. Kinsolving.

All policy holders who agree with the resolutions adopted at the meeting and who desire that measures be taken to persuade the Legislature from incorporating in the insurance law all the recommendations of the Armstrong Committee will be asked to aid the movement. They are urged to send their names to Arthur E. Goddard, 63 Wall Street. All who so wish, it is announced, may send contributions, too. The committee was empowered to employ counsel and take whatever other steps may be necessary to make a strong protest. R. Burnham Moffat, of Rand, Moffat & Webb, was chosen counsel.

Joseph H. Choate yesterday accepted the retainer offered him by the Truesdale Investigating Committee of Mutual Life Trustees, and will become the counsel for the committee. The announcement was made after Mr. Choate conferred with William H. Truesdale and John W. Auchincloss, the remaining members of the committee.

Mr. Choate declined to discuss his appointment. Nor would Mr. Truesdale nor President Peabody of the Mutual. It is understood, however, that the work to which the attention of the committee's new counsel will be first directed is the proposed suits against the McCurdys and the members of the Raymond firm, formerly metropolitan agents of the company. The Mutual has until next Monday to file the complaint in these actions, which were begun three weeks ago by the service of a summons on the defendants.

Samuel Untermyer, who is expected to be counsel for the International Committee of Policy Holders of the New York and Mutual Life Insurance Companies, came back yesterday from a Boston trip on which he saw Thomas W. Lawson, who organized the Committee of Governors that is to be taken into the International Committee. It was learned that Mr. Lawson has absolutely withdrawn from all connection with the committee, and has turned over the proxies that he collected, although they will probably be rendered void by the action that the Legislature is expected to take in passing the bill proposed by the Armstrong Committee canceling all proxies and postponing pending elections until Nov. 15.

The Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company held a meeting yesterday, to approve the final programme for the appearance of the officers of the company before the joint session of the Legislature to-morrow at which the insurance bills will be considered.

A joint committee of the American Association of Public Accountants and the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants are holding meetings at the office of A. L. Dickinson, Secretary of the American Association of Public Accountants, 52 William Street, at which the new bills in reference to insurance matters now at Albany are being discussed.

The committee also has under discussion the form of statement at present required by the State Department of Insurance and raises these objections to it: First, distinction between ledger assets and assets not admitted; second, distinction as to liabilities; third, varying dates for closing the books of the companies; fourth, the impossibility of making intelligible and business-like fiscal statements on the forms proposed.

MARCELLA SEMBRICH

NOTE—Mme. Sembrich was originally educated as a pianiste until the marvellous beauty of her voice was discovered.

PERSONS who have heard Mme. Sembrich in Rossini's "Barber of Seville" will not soon forget the music-lesson scene in which she sings several songs to her own piano accompaniment. It is interesting to learn that the piano which she plays with such exquisite effect is a Weber.

Concert brilliance is not, in itself, enough to commend a piano to the cultured musician. It must have besides brilliance, depth, volume, and a sympathetic, singing tone. It is the union of all these qualities in the Weber Piano that has caused it to be officially selected by the Conried Metropolitan Opera Company, and no other piano is to-day used by this great organization, either in New York or en tour.

Ide, President of the Home Life Insurance Company; A. A. Welch, Vice President and Actuary of the Phoenix Life Insurance Company of Hartford; W. C. Johnson, President of the New York State Life Underwriters' Association, and H. C. Moir, Actuary of the company of which the ex-Lieutenant Governor is the head, came to Albany to-day on behalf of the insurance interests of the State.

President Orr of the New York Life, President Morton of the Equitable, and President Peabody of the Mutual, with Actuaries Weekes of the New York Life, Van Cise of the Equitable, and McClintock of the Mutual, will arrive to-morrow. Every train between now and the time of the hearing on Friday morning will bring some of the great men in the insurance world.

The insurance men that came to-day had a long talk with Senator Armstrong and some of the insurance investigating committee, among them Senator Tully and Assemblyman Rogers. It was decided to begin about 11 o'clock and continue to perhaps 1:30, and begin again after luncheon and continue until 7 or 8 P. M. It is planned to have about seven or eight hours given over to the ten bills put in by the committee. It is declared that the committee desires to give everybody a full and adequate opportunity to present views.

ELEVATOR TRUST SUED.

Action Brought Against 31 Concerns for Violation of Anti-Trust Law.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—It was announced by the Department of Justice tonight that an anti-trust suit had been brought in San Francisco by the Government against thirty-one elevator concerns, including the Otis Elevator Company. The department issued a statement declaring that:

"The companies named as defendants comprise the principal elevator companies of the United States, but the operations specificially complained of have been carried on mainly in California and the States and Territories west of the Rocky Mountains.

"It is charged that these companies make and sell at least 80 per cent. of all of the elevators used in that territory, and that they have entered into a combination among themselves to control and enhance the prices at which elevators are sold.

"That in order to make the combination effective the Otis Elevator Company has acquired the whole or a majority interest in the businesses of all the other defendants, although said defendants are still being operated as apparently separate and independent concerns.

"The bill prays that the defendants be perpetually enjoined from carrying out their illegal combination and from further agreeing and combining together to control the trade and commerce in elevators and to deprive the people of the several States in the United States of the benefit in rates and prices derived from free and unrestrained competition in said business."

The Otis Elevator Company was incorporated under the laws of New Jersey Nov. 28, 1898, taking over the business of the Otis Brothers Company, New York; the Crane Elevator Company, Illinois; the National Company of Illinois, the Smith-Hill Elevator Company, and the Standard Elevator and Manufacturing Company of Illinois. It has outstanding $5,500,000 in preferred stock and $6,350,000 common stock.

Norton P. Otis is Chairman of the board; William D. Baldwin, President; A. G. Mills, Vice President; Lynde Belknap, Treasurer; Albert S. Bard, Secretary, and W. H. Baker, W. D. Baldwin, A. B. Chandler, C. G. Comstock, A. G. Mills, N. P. Otis, H. R. Read, and F. W. Roebling, Directors. Its offices are at 71 Broadway.

AMERICAN MYSTERY IN PARIS.

Body of Ethel A. Brown Found in the River Seine.

PARIS, March 7.—The Prefecture of Police has requested the American authorities to assist in unraveling the mysterious death of Ethel A. Brown, believed to be an American, whose body was found recently in the River Seine.

A boatman discovered the body floating near the suburb of Charenton. It appeared to be that of a woman of means and was elegantly dressed. The underclothes were embroidered with the name "Ethel A. Brown." The woman wore two gold rings and pearl earrings, a gold lorgenette was suspended from a chain around her neck and she had kid gloves on her hands. No money and no papers were found on her body and there was a deep wound five inches long across the scalp. The police are unable to decide whether the wound was the result of an accident or of an intentional blow.

The first clue to the identify of the woman was the following entry made in 1903 on the police records of foreigners visiting Paris:

Ettie Brown, American, born at Fayetteville, Nov. 21, 1872; father, John; mother, Sally Geachy.

The entry indicates that the maiden name of the deceased was Ethel Geachy. The name of the State from which she came was not given.

The French and American officials are co-operating with the police in the endeavors to establish the identity of the woman.

Special to The New York Times.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., March 7.—No person named Ethel A. Brown is known here. There are Brown and McGeachy families, but no well-to-do woman of the name given in the dispatch from Paris as that of the victim found in the Seine hails from this place.

There is, however, a strange coincidence in this matter. Miss Etta Brown, a member of the Faculty of the Women's Presbyterian College at Red Springs, whose uncle was a McGeachy, made a tour of France a year or more ago, and resided for some time in Paris. It is suggested that possibly a visiting card or letter may have come into the possession of the drowned woman, accounting for the confusion of names.

WIFE BLAMES HYPNOTISM.

Says Husband's Devotion to It Caused Domestic Troubles.

When the trial of Harry S. Applegate's suit for a separation from his wife, Mrs. Christina Hall Applegate, was called before Justice Leventritt, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, the defendant denied all her husband's charges of ill-treatment and misconduct. She declared that the trouble between them was the result of her husband's belief that he was a hypnotist and his desire to practice hypnotism on her.

Applegate complained of certain privileges he said were allowed a "star boarder" in his mother's house at Lakewood, N. J.

In dismissing the complaint Justice Leventritt said that it appeared to him that Applegate's grievances were largely imaginary, and that he had exaggerated what might have been slight indiscretions on the part of his wife. Mrs. Applegate said she would not live with her husband again unless he apologized.

HAMILTON CONSULTED JEROME BEFORE SAILING

Was Told, It Is Said, He'd Have To Take His Chances.

HE'S NOT TALKING JUST YET

The "Judge" May Tell How the Money of Others Than the New York Life Was Used.

Andrew Hamilton, the legislative generalissimo of the New York Life Insurance Company, who returned here from Paris on Tuesday, communicated with District Attorney Jerome before he sailed, according to a report that got around yesterday.

Mr. Jerome declined to discuss the matter, but it is understood that "Judge" Hamilton asked him what his attitude would be if the "Judge" came back. Mr. Jerome, it is also understood, replied if Mr. Hamilton returned he would have to take his chances with the other men involved in the insurance disclosures, although he would not be picked out to be made an example of.

In view of this, the belief that Hamilton had actually returned to establish fully the identity of the New York Life Trustees who knew about the funds used in the Legislature work of that company strengthened rather than diminished. It was said also that "Judge" Hamilton could throw light upon the use of the money of other companies than the New York Life if he chose to tell all he knew.

The "Judge's" return was an absorbing topic among insurance men here yesterday.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 7.—Andrew Hamilton, walking slowly and with a cane, was about town to-day. He went to his office, almost as though he had been doing so for the last six months. He had not been about the streets long before it was announced that the Armstrong Committee would not summon him, the Chairman having held that its function as an inquisitorial body ceased with the ending of the year, that its work was now purely that of a committee seeking to perfect and pass legislation and that Hamilton couldn't help do that.

"Well, Neilie, there isn't anything new, is there?" was Hamilton's greeting to Neile F. Tower, his law partner. For answer a dozen of Hamilton's friends who gathered in his office jumped from their chairs to greet him.

"How do you feel?" they chorused.

"Pretty good for an old man," was Hamilton's reply.

After going to his private office and holding a few minutes' conference with some friends Hamilton returned to the public office. He said to Mr. Towner:

"I shall not be down again to-day, Neilie."

To one of his friends he said:

"I see that the newspapers devoted a couple of columns to me this morning. I am afraid that if this keeps on Roosevelt will become jealous of me."

To a reporter he said:

"I haven't anything to say for publication just yet, beyond what I have already said. There's nothing to give out."

Then he left the building. He returned soon to his home, at Thurlow Terrace. While downtown he called at the Albany Club.

TRANSFER SUITS PILING UP.

Railway Lawyer Says Their Multiplicity Is Ruinous to the Road.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 7.—The New York City Railroad Company pleaded to-day through its attorney, Henry A. Robinson, at the hearing on the Shanahan bill providing for cumulative damages, for failure to issue transfers, that the enactment of the measure would be ruinous. He said the company was already suffering heavily from the penalties imposed for failure to issue transfers.

Assemblyman Shanahan said his bill merely sought to carry out the intent of the present statute which the Court of Appeals had ruled was not specific enough. If the bill is passed, he said, the railroad companies will find that it will be cheaper for them to issue transfers than to violate the law and pay cumulative penalties.

The argument of Attorney Robinson was included in this statement:

"A man gets up forward in a crowded car and, although the conductor has not gone near him, says he has been refused a transfer. Then he gets off the car and makes a complaint and we are absolutely helpless to combat him. This penalty industry is getting larger than ever, and we are becoming a laughing stock. A Connecticut Judge came into town the other day and thought he would test the transfer law. He brought suit and recovered $200, a pretty nice sum for a short trip. Then a minister from Massachusetts tried it and he got one penalty, and there may be more to follow. We have already established seventy-three new transfer stations since so many suits have been brought."

Julius Henry Cohen spoke at length for the bill on behalf of the Citizens' Union.

FIGHT ON CORDAGE TRUST.

Minnesota's Plant Threatened, Governor Will Urge Striking Back.

ST. PAUL, March 7.—Gov. Johnson announced to-day that he will recommend to the next Legislature the waging of an aggressive fight against the so-called Cordage Trust.

The twine plant at the State prison, which supplies 13,000,000 pounds of twine to Minnesota farmers yearly practically at cost, is alleged to be threatened with extinction by the trust, which is building a plant at St. Paul to manufacture flax twine by a new process and at as low a price as the prison twine.

The law does not permit the sale of any of the prison twine outside the State. Gov. Johnson will recommend that the law be so changed as to permit the prison authorities to sell prison-made twine outside the State. The capacity of the prison plant is being extended.

Exonerates Insane Hospital.

No further investigation of the story of ill-treatment by an attendant at the State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains, N. J., of ex-Mayor Jacob H. Beatty of Hackettstown, who died in the institution a few days ago, will be made by the Board of Managers. John C. Eisele, the board's President, says that he is satisfied that if Mr. Beatty had several broken ribs he received his injuries previous to his arrival at the hospital.

STRICKEN BLIND IN PARK.

And a Few Minutes Later Died in the Hospital.

While Policeman Bishop was on post in City Hall Park yesterday morning, he noticed a man lurching along with his hands outspread before him, with all the apparent symptoms of drunkenness. Presently the man stumbled and fell.

Bishop helped him to his feet, and was wondering if he should take him to the station, when the man ran his hands over the brass buttons and said:

"You're a policeman? Just the man I was looking for. My light's gone out, friend."

Bishop looked into the man's eyes and noticing the blank stare in them decided that the man was blind. He called an ambulance. While waiting for it, the man said he was John Helfrich of 573 Washington Avenue, Brooklyn.

"I have a notion store where I live in Brooklyn," he said. "I left an hour ago to do some business over here. When I got on the car I felt a little dizzy and sick. Coming over the bridge I felt worse, and finally when I got off at the Manhattan end things were swimming about so much that I had a hard job to steer over to the park and sit down.

"It never occurred to me at first that anything was seriously the matter until I noticed that, while I didn't feel so very, very sick, I could hardly see across Park Row. I fixed my eyes on the City Hall, and, although I felt no worse, I noticed that the lines of the building were getting thinner and fainter. Finally I could see nothing at all. I put my hand up before my face and couldn't see that.

"Then I knew what was wrong. As I had been looking straight at the City Hall I determined to walk straight in that direction and explain my plight to somebody. I stumbled over something, then somebody picked me up, and I knew by the buttons that it was a policeman."

When the ambulance surgeon came from the Hudson Street Hospital, he put Helfrich in the ambulance and started back in a hurry, believing that the man was a rare case of blindness resulting from a complication of kidney diseases. There was some excitement in the hospital when the patient was brought in, as the case was considered remarkable.

Helfrich was very carefully examined and questioned. He declared that he had no kidney trouble, but that his father had died of apoplexy. While he was speaking his utterance grew a little thick and he complained of a heaviness of the tongue. The doctors then decided that Helfrick was suffering from a stroke and hemorrhage of the brain which presently would spread the paralysis from his eyes to every other part of his body.

This came about as expected. First Helfrick's tongue became affected, then his arms and legs. He was conscious for hours; in fact his brain was the last thing to become paralyzed. At 1:40 o'clock in the afternoon he died.

The Superintendent of the hospital said afterward that it was a very remarkable case, but that it would have been more remarkable had the blindness been due to kidney trouble.

GAVE UP, CALLED COWARDS.

Japanese Transport Officers Neglected to Commit Suicide.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 7.—The steamer Kanagwa, from Japan, to-day furnished news that Lieut. Commander Mizoguchi and other officers of the transport Kinshiu, sunk by the Russian Vladivostok squadron at the beginning of the war, are undergoing trial by court martial for alleged cowardice in surrendering.

On the occasion of the disaster the War Department at Tokio issued a bulletin that none of the soldiers on board was taken prisoners; that with the exception of the survivors who returned, all had been killed or had committed suicide. Extended accounts were given in Japanese newspapers of how Lieut. Commander Mizoguchi and other officers committed Lara-kiri, but with the return of these officers among the prisoners from Russia Japanese newspapers say they regret their sympathy.

Lieut. Commander Mizoguchi said he and other officers went on board the Russian vessels, when called to surrender, but, the seamen refused to surrender, many committing suicide on the deck after firing with rifles at the enemy, who torpedoed and sunk the transport.

The prisoners included the crews of the sailing schooners Hokusei and Koie, which were seized by Russian cruisers. Among them was an American named Thompson.

HOLDS REGISTRY CLERK.

E. J. Slattery, in Default of Good Behavior Bonds, Goes to Jail.

Edward J. Slattery of 211 East Fifty-seventh Street was committed to jail yesterday by Magistrate Crane in the Morrisania Court in default of $500 bail to insure his good behavior for three months. Slattery was arrested last Tuesday in a crowd that rushed into Miss Margaret Cahill's home, at 1,401 Webster Avenue, in response to her screams after she had been attacked by an unknown man with a knife blade attached to a long stick. He was accused of impersonating a policeman.

Slattery pleaded with Magistrate Crane and said the sentence would ruin him. He is a clerk in the Register's office.

"You ought to be sent to State prison," said the court, "and you're lucky to get off with what I've given you." Miss Cahill identified Slattery as the man who insisted upon examining her wound and calling up Police Headquarters for the reserves.

BURLINGTON, N. J., March 7.—Losing control of their big automobile, while speeding along the stone road between this place and Columbus to-day, Rodney Pellers of New York City and George Reach of Philadelphia were thrown into a ditch as the car plunged over a steep embankment along the roadside.

Pellers sustained serious injuries. His left leg was broken and he received a deep gash on the forehead. Internal injuries are also feared. Reach was not hurt.

Pellers is an agent for a New York automobile concern and was accompanying Reach, who had purchased the automobile, to Philadelphia.

WILL ASK LEGISLATURE TO INVESTIGATE S. P. C. A.

Reform Association Plans Carnegie Hall Mass Meeting.

HAINES MERELY AN INCIDENT

Persian Tells How the Shah Punished a Man Who Abused a Donkey—Haines Must Go, Says Turnure.

The S. P. C. A. Reform Association met last night at the Waldorf-Astoria and decided to hold a mass meeting in Carnegie Hall to urge a legislative inquiry into the affairs of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, of which John P. Haines is President.

It was made plain at the meeting that the members of the S. P. C. A. Reform Association, which is composed of persons outside the society, are planning their reforms on a broader basis than the insurgent members of the society itself, who have been working many months for its reorganization.

While the latter have made the resignation of President Haines their chief contention, the outside reformers regard this as merely an incident and will insist that the society's affairs be thoroughly investigated by a committee of the Legislature, that any past wrongdoing such an investigation may disclose be punished, and that all humane societies in the State be placed under closer State supervision than has hitherto been the case.

"The so-called outside reformers are working for the cause of humanitarianism in this State, while the inside reformers are working for the reform of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals alone," was the way one of the members of the Reform Association put it last night.

Arthur Turnure, who has taken a leading part in the organization of the association, called the meeting to order and introduced Jared F. Harrison, a lawyer, as Chairman. Mr. Turnure paid his respects to Mr. Haines in these words:

"On the one objective all persons who are disheartened by the fearful sufferings of our animals are agreed, viz.: the head and front of the offending is John P. Haines. He must cease to be President of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

"There is some difference of opinion whether after he ceases to be President he should be pursued by legal inquiry or whether he should be allowed to resign and slip out of sight.

"With full power to keep proper books of accounts, he has not kept them. He has steadily resisted investigation. He has been credited with a salary of $6,000 a year for seven years back, and has lived well without taking this salary as such and without known means of support.

"Moneys that the society receives are paid directly to him. His opportunity for graft is extraordinary, and he does not want to be investigated, though the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has had about $1,000,000 in ten years. This is the pecuniary side of the scandal. The other side is the inefficiency of the administration, the insolence of its employes, the cruel neglect of suffering animals, and the indubitable extravagance and wastefulness apparent everywhere in the operation of the society."

When Mr. Turnure finished speaking a swarthy gentleman of Oriental appearance arose in the first row of seats.

"I came from Persia," he said. "There we have a perfect autocracy. Yet in many ways we are more democratic than you. In many ways you are more autocratic than we. Such an extraordinary condition as a man elected by votes contriving by manipulating committees to hold a position in which he has made himself impossible against the protest of men and women of culture like you could not possibly arise in Persia. The Shah, if only to save his own popularity, would have such a man removed.

"Of course, the Anglo-Saxon world is a paradise for dumb animals compared to the Mohammedan world, which is a perfect inferno for them. And yet I am sure if you succeed in reforming this society my imperial master, the Shah, would be glad to give his high protection to a branch society in his own realm.

"I was walking with the Shah in the imperial gardens one day when a man came along driving a donkey that staggered under its load. My imperial master said to me: 'Go and prod that man with your sword.' I obeyed gladly. I prodded him good and hard, and when he complained the Shah ordered the donkey unloaded and the burden put on the shoulders of the owner.

"'It's a good thing you are not in Europe or America, or you would be cast into a dungeon for life for overworking your beast,' said the Shah sternly to the driver."

"He did not know much of conditions in New York," remarked a woman in the audience.

"Although we are bad in the Orient, we are not all barbarians," resumed the stranger. "We feel for dumb animals, too. I carried this so far as to become a vegetarian, but that was not until after I had visited the Chicago stockyards. I recommend you all to take a trip there."

"The gentleman has spoken well," said the Chairman. "May we now know to whom we have had the pleasure of listening?"

"I was formerly Secretary of the Persian Legation at Washington," said the stranger. "I am in this city for a visit, and am just considering whether to go back to Persia or stay here. I think, all considered, I'd rather be a plain citizen in New York than a functionary of the Shah's Court."

There was much applause. Later it was learned that the name of the stranger was Col. Mesrop Nevton.

Ex-Police Commissioner McAdoo wrote a letter in which he said he was heartily in accord with the reform movement, and expressed regret at his inability to attend the meeting.

"I never parted a veteran policeman from his horse," wrote Mr. McAdoo, "especially if they had been together so long as to be part of each other's life."

"Yes, and what is more," said a little woman in the audience, arising "Commissioner McAdoo never allowed a policeman who weighed more than 150 pounds to ride a horse, and he gave the Traffic Squad the best and finest horses possible and saw that they were well treated and taken care of. He set a great humanitarian example to this city."

The resolution calling for the mass meeting was then brought up. It provided for a committee of three to take charge of all the arrangements. It was determined to invite as speakers Cardinal Gibbons, Joseph H. Choate, Samuel L. Clemens, the Rev. Samuel Schulman, David H. Cochran, President of the Vivisection Reform Association, and W. O. Stillman, President of the National Humane Association.

"If Mr. Haines should have the decency to resign before this meeting can be held, will it still go on?" asked a young man.

"I should think so," said the Chairman. "We want all his accounts audited and the society investigated and new legislation passed and some old legislation repealed. The Haines resignation is merely an incident."

Just then somebody announced that he had read in an evening paper that Mr. Haines had sent in his resignation to take effect next October.

"Oh, I thought there was a string to it," said a woman in the audience. "In October, eh?"

There were some jeers at this. The meeting was attended by about 150 persons, most of whom were women.

KIDNAPPERS, IN FRIGHT, LET BANKER'S BOY GO

'Twas a Plot to Ruin His Business, Lad's Father Says.

POLICE MAKE TWO ARRESTS

Run On Italian Bank Stopped When Depositors Heard That Bozzuffi Wouldn't Pay $20,000 Ransom.

After three days and three nights in the hands of kidnappers, Antonio Bozzuffi, the 14-year-old son of John Bozzuffi, banker, of Sixty-third Street and First Avenue, obtained his freedom yesterday and returned home to tell his story. The boy bore a scar on his right cheek, made, he says, by the fingers of his three captors while struggling to gag him when he tried to scream for help.

The men, apparently becoming frightened, abandoned the boy in the rooms they had hired for the purpose of his capture at 318 East Fifty-ninth Street. Giuseppe Constando, 36 years old, of 330 East Sixty-third Street, and Antonio Giaimo, 30 years old, of 407 East Sixtieth Street, were arrested yesterday by detectives of the Italian Squad. The landlord of the house where Antonio was held captive identified Giaimo as the man who rented two rooms from him on the second floor a week ago, the rooms described by Antonio as the ones in which he was bound and gaged. Only a bed, a table, a broken chair, and an axe were found in the room. Bits of cloth with eyeholes cut so that they might have been used as masks were found on the floor.

Antonio could not recognize either of the men as having been in the party of kidnappers. The boy's tale is not doubted by police or by relatives of the banker. So exhausted was he from loss of sleep and from hunger and fear when he reached his home yesterday morning that he fell into a doze while telling his story.

He had been sent to a neighboring Post Office sub station on Sunday to buy $10 worth of stamps and was lured away when on his way back to the bank. He still had the stamps in his pocket when he reached home yesterday morning, the kidnappers having failed to search him.

Banker Bozzuffi, who has been handling the savings of the Italians in his neighborhood for years, said that the kidnapping of his son was done with the deliberate purpose of driving him from his place of business because of his success and the failure of his rivals. When the news got out that the kidnappers demanded $20,000 ransom the depositors became frightened, and a run on Bozzuffi's bank followed. Over $7,000 of savings were drawn out Monday and Tuesday, and on Tuesday night Bozzuffi had only $10 in cash.

He addressed the late comers Tuesday night, and told them that in the morning he would get plenty of money from other banks where his credit was good and every dollar would be paid. He pointed out the houses in the neighborhood in which he had invested the deposits of his clients and told them their values. Then he got a letter, the third and last, telling him that if he wanted to settle he could put on his window a sign reading "Seven Men Wanted" if he was ready to settle on March 7 and "Eight Men Wanted" if not ready until the 8th, and so on. He put on his window this legend early yesterday morning:

> The Money I Hold Belongs to My Depositors, and They Will Get Their Money If I Never See My Son Alive Again.

The banker hurried to other banks, got the money he would need during the day, and welcomed every depositor at the opening hour. Then the run slackened. Said Mr. Bozzuffi yesterday:

"For me to have given the $20,000 would not have meant my ruin necessarily, and would have meant the restoration of my boy, but this would have been the result: There would not have been an Italian of character and good promise in business in this quarter who would not have had to pay tribute to these black hand workers or those unscrupulous enough to hire kidnappers to ruin the business of another that they might get it.

"Several attempts of this sort have been made in my neighborhood. The grocer adjoining me came to me a year ago with threatening letters in red ink telling him he would have to leave as he was getting all the business. A successful barber near by had his place dynamited. These merchants were frightened nearly to death, but I advised them to stick it out if they died for it for the sake of the rest of the honest Italians. They did so, and I did so, and would have done so regardless of any cost."

Bozzuffi's home in East Sixty-first Street was crowded all day yesterday with Italians who came to congratulate him on his successful opposition to the kidnappers.

Antonio told his story of the capture, of his attempts to cry for help, his frequent gagging, and of his fear of death when he was compelled at the point of a pistol to write to his father advising the payment of the ransom. His mother, with a baby on each arm, hovered about with delight in her black eyes at the return of her first born.

"I was on my way home with the stamps," the boy said, "when a short, heavy-built Italian approached me. He said that my father told him I would interpret for him. He wanted to collect five days' pay from a contractor who did not understand Italian. I went with him to the Fifty-ninth Street house. As we entered the rooms in the back of the second story I noticed a man sitting on a tub near the door. The man who led me to the place did not come in then. But another man I had not at first noticed joined the man near the door.

"They talked for awhile and then both turned on me. They had put cloth masks over their faces and one of them drew a knife. The other had a pistol. They told me that if I made any noise they would kill me. I gave one scream and the men jumped on me, stuffing a bit of cloth in my mouth and tying my face with a towel. They also tied my knees and ankles. They took me into a dark little room and threw me on the bed.

"Two of the men were with me always. They fed me dry bread and a little salami. They tried to make me drink wine and beer and smoke, but I would not. Finally two of the men removed their masks, but the third never did.

"On Monday they made me write a letter to my father, dictating it to me. I wrote it, for I thought they would kill me. Yesterday morning I was parched with thirst and almost starved. I awoke from a doze and called to the men. Getting no answer, I opened the door and saw that no one was in the other room. I tried the door to the hall and found it open. Then I dashed into the street and at the top of my speed ran to my uncle's, on Sixty-first Street."

It is believed in the uptown Italian quarter that Buzzoffi has established peace and honest rivalry in business for years to come by his firm stand against the kidnappers.

Giaimo was taken to headquarters to be examined by Detective Sergeant Petrosino. He got the idea, when he was seated under an arc light to have his picture taken for the Rogues' Gallery, that he was in the electric chair. He bounded to his feet and then flopped to the floor, calling on the saints for succor. He was calmed with great difficulty.

Petrosino told Magistrate Cornell in Yorkville Court that both men came from Borgetta, Italy, from which place the gang of thirteen in the "barrel" murder mystery came. Detective Digilio said that in East Sixty-third Street, near First Avenue, there was a gang of these men from the same place, all of them under police surveillance.

DURYEA SUIT ENDS SUDDENLY.

Miss Madden Decides Not to Carry Breach of Promise Case Further.

Miss Sara Madden, the actress whose suit against Peter Duryea, a Kentucky horse breeder, to recover $50,000 for alleged breach of promise of marriage, was begun before Justice Giegerich in the Supreme Court on Tuesday, failed to appear when the case was called again yesterday morning. After some argument and the withdrawal of the plaintiff's lawyers, Coffin & Cuvillier, from the case, Justice Giegerich dismissed the complaint and assessed the costs to Miss Madden.

Counsel for the plaintiff announced that they withdrew because they had received information bearing on the case which had they possessed at the outset would have deterred them from prosecuting the complaint. Furthermore, they said the law firm of Parker, Sheehan & Hatch had given them certain other information which strengthened their determination to withdraw. Mr. Cuvillier added:

"I am convinced that Miss Madden will not go on with the case. If we got a judgment it is doubtful if we could collect it, and the plaintiff refuses to have her name further joined with this defendant in any way."

Nathaniel Cohen of Howe & Hummel, who represented Duryea, objected to the case going by default. He said his client was worth at least $250,000. Lawyer Cohen requested Justice Giegerich to issue a subpoena for Miss Madden.

The request was refused, and the lawyer then asked that an entry be made on the minutes that would protect his client for all time. Counsel for the plaintiff agreed. Miss Madden's name was then called three times by a court officer, but there was no response.

"The complaint is dismissed with costs," announced the court.

The plaintiff's lawyers refused to discuss the reasons which had impelled Miss Madden to let the case go by default.

BRADY WITNESS RELENTS.

Lawrence Gives Woman's Name, and Is Clear of Contempt.

Edward Lawrence, the witness in Mrs. Sadie Singer Brady's divorce suit, who was committed for contempt of court on Tuesday by Justice Blanchard for refusing to answer questions, purged himself of contempt yesterday by answering the questions. He said on Tuesday that he had told a woman something he knew concerning the alleged intimacy between Daniel M. Brady and Miss Gertrude MacKenzie, an actress, who is the co-respondent. He declined to reveal the name of the woman with whom he had discussed the matter.

Lawrence said yesterday that he had been absolved from his promise of secrecy. The woman, he said, was a Mrs. Jones, who lived in West Ninety-eighth Street. She was Mrs. Brady's cousin. The further testimony heard yesterday was practically the same as that adduced at the two previous trials of the case. The jury disagreed in each instance. The case will be continued to-day.

Lane $180 for the picture of a peasant woman by Sorin, the artist who painted the Maxim Gorky picture, while Henry Rosenberg paid $350 and $230 for "Crowd of Pilgrims."

GOT GOVERNMENT FUNDS BEFORE OTHER BANKS

The National City and the Hanover Managed to Do It.

RIVALS WANT TO KNOW HOW Intimation of Special Privileges at Washington—Just Business Forethought, It's Explained.

The National City Bank and the Hanover National Bank, it was learned yesterday, were the only two banks in this city who had received yesterday their allotment of the special deposit of $10,000,000 of Government funds which Secretary Shaw last week announced his intention to make.

This fact was the cause of considerable comment in banking circles yesterday, particularly among the banks which had deposited their bonds with the Sub-Treasury, as soon as they had received notices from Washington of their allotment of these special deposits, but which were still waiting for their money yesterday. In the case of one prominent National bank a preliminary arrangement which had been made to advance certain moneys to customers of the bank in the expectation of receiving this special Government deposit, could not be completed yesterday.

Reference was made by some of these banks to similar occurrences in which the National City Ban.. had seemingly profited by some special opportunity to complete transactions with the Government in advance of other National banks. While the banks concerned avoided any direct suggestion that the National City Bank was being especially favored, it was plain from the comment heard in banking circles yesterday that the present incident was regarded as merely another cident was regarded as another indication of the possession of special advantages by the National City Bank, which has enabled it on more than one occasion to score a point over other National banks.

The incident of which other banks were complaining yesterday was freely explained at the National City Bank. A representative of the bank said that it had deposited its bonds with the Sub-Treasury on Monday. The allotments of the $10,000,000 among the banks of the country were made on that day by Secretary Shaw, and the National City Bank was enabled to act as promptly as it did owing to the fact that it had a special representative in Washington who informed the National City Bank officials here by long distance telephone the moment the allotments became known in Washington.

The Hanover National Bank appears to have profited by similar facilities. The other National banks did not receive the telegram from Washington notifying them of their allotments until Tuesday morning. In this way the National City Bank and the Hanover National Bank obtained these special Government deposits on Tuesday, while the other National banks will not get theirs until to-day. Of the $3,000,000, or thereabouts, allotted to New York City banks out of the total special deposits of $10,000,000, the National City Bank and the Hanover National Bank received about $800,000, which, it was understood yesterday, was evenly divided between the two banks.

The Sub-Treasury officials, when the criticism current in banking circles was brought to their attention, said that it was the first they had heard of any dissatisfaction on this point. No complaint had been lodged by any bank in regard to the failure to get the special deposit at the same time as the City Bank and the Hanover National got theirs.

The Sub-Treasury officials admitted that the National City Bank and one other bank, (the Hanover National,) deposited their bonds twenty-four hours ahead of any other bank. It was explained, however, that the notification of allotments was not handled by the New York Sub-Treasury officials at all. The decision as to the apportionment of the funds and the approval of the bonds offered as security rested solely, they said, with the Secretary of the Treasury himself.

The statement was made positively by a representative of the National City Bank that no special effort had been made by the bank to get ahead of the other institutions which were to receive a part of the special deposit of $10,000,000. All that had been done, it was said, had been done in the ordinary course of business.

Friends of the National City Bank maintain positively that the criticism which has been caused from time to time by the relations of the National City Bank with the Federal Government have resulted in special care on the part of the Treasury officials to avoid giving the National City Bank any advantage whatever over other institutions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Treasury officials said to-night that there was no discrimination whatever in making the $10,000,000 deposit in New York banks. The banks were all notified at the same time, but some of the banks called up the Treasury on the long-distance telephone and ascertained in that speedy manner just what it was necessary for them to do to secure the deposits at once. Others communicated with the Treasury by letter, and that made the difference.

A high official of the Treasury said to-night that it certainly was not the fault of the Treasury if one bank used the telephone and thereby got ahead of another bank which did not use that method of communication.

Eighteen Months for Insurance Fraud.

Isaac Kommel, a manufacturer of shirts at 540 Broadway, was sent to State prison for a year and six months by Justice McMahon in General Sessions yesterday. He pleaded guilty to an attempt to swindle the Peter Cooper Fire Insurance Company out of $1,600 by the presentation of a false claim. Kommel lost about $50 worth of goods through a fire last December that destroyed a laundry.

PRESIDENT CRITICISES CONGRESS ON INQUIRY

Message Calls Action on Coal and Oil Hasty and Inefficient.

ASKS MORE LAW AND MONEY

Fears Investigation Will Result in Immunity to Offenders—Has Signed Resolution for Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Both the Senate and the House were told by the President in a special message to-day that their action in passing the Tillman-Gillespie-Campbell resolution, directing the Inter-State Commerce Commission to investigate the subject of railroad discriminations and monopolies in coal and oil, was hasty, ill-considered, and ineffective.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had signed the resolution, but with a great deal of hesitation, because he was convinced it would accomplish very little, if anything, and asked for additional legislation. His message follows:

The President's Message.

The message follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I have signed the joint resolution "instructing the Inter-State Commerce Commission to make examinations into the subject of railroad discriminations and monopolies in coal and oil, and report on the same from time to time."

I have signed it with hesitation because in the form in which it was passed it achieves very little and may achieve nothing, and it is highly undesirable that a resolution of this kind shall become law in such form as to give the impression of insincerity—that is, of pretending to do something which really is not done. But after much hesitation I concluded to sign the resolution because its defects can be remedied by legislation, which I hereby ask for; and it must be understood that unless this subsequent legislation is granted, the present resolution must be mainly, and may be entirely, inoperative.

Before specifying what this legislation is I wish to call attention to one or two preliminary facts. In the first place a part of the investigation requested by the House of Representatives in the resolution adopted Feb. 15, 1905, relating to the oil industry, and a further part having to do with the anthracite coal industry, has been for some time under investigation by the Department of Commerce and Labor. These investigations, I am informed, are approaching completion, and before Congress adjourns I shall submit to you the preliminary reports of these investigations.

Until these reports are completed the Inter-State Commerce Commission could not endeavor to carry out so much of the resolution of Congress as refers to the ground thus already covered without running the risk of seeing the two investigations conflict, and therefore render each other more or less nugatory.

In the second place, I call your attention to the fact that if an investigation of the nature proposed in this joint resolution is thoroughly and effectively conducted, it will result in giving immunity from criminal prosecution to all persons who are called, sworn, and constrained by compulsory process of law to testify as witnesses; though, of course, such immunity from prosecution is not given to those from whom statements or information merely, in contradistinction to sworn testimony, is obtained. This is not at all to say that such investigations should not be undertaken. Publicity can by itself often accomplish extraordinary results for good, and the court of public judgment may secure such results where the courts of law are powerless.

There are many cases where an investigation securing complete publicity about abuses and giving Congress the material on which to proceed in the enactment of laws is more useful than a criminal prosecution can possibly be. But it should not be provided for by law without a clear understanding that it may be an alternative instead of an additional remedy—that is, that to carry on the investigation may serve as a bar to the successful prosecution of the offenses disclosed. The official body directed by Congress to make the investigation must, of course, carry out its direction, and therefore the direction should not be given without full appreciation of what it means.

But the direction contained in the joint resolution, which I have signed, will remain almost inoperative unless money is provided to carry out the investigations in question and unless the commission in carrying them out is authorized to administer oaths and compel the attendance of witnesses. As the resolution now is, the commission, which is very busy with its legitimate work and has no extra money at its disposal, would be able to make the investigation only in the most partial and unsatisfactory manner, and moreover it is questionable whether it could, under this resolution, administer oaths at all or compel the attendance of witnesses.

If this power were disputed by the parties investigated the investigation would be held up for a year or two until the courts passed upon it, in which case, during the period of waiting, the commission could only investigate to the extent and in the manner already provided under its organic law; so that the passage of the resolution would have achieved no good result whatever.

I accordingly recommend to Congress the serious consideration of just what they wish the commission to do, and how far they wish it to go, having in view the possible incompatibility of conducting an investigation like this and of also proceeding criminally in a court of law; and, furthermore, that a sufficient sum, say $50,000, be at once added to the current appropriation for the commission, so as to enable them to do the work indicated in a thorough and complete manner, while at the same time the power is explicitly conferred upon them to administer oaths and compel the attendance of witnesses in making the investigation in question, which covers work quite apart from their usual duties. It seems unwise to require an investigation by a commission and then not to furnish either the full legal power or the money, both of which are necessary to render the investigation effective.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The White House, March 7, 1906.

The Senators and Representatives listened to their scolding as it was delivered, and then went on with other business. Neither Senator Tillman nor Representative Gillespie, the authors of most of the resolutions, seemed much concerned by the President's uncomplimentary remarks, even by his hint of insincerity.

They called attention to the fact that in their judgment at least it is more important to find out how the law is being violated, and prevent further violation, than to punish any particular persons who have offended in the past. If the Inter-State Commerce Commission finds that the investigations of the Department of Commerce and Labor have covered the ground specified under their resolution, it will be at liberty to adopt the results of those investigations as its own, and that much time will have been saved.

If more money is needed no doubt Congress will grant it, and as for the authority to administer oaths and compel the attendance of witnesses, that, they both believe, the Inter-State Commerce Commission already has.

Lawson
on Insurance Graft

In Everybody's for March, Lawson tells how the recent Insurance investigation was "steered" by the "System," making McCall and McCurdy the scapegoats; checking only the petty abuses, and glossing over and protecting the greater grabs (millions of dollars), directly traceable to the "System" and its generals.

Read this and do what you can to protect your country against this terrible evil.

PROF. BURR NOT CONVERTED.

Despite President's Decision, He Believes in a Sea-Level Canal.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Prof. William H. Burr of Columbia University, New York, one of the board of consulting engineers who signed the majority report in favor of a sea-level canal at Panama, testified to-day before the Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

He declared that since the report was prepared his reflections convinced him more than ever that a sea-level canal was more feasible than a lock canal. The President has since come out in favor of a lock canal.

He was examined at length concerning the control of the Chagres River and declared that the problem presented was entirely feasible. He could see no reason why a sea-level canal should not be constructed in ten years.

He will testify again to-morrow, and it is understood he will attack the wisdom of constructing a lock canal.

It was made known to-day that a flat rate of 20 cents an hour will be paid hereafter to laborers on the Isthmus. Heretofore the rates have been 20 cents for any laborer and 26 cents for the better class. The design was to encourage laborers to strive by efficient work to reach the higher grade, but it was found to have led to many underhanded schemes to get the advanced wage.

FOR NATIONAL QUARANTINE.

House Committee Votes to Report a Substitute Bill.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—By a vote of 12 to 2 the House Committee on Inter-State and Foreign Commerce agreed to-day to make a favorable report on a committee substitute for the Williams bill to extend Federal control of quarantines. Representatives Bartlett of Georgia and Russell of Texas opposed the measure on the ground that it interferes with the rights of States.

The Secretary of the Treasury is placed in direct control of quarantine, and is to administer it through the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service. The bill carries an appropriation of $500,000.

FILIPINO LEADER KILLED.

Felizardo, a Noted Ladrone, Falls Before Two Constables.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The War Department has received a cablegram from the Governor General of the Philippine Islands, stating that a Ladrone killed by two members of the Philippine constabulary is Cornelius Felizardo, a noted rebel.

Thirty-two witnesses who knew Felizardo well, among them Mrs. Trias, the wife of the former Governor of the Province of Cavite, and Gov. Cailles of the Province of Laguna, have identified the body.

Felizardo figured prominently in the disorders last year in the Province of Cavite. His death is regarded as a severe blow to Ladronism in the islands.

TILLMAN HAS PROOF.

Could Tell of One Bank That Gave $17,000 to Campaign Fund.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Senator Tillman will be heard by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections on his resolution calling for an investigation of contributions by National banks to political parties in National elections.

Mr. Tillman intends to present to the committee a case based upon supposition, but he will declare that he has evidence that a bank gave $17,000 to a party and can produce witnesses to support the evidence, identical with the case based on supposition. He will adopt this plan because he does not desire to name the bank until it is decided what the course of the committee is to be.

BLOW TO STATEHOOD BILL.

Senator Spooner Changes Front and Opposes the President's Plan.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Senator Spooner, in the Senate to-day, threw the friends of the pending Statehood bill into consternation.

Heretofore the Wisconsin Senator has stood loyally by the Administration Senators in all the many Statehood battles, but to-day he came out in a strong and impassioned speech against the measure that has the support of the President and the House.

He announced that he could not vote to force Arizona into the Union against her will. He declared that neither New Mexico nor Arizona was fit in population or development to be admitted as States.

The speech caused a commotion. Senator Nelson tried in an indignant voice to stay its effect.

It is the common talk to-night that the whole course of expected action Friday, when the vote on the bill is to be taken, has been changed.

Mr. Foraker has announced his purpose to offer an amendment confining the operation of the bill to Oklahoma and Indian Territory, and there are confident predictions that it will be adopted.

HALTS NIAGARA FALLS BILL.

Senator Teller Thinks New York Should Care for Its Wonder.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Senator Teller of Colorado to-day prevented action on a measure looking to the preservation of Niagara Falls.

Mr. Foraker presented a report of the Committee on Foreign Relations on the bill authorizing the appointment of a commission to co-operate with a Canadian commission on the matter. He asked immediate consideration of the bill.

Mr. Teller objected, saying the duty of caring for the falls belongs principally to the State of New York. The bill then went to the calendar, where it will not be reached for some time.

SHARKS AND DOGFISH RAVAGE

Massachusetts Asks for Aid to Stop Destruction of Fish.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The ravages of the dogfish and shark among the fisheries of Massachusetts were discusstd by the President to-day with the committee appointed by the Governor of Massachusetts.

The sharks and dogfish are destroying great numbers of mackerel and cod, and Massachusetts is anxious for the passage of a bill now before Congress which has for its object the promotion of certain industries that make use of the shark and dogfish, so that there shall be an incentive to destroy them.

NO RETRIAL FOR HOOKER.

Higgins-Wadsworth Reformers Defeat It by a Vote of 87 to 50.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 7.—The Higgins-Wadsworth reformers and most of the old crowd on the Republican side of the Assembly joined to-day in voting to keep Justice Warren B. Hooker on the bench. The motion of Assemblyman Tompkins of New York to discharge the Judiciary Committee from further consideration of the suppressed resolution to retry Justice Hooker was defeated by a vote of 87 to 50.

BANKING INQUIRY BEATEN IN SENATE

After Raines Had Accused Stevens of Improper Methods.

BRIBERY HINT CAUSES STIR

Assembly Against Handing Job Over to ex-Judges Parker and Andrews —Grady Votes No.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 7.—The intention of the Senate Finance Committee to smother any real investigation of the Banking Departmtnt was again made evident to-day when, after a protracted session, the bill introduced through the efforts of Senator Raines, calling for an investigation by Judges Andrews and Parker, sitting as a special commission, was sent to the Committee of the Whole of the Senate. A motion by Senator Stevens, on the initiative of Senator Armstrong, that the Senate committee be discharged from further consideration of the Assembly resolution calling for a complete investigation, was decisively defeated.

The proponents of the investigation by a special commission have little or no hope of having their bill passed. The Assembly is wedded to the resolution, which it adopted by a unanimous vote and which remains tied up in the Senate Committee. The action of the Senate in defeating Senator Stevens's motion ties that body up harder than ever, and in any event there is no chance that any special commission could get to work and finish its work in time to make a report at this session.

There is doubt that either Judge Andrews or Judge Parker would undertake the work, but the advocates of the plan say that men equally acceptable could be found who would not decline.

When the bill was reported to-day Senator Stevens immediately moved to recommit it for further consideration. It was this that precipitated the long debate. Senator Armstrong suggested that the committee be discharged from consideration of the Assembly resolution and that the means be provided to enable both the bill and the resolution to be thrashed on the floor. The motion was lost 19 to 30.

Those who practically killed a banking investigation by voting aaginst Mr. Stevens's motion were:

This is the vote that may be expected to pass the measure for a special commission through the Senate, and then the Assembly will get its whack at it.

In the debate on Senator Stevens's motion to recommit, Senator Raines took occasion to accuse Senator Stevens of using the opportunity to exploit his own name and interests.

"It is hardly commendable," said Senator Raines, "for the Senator to buttonhole every Senator he can find before the session and try by favor to secure his support for his motion to recommit, and I say that such actions are unnecessary and unbecoming. The Senator should remember that there is bribery by money and bribery by favor, and when he asks a Senator to support him as a favor it comes under one of these heads."

Senator Stevens's face was flushed with indignation as he rose and demanded:

"Did you ever hear that I asked a Senator to vote for a measure or a proposition as a favor to me, or that I ever attempted to bribe a Senator?"

Senator Raines said that he had heard that Senator Stevens had approached Senators and asked their support.

At this moment Senator Elsberg interjected a question to Senator Raines:

"Which is worse, bribery for money or bribery for favor?"

Senator Raines turned quickly and replied: "Bribery for money, so far as it affects the Penal Code, may be worse, but the effects of the other may be terribly bad."

This interchange followed an attack by Senator Stevens upon the proposition involved in the bill. Those opposed to the investigation, he said, had raised a hue and cry that an investigation would be dangerous, would cause a financial panic. He declared that no disturbance would result from the investigation.

Senator Grady spoke for the bill, which he said should not be regarded as a political measure. In introducing the bill he said the Finance Committee sought to find a solution for a delicate situation. He claimed that no prerogatives of the Legislature had been disturbed, as the Legislature had nothing to do with the Superintendent of Banking himself.

Charles F. Murphy, while at Tammany Hall yesterday, expressed himself as greatly surprised because Senator Thomas F. Grady, the Democratic floor leader, had voted with the Republicans in the Senate Finance Committee in favor of an "outside investigation" of the State Banking Department.

"I cannot understand how Senator Grady or any other Democrat in the State Legislature would take a stand against a thorough investigation of any department of the State Government," said Mr. Murphy. "Every Democratic member of the Legislature is committed to vote in favor of cleansing every department in which there is evidence of rottenness."

BOGUS HOTELS IN NEW YORK.

Counsel to Anti-Saloon League Says 2,200 Are Evil Resorts Disguised.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 7.—T. H. Reed, counsel to the Anti-Saloon League, speaking before the Excise Commission on the Prentice bill providing for inspection by the Building Department of hotels selling liquors, said to-day that of the 2,700 hotels in Greater New York, only 500 are bona-fide places for the reception of guests.

"Our inspection leads us to believe that 90 per cent. of the hotels of this State do not comply with the building provisions of the Raines law," he said. "They are not what their proprietors assert them to be. We want legislation which will make them prove the buildings are what they now swear they are."

L. W. Beattie of the Madison Square Church House spoke for the bill, declaring it would abolish conditions that he knew existed in New York.

William Foster on behalf of the Brewers' Association of New York State and the Brewers' Board of Trade of New York City spoke against the bill. "I do not believe," he said, "that the moral good that is intended will be accomplished. It will only wipe out the poorer and inferior hotels. I want to say no one is more anxious to purify the saloon business than the liquor men, themselves where they are responsible. Not all of those engaged in the traffic are bad."

Some minor amendments were agreed upon. The reprinting of the bill will delay consideration for a week. To-morrow the Tully-Wainwright Local Option bill will be given a hearing.

Bill for Columbus Day Reported.

ALBANY, March 7.—Assemblyman Salomon's bill making Oct. 12 a legal holiday in commemoration of the discovery of America by Columbus was reported to-day by the General Laws Committee of the Assembly. New York City Italians have for years been urging the passage of this bill.

The Authoritative
Spring Overcoat for Men
A Radically New Model

Give us all the glory that taking the initiative earns. Ours is the only shop that presents the new model ready-for-service. Of the to-order tailors none but the most exclusive have mastered its curves. Let us analyze the new coat:

It is 43 inches long, with three buttons, broad chest and shoulders, defines the waist line with a graceful curve, flares over the hips and ends with a rather full skirt. The lapels are broad and long; the collar is of fancy velvet in the same shade as the fabric (gray herringbone and plaid weaves); so is the silk with which the coat is lined; the top and side pockets are welted and slant slightly. The centre vent is 20 inches long, with a false vent much like an inverted plait on both sides.

Go to a tailor who has it within himself to fashion a coat of this character and ask him the vital question. His answer must be at least one-third more than our prices— $32.00, $38.00 and $40.00

ODELL STRIKES BACK AT THE HIGGINS MEN

Replies with Bills to Abolish the Railroad Commission

AND APPOINT A NEW ONE

A Line-Up on the Bills Would Embarrass Higgins—Old Boss Stands Pat.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 7.—That State Chairman Odell does not mean to submit tamely to any process of elimination that his antagonists may have in store for him was evidenced to-day when Assemblyman Merritt, Odell's candidate for Speaker, introduced in the Assembly two bills which are a direct slap at one of the Governor's pet plans, and which seek to legislate out of office the present Railroad Commission and force the Governor to appoint a new one.

The first bill provides that the terms of the two new Commissioners, Aldridge and Rockwell, who were appointed last year at a salary of $8,000 a year and expenses for a five-year term, should expire on June 1 next. The second bill provides that the terms of the other Commissioners shall expire on the same date, and that thereupon the Governor should appoint another commission composed of but three members. Ex-Superintendent of Public Works Aldridge achieved his ambition when he was made a Railroad Commissioner by Gov. Higgins. Lately his opposition to Odell has not been so marked as it was a few months ago. Mr. Rockwell, who was an old New York Central conductor, and was put in office as the representative of the railroad men, was nevertheless the special pet and protége of Commissioner of Public Works Franchot, who is Gov. Higgins's closest friend and supporter.

While there is nothing that would interfere with the Governor's appointment again of Aldridge if the bills now introduced go through, which is unlikely, yet no one sees more clearly than Mr. Odell how this plan of Mr. Merritt's will call for a show of hands. Mr. Odell demonstrated, too, that he is still in the ring, and that he intends to take a crack here and there at those who would be pall bearers at his political funeral.

The members of either house of the Legislature would have to go on record when the bills were called up. Should the bill get as far as final passage it could be seen on June 1, or shortly thereafter, whether Aldridge still had sufficient standing with the Governor to be reappointed, but before it can become law must come the signing of the bill by the Governor, and if he vetoes it, then whatever onus might be attached to such an act would be deftly placed where it belonged.

The other members of the commission, Dunn of Binghmton, who was a Platt man; Baker of Owego, Senator Platt's home town, and Dickey of Newburg, an avowed Odell adherent, would also have to receive consideration in the event of a change. In the forefront, however, stands the proposition that Odell means to show he is still in the ring and is not afraid to have a count when it becomes necessary to take one.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 7.—Dr. M. V. Mabon, President of the State Lunacy Commission, is going to resign to take charge of the Manhattan State Hospital, on Ward's Island, New York. His present position pays $7,500 a year, with an expense allowance of $1,200. The salary of the Superintendent of the Manhattan Hospital is $4,500, with maintenance. The intention of the Republican leaders is to increase the salary to $6,000.

PERCY-GRAY LAW ATTACKED.

Anthony Comstock and Clergymen Urge Passage of Anti-Bookmaking Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 7.—A large delegation composed principally of clergymen and representatives of various law and order societies visited Albany to-day to favor the passage of the Cassidy bill which seeks to do away with bookmaking on the race tracks of the State by making it a felony as provided by the Constitution before the Percy-Gray law went into effect.

The hearing was before the joint Senate and Assembly Committee on Codes, of which Senator Elsberg is Chairman. Next Wednesday was fixed as the time to hear argument against the bill.

Anthony Comstock attacked the Percy-Gray law, which, he said, was a license to common gamblers to violate the laws of the State. He said that the passage of the bill in the face of the constitutional provision against gambling and pool selling and bookmaking was an outrage, especially when the Constitutional Convention had called on the Legislature to pass such laws as would make the provisions of the Constitution effective.

The present law, he said, licensed gambling on one side of a fence while it made it a felony on the other side.

Senator Cassidy, who drew and introduced the bill, read the speech made before the Constitutional Convention by Edward Lauterbach, which he said expressed his views in every respect. He said it was Mr. Lauterbach's speech that in large measure brought about the constitutional provisions against race track gambling, and that by passing the Percy-Gray bill the Constitution of the State had been tossed out of the window.

The Rev. Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts of Washington, T. De Quincy Tully of the Brooklyn Law and Order Society, the Rev. Dr. William Sheafe Chase of Christ Church, Brooklyn, and the Rev. Dr. Henry Ward of Buffalo also spoke.

THE BOOM OF BRACKETT.

His Active Candidacy for the Governorship Worries Leaders.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 7.—The launching of the gubernatorial boom of Senator Edgar Truman Brackett, the boss of Saratoga Springs, by the Republicans of Washington County last night is the first of a series of "plays" the Senator and his friends expect to get between now and the Republican State Convention, which will no doubt be held either in the latter part of August or the middle of September.

The very active candidacy of Mr. Brackett is causing some of the Republican leaders uneasiness. Brackett long ago showed that he would and could do as he pleased. The leaders would prefer to have him pacified just at this time. He is not very strong with the organization, but his friends believe he is very strong with the people. On that theory they are going ahead, planning to capture State delegates for him in Northern New York.

Anti-Docking Bill Again.

ALBANY, March 7.—The Averill bill, making docking a horse's tail a misdemeanor, was reported to-day by the General Laws Committee of the Assembly. This bill has been in the Legislature under the sponsorship of Senator Armstrong for years. It has been defeated in the Senate by a one or two vote margin every time it has come up.

FOOD.

SLEEP DESTROYER
The Old-Fashioned Coffee.

She suffered from nervousness by day and sleeplessness by night.

"Up to three years ago," writes a young woman, "I was in the habit of drinking coffee freely and did not realize that it was injuring my health till I was suddenly made the victim of nervous headaches so violent that I was compelled to give up household activities and stay in bed much of the time. Then insomnia came upon me and the wretchedness of sleepless nights was added to the agony of painful days.

"This lasted till a year ago, when I was persuaded by a friend to give up coffee entirely and use Postum Food Coffee. The result was in less than a week I began to feel the change for the better, my nerves grew stronger, and I began to sleep a little. Day by day the improvement continued, and in a short time I was restored to health. My headaches left me, the nervousness passed away entirely, and I enjoy good, sound sleep every night.

"This is what I owe to Postum, and I feel it but right to tell you of it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

BALLOT LAW VICIOUS, HERRICK DECLARES

Pure Elections Bill More Urgent Than Insurance Matter.

LOW TAKES OPPOSITE VIEW

Check Corporations and Reform Will Begin, He Says—Resolutions Passed at National Conference.

The foes of bossism and contamination of the elective privilege, comprising the second annual conference for reform of the primary and election laws and corrupt practices acts, closed a two days' session last night with a dinner at the City Club on Forty-fourth Street. The principal speakers were ex-Justice D Cady Herrick and ex-Mayor Seth Low and John E. Parsons.

Mr. Herrick declared that the measures now before the Legislature affecting the practice of bribery were of more importance than the insurance bills. Mr. Low held that the insurance bills should be acted upon as an initial step in the reforms sought. R. Fulton Cutting, the toastmaster, in introducing Richard H. Dana of Boston, said that as the platforms of the two leading parties differed only in words rather than principles, ballot reform was the more needed.

"What we need to get rid of more than anything else," he declared, "are our trust affiliations and the misuse of franchise privileges."

While Mr. Dana was praising the Massachusetts ballot system one of the diners asked:

"Is it a good one?"

"I'll reply," he said, "by giving the answer of the girl who received a proposal of marriage by wire.

"'How many words can I send for 25 cents?' she asked the operator.

"'Ten,' he replied. Then she wrote out: 'Yes, yes, yes, yes, yes, yes, yes, yes yes, yes!'"

"Legislation to prevent corruption at the ballot boxes is the most important subject pending before the Legislature, and I believe the result to be in danger," said ex-Justice Herrick. "Insurance measures pending may serve to sidetrack the ballot reform project. There is no disguising the fact that the managing politicians don't want ballot reform. The disclosures by the insurance investigation will serve for a time at least in the place of legislation, and the ballot bills should be acted on now.

"I am convinced that our ballot system is the most vicious in our time. It limits the independent voter, it embarrasses those who desire to place candidates in the field who are dissatisfied with the regular nominations, it does not insure secrecy of the ballot, it affords an absolute certainty as for whom the purchased voter has voted for, and it makes it impossible, save in periods of great excitement, to get any result other than the election of one or the other candidates upon the regular ticket.

"We have had no convictions for bribery under our present law, because the very persons who are wanted as witnesses have committed the same offense and their sense of decency prohibits them from testifying. We who contribute to campaign funds are morally guilty for the conditions at elections of to-day. I favor the law which not only punishes the man who takes the bribe, but the man or organization who gives it, and that man is the candidate and the organization comprises his backers."

Ex-Mayor Low, in answering this view, said:

"What we want is to reduce the power of mere money in elections, and I cannot see that anything has been proposed in that direction more full of promise than the pending insurance bills. We should pass them while the public attention is centred on them. In the meantime let us keep pressing forward, and if we don't succeed this year, try again next year and each succeeding year until what we desire has been accomplished."

The day session at 203 Broadway adopted resolutions requesting the National Civic Federation to establish a permanent department to take jurisdiction over the subjects treated at the conference. This also was adopted:

Resolved, That experience shows that existing provisions of criminal law against the purchase of votes are inadequate; that proper corrupt practices legislation should include: (1) the publication of all contributions and expenditures; (2) the prohibition of political contributions by corporations; (3) the definition and limitation of permissible political expenditures; (4) provisions for judicial inquiry into election expenditures and existence of corrupt practices, in which proceeding any citizen may participate; (5) the punishment of corrupt practices by further penalties such as disfranchisement or disqualification for office, in addition to fine or imprisonment.

Walter L. Fisher, President of the Municipal Voters' League of Chicago, proposed a resolution declaring for a direct primary, but his motion was referred to the permanent organization committee.

Conspicuous among the addresses delivered at the morning session yesterday, presided over by Clinton Rogers Woodruff of Philadelphia, was one by Representative William S. Bennet, of New York, who talked on ballot reform. He said that although he represented 29,000 voters in Congress he depended upon the action of one man for his nomination.

Mr. Quincy spoke in favor of the Massachusetts form of ballot.

"The voter," he said, "is compelled to make his choice for each officer and cannot say: 'I am a Republican,' or 'I am a Democrat,' and express his choice by a single mark. I believe that to be a psychological question."

Richard W. Jennings of the State Returning Board of Rhode Island, where the Massachusetts form of ballot is used, opposed the system on the ground of its complexity and awkwardness.

C. V. C. Van Deusen, representing Senator John Raines, read a paper favoring the New York type of ballot, and A. W. Terrell of the Texas Legislature digressed and talked on the negro vote, acknowledging that the black man had been corrupted at the polls.

James G. Monahan, Collector of Internal Revenue at Madison, Wis., talked against the direct primary system of that State.

Seth Low presided at the afternoon session.

After Robert Luce of Boston had talked on the Massachusetts Corrupt Practices act, Mr. Low told how, at an election in Elmira a few years ago, the party managers had spent between $300,000 and $400,000, and that later, when they held a conference and decided to keep down expenses, they spent only about $4,000.

Mark F. Sullivan of New York told of a recent visit to Greene County, in Western Pennsylvania, and the method of primary elections there.

"It was a remarkable spectacle," he said. "Every man in the village where I was got money for his vote, the prices ranging from $10 to $45. There was no concealment, and the clergymen of the community dared not attack the system because public sentiment wouldn't tolerate it. The people there counted this money as a regular portion of their annual revenue. And they call that county 'Greene,' too."

STATUTE REVISION WORK.

Nine Years' Search by House Committee Nears End.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The House Committee on Revision of the Laws, of which Representative Moon of Pennsylvania is Chairman, early next week will bring up in the House for consideration and passage the first installment of this vast work which has been under way since 1897.

By the time the Penal Code is passed the committee will have the Judiciary Title ready for consideration. Following this in sequence will come about twenty sub-divisions of the entire code, and it is expected that the new Revised Statutes, including between 8,000 and 9,000 sections of law, will be passed during the present session of Congress.

In the thirty years intervening between the last revision and this one, a large number of laws were enacted, and the task of seeking, classifying, studying, revising, and assembling them has been of monumental proportions. Important laws have been found in legislation of all descriptions, and appropriation bills have been notable for the number of statutes their study has yielded. That provision of United States law, for instance, which entitles parties in interest to testify, an enactment which revolutionized former practice in this regard, was, among others, tagged on to an appropriation bill.

PRINCESS ENA CONVERTED.

She and Her Mother Weep During Ceremony at San Sebastian.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, March 7.—The ceremony of the conversion of the Princess Ena of Battenberg to the Roman Catholic faith prior to her marrying King Alfonso occurred to-day in the chapel of the Palace of Miramar.

The Right Rev. Robert Brindle, Roman Catholic Bishop of Nottingham, England, officiated. Premier Moret and the Duke of Alba were witnesses for the Princess. The members of the royal party were deeply moved; the Princess Beatrice, (Princess Henry of Battenberg, mother of the Princess Ena,) and Princess Ena were in tears. An artillery salute announced the termination of the ceremony, after which the royal party lunched together.

The town is enjoying a holiday in honor of the event, processions headed by bands of music passing constantly through the streets.

LONDON, March 7.—"Interesting but untrue" is the British Foreign Office's comment on a story published in Paris to the effect that a formal political alliance between Great Britain and Spain will follow King Alfonso's marriage to Princess Ena of Battenberg.

VOTES TO PAY M. PS.

But Wishes of House of Commons Cannot Be Carried Out Yet.

LONDON, March 7.—The House of Commons after a discussion occupying the whole of the evening session, carried by a majority of 238 the motion introduced by the capitalist Liberal, William Hesketh Lever, representing the Wyrral division of Cheshire, in favor of the payment to members of Parliament of $1,500 yearly.

In the course of the debate Premier Campbell-Bannerman spoke cordially in favor of the principle of the payment of members, but said the Government at present had neither the time nor the money to carry it into effect. For the reason given, the Premier explained, no legislative effect will be given to Mr. Lever's motion.

The great accession of labor members to the House of Commons has made the matter of payment a pressing one, many of the new members contending that there ought to be some allowance toward defraying the heavy expenses inseparable from the post of member. It is believed the Government will very shortly introduce a bill to throw official election expenses on the public purse, leaving the question of payment of members for some future session of Parliament.

ASKS TO BE PUNISHED.

Chinese Governor Admits Responsibility for Massacre.

SHANGHAI, March 7.—All is quiet at Nanching, the scene of the recent massacre of Catholic missionaries, and the missionaries who fled are returning. It is stated that the Chinese Governor has admitted his guilt in failing to preserve the peace, and has asked for personal punishment. He will probably be degraded.

SLEEPING SICKNESS TERROR.

Prof. Koch Tells of the Disease's Ravages in West Africa.

BERLIN, March 7.—Prof. Robert Koch lectured to-day on the "sleeping sickness" which he investigated for several months in Equatorial Africa during the year 1905. Emperor William and a distinguished company were present.

The malady, said the professor, had been known on the west coast of Africa since the beginning of the last century, and it had spread to the north shore of the Victoria Nyanza and threatened German Africa. Probably 200,000 persons had died from the disease. He had found whole villages on the shores of Victoria Nyanza to be empty and the populations of some groups of islands had died to the last soul. The infection was spread from human to human by the sting of a fly.

Prof. Koch knew of no remedy for this disease, but hoped the infection might be ended by the extermination of the insect, which propagated slowly, by burning the undergrowth at its favorite home. The professor will return to Africa shortly and continue his studies of tropical diseases.

AFTER THE SPITTERS AGAIN.

Seven Arrests Were Made Last Night at the Theatres.

The Board of Health has revived its campaign against violators of the section of the Sanitary Code forbidding spitting in the theatres and similar public places. Five men were detailed last night to arrest offenders at the Majestic, the Belasco, the Victoria, and Circle Theatres and the Colonial Music Hall. Before the shows at these houses were over they had landed seven prisoners at the West Forty-seventh Street Station.

The first man arrested was "Buster Jim" Hatch, the negro footman at the Majestic. While he was arguing the matter with the Sergeant at the station house Charles H. Moore, a Kentucky broker, was brought in.

"Why," said he, "I had just bought a ticket at the box office at the Victoria, and as I walked away I bit the end off my cigar and spat it out. Then I was nabbed. How much for bail? Five hundred dollars? Here she is."

None of the other prisoners were able to avoid a brief stay in cells, but friends came to the rescue of all of them sooner or later.

At the Victoria Theatre, where most of the arrests were made, William Hammerstein, son of Oscar Hammerstein, was in the lobby. When he saw what was being done he sent men through the lobby and to the sidewalk warning all patrons of the house not to spit. His warning probably saved many from arrest.

Complaints of spitting in Third Avenue elevated trains are coming to the Health Department by the score. As a result the authorities have decided to arrest everybody on that particular line who is detected disobeying the ordinance which forbids spitting. In a few days a small army of plain clothes men will ride up and down on the trains looking for offenders.

KILLING IN SELF-DEFENSE.

Sullivan Says Horse Dealer Threatened Himself and Wife.

James Sullivan of 831 Eleventh Avenue, Manhattan, who killed Benjamin Weill of 278 Penn Street, Williamsburg, in the latter's exchange stables, at 247 North Seventh Street, last Tuesday night, was arraigned with his wife in the Lee Avenue Court yesterday. Sullivan was held without bail on a charge of homicide and his wife was paroled as a witness. Sullivan said:

"I was justified, I think, in shooting this man. He threatened my life and the life of my wife."

The Magistrate advised Sullivan to say nothing further.

PUSHCART MEN REJOICE OVER A GRAND VICTORY

The Police Must Take the Carts as Bail Hereafter.

A PAEAN OF JOY GOES UP

And Six Kegs of Celebration Go Down—More Rejoicing When McClellan Signs Harawitz's Bill.

Down on the east side, under the bridge,
Trod by ten thousand feet,
There is rejoicing from Pitt Street to Ridge,
Down where the pushcart men meet.
Assemblyman Harawitz got though his bill
Peddlers to keep out of jail;
Now, if arrested, all they need do
Is put in their pushcarts for bail.

This was the song that the pushcart men sang last night under the arches of the Williamsburg Bridge. They also sang songs of gladness in Yiddish, for Assemblyman "Abe" Harawitz had telegraphed from Albany that his bill had passed the Assembly and would become a law as soon as Mayor McClellan signed it.

The pushcart men started in at once to celebrate. They marched in a throng to their hall in Forsyth Street, and after passing resolutions thanking the Assemblyman from "de Ate" for his good work in their behalf appointed a committee of 600 to call on the Mayor and ask him to sign the bill.

After the committee, consisting of sixty men from each of the ten pushcart organizations, had been appointed speeches were made declaring that Assemblyman Harawitz was "all right." Then they sang songs of gladness, and each man in the hall chipped in 10 cents for celebration money. In this way they raised enough money to buy six kegs of celebration with froth on it. Dancing and parading about the hall, the pushcart men declared that the new measure would bring peace to their families, as in the future when a peddler is arrested his wife would not be compelled to sit up all night weeping for him while he remained in a police station cell. The bill, which now only needs the signature of the Mayor to make it a law, provides that the police and the Magistrates must accept a peddler's pushcart as security for appearance in court if the peddler is arrested. The amended law will also say:

If the person so arrested shall fail to appear in answer to such a charge, such pushcart, if any, shall be disposed of under the direction of such court or Magistrate at public sale and the proceeds disposed of in the same manner as other fines collected by the court or Magistrate before whom such person is required to appear.

As the arrests of peddlers for ordinance violations often number as many as fifty in a single day in the Essex Market Court alone, the Magistrate who sits there when the new law goes into effect will certainly have his hands full in taking care of security.

One of the Magistrates said last night that the city would probably have to build a pushcart garage for the "fish automobiles," as the police call the pushcarts. Very few of the east side peddlers own the carts from which they peddle their merchandise. There are sixty-two pushcart headquarters where the carts are now hired by peddlers who pay 25 cents a day rental for them.

As the fines imposed by the Magistrate usually amount to a dollar or more the peddlers, it was said, might find it convenient to forfeit bail, which they can easily obtain for twenty-five cents. This phase of the situation caused much sorrow last night among the men who make it a business to let out push carts by the day. But the pushcart men were happy, and they declared that in addition to the committee of 600 that will wait on the Mayor 3,000 other peddlers would march to the City Hall on whatever day the Executive Committee names for the City Hall visit.

The greatest celebration will be held after the Mayor has signed the bill. This will take the form of a grand parade, which will end with a serenade for Assemblyman Harawitz at his home. At the same time the peddlers will cheer for a boy baby that has just come to the Assemblyman's home.

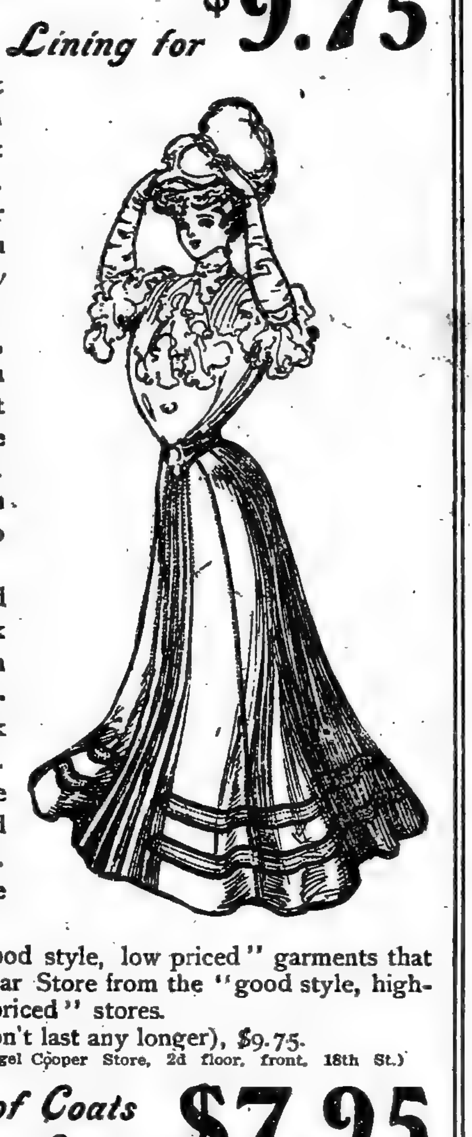
A Walking Skirt of Fine Voile with Taffeta Drop Lining for $9.75



This skirt would cost you at least $15 in any other store in New York, and you wouldn't be paying too much even then. And no store in New York or anywhere else could give you a better style skirt at any price.

It's as new as new can be, has style, "snap" and dash in every line of it, and it's just as good a skirt as can be made out of voile and lining silk. You can have, even at this bargain price, a choice of two good styles.

One is a circular, gored model made with plaits back and front; trimmed at bottom with two folds of the material, piped with silk. Silk drop skirt with a fancy flounce.

The other style is made with box-plaited flounce, and has trimming of taffeta straps. The silk drop skirt is made with knife-plaited flounce.

These are the sort of "good style, low priced" garments that distinguish this Women's Wear Store from the "good style, high-priced" and "no style, low priced" stores.

Price, TO-DAY (the lot won't last any longer), $9.75.

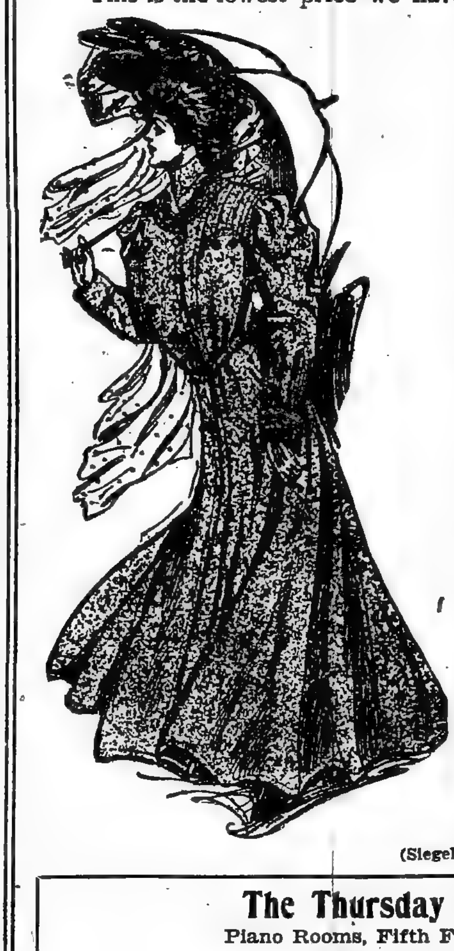
Women's Rainproof Coats In a Smart, Sensible Style, $7.95



This is the lowest price we have ever seen on a garment anywhere near as good as this.

The coat is so good to look at in its fresh, snappy, original style, and is so wonderfully good in its materials and making that everybody in the advertising office thought the price, $7.95, must be a mistake.

But it wasn't. It's merely a Siegel Cooper surprise that surprised some people in the store as much as it will the people who come in from outside to profit by it.

The cut gives a fair idea of the style, but it can't show the light but firm and serviceable "Garren-Tead" rainproof worsted it is made from, or the good, smooth, thorough workmanship, or the deep, handsome, tan and gray colors.

Only $7.95—and if you get one you'll have a bargain that will give you a gratified sort of feeling every time you put the coat on.

GUARANTEED rainproof.

Can't promise to have one left by to-night.

IMPORTERS URGE BILL FOR CUSTOMS REFORM

Demand Abolition of Star Chamber Appraisement Hearings.

FUN AT SHAW'S EXPENSE

Questions Unsettled Because the Secretary Is Sleeping on Them, Says Controller Metz.

Abolition of "star chamber" hearings in reappraisement proceedings before the Board of General Appraisers of the customs service was demanded by a meeting in the Broadway Central Hotel yesterday afternoon, at which representatives of seventy of the largest importing firms of the city were present. A bill dealing with the entire customs system has been introduced in Congress by J. Van Vechten Olcott, in which this reform is embodied. The measure was drawn up by the Customs Service Committee of the Manufacturers' Association, and the merchants pledged support.

At present the importer does not know what evidence or whose testimony is brought against him. He cannot see the reports on which the board reaches its decision, and he has no appeal to a higher court. But if it is decided that his invoice was too low, not only has he to pay the additional duty, but a penalty of 1 per cent. for every 1 per cent. that the appraised value exceeds the entry value. In his speech before the Committee of Ways and Means at Washington Wickham Smith, counsel for the Merchants' Association, quoted one case in which as much as $30,000 penalty had been exacted without any right of defense.

Controller Metz, President of H. A. Metz & Co. and of Victor Koechl & Co., was in the chair. He said: "Domestic manufacturers have invested many millions of dollars relying on the protection offered them by the tariff. That inequalities in collection of duty on similar foreign products exist is well known. American manufacturers have been compelled to close their factories in some instances and honest merchants to give up the importation of certain lines of merchandise in consequence."

Thomas A. Downing of R. F. Downing & Co. began his speech by reading the following catechism on the importer and the Custom House:

Q.—Father, what is an importer? A.—An importer, my son, is a man whose word is always doubted, and who is in constant fear of having to pay more money to the Government than he owes.

Q.—Why don't the importers tell the Government people they are honest? A.—They do every time they make an entry at the Custom House, but they are not believed.

Q.—Is a Custom House broker a man? A.—Secretary Shaw says he is an unlicensed man.

Q.—Does this mean he can do anything he wants to? A.—The Secretary of the Treasury seems to think so, but the brokers don't agree with him.

The Merchants' Association committee made a suggestion, not included in the Olcott bill, that goods should be invoiced at the price at which they sold in foreign countries. Mr. Downing suggested that importers should be entitled to a reduction in their invoices, if the price of foreign goods to the home consumer had fallen in the interval between purchase and arrival in this country. The merchants and importers of New York paid last year $181,000,000 in customs, 71 per cent. of the total amount, he said.

Gustav H. Schwab was the sponsor for the resolution indorsing the Olcott bill.

J. M. Locke declared that he had not had sufficient time to consider the Olcott bill, and that he was opposed to open hearings.

"If we had open hearings," he said, "it would cost me years of time, and I would have to tell all my business to small competitors. I believe open hearings would be disastrous to honest importers."

Controller Metz pointed out that the Merchants' Association had taken up this matter at the request of President McKinley, and that President Roosevelt had also conferred with members upon it. It was not settled yet, he said, for Secretary Shaw was sleeping on it.

Mr. Schwab's resolution was carried by an overwhelming majority, and a further motion introduced by William E. Webb of James H. Dunham & Co., pledging the meeting to undivided and hearty support of the Olcott bill, was adopted. The firms represented at the meeting were:

H. B. Claflin Co., Lord & Taylor, James G. Johnson & Co., Siegel-Cooper Co., James H. Dunham & Co., M. D. Howell & Co., Sullivan, Drew & Co., Oelrichs & Co., Robert Crooks & Co., A. G. MISS VIAL ISN'T MISSING.

She Says So Herself—Isn't Dodging Process Servers, Either.

Miss L. A. Vial of 770 St. Nicholas Avenue says she is not missing, as reported. As to the story printed last Saturday to the effect that she had not accounted for money intrusted to her as a broker by John J. Barr of 25 West Thirty-fifth Street for investment, and was avoiding process servers and trying to get away to Europe, she said yesterday:

"That is entirely false.

"The only transaction I ever had with Mr. Barr was a very slight one. I am in the brokerage business, and held power of attorney in an account he had with J. R. Williston & Co. of 10 Wall Street. Mr. Barr paid between $900 and $1,000 to the firm in checks, which were made payable to J. R. Williston & Co.

"The money was lost in the Lawson slump. That is all there is to it. J. R. Williston & Co. supplied him with statements at different times. When the money was lost, Mr. Barr asked for a detailed statement of transactions, which he received immediately."

One Dead of Poisoned Candy.

Six-year-old Christina Klewin died yesterday at the home of her parents, 330 East Twenty-second Street, after showing symptoms of poison. Her playmate, Lena Spegel, is dying next door. The children were seen together on Sunday eating "chocolate squares," and it is believed by their families that they were poisoned by the candy. The East Twenty-second Street police, the Coroner's office, and the Health Board have the cases under investigation.

WROTE THAT HE'D BE DEAD.

But the Police Reached Old Butcher Before He Had Ended His Life.

In the mail received at the Coroners' office yesterday was this letter:

> Sirs—When you receive this I will be a dead man. I am in the Metropolitan for $365. Hoping that you see that my body is cremated. I cannot get any work; that is why I have to leave my home two and a half years ago, and I can't get any work now, for I am too old and crippled.
>
> MATTHIAS GRIEF,
> 86 King Street, N. Y. City.
>
> I would like to be taken from this room to Fresh Pond as soon as possible, for I don't want any wake.

The police were notified, and Detective Sullivan of the Macdougal Street Station found the author of the letter in a room on the top floor of the house at 86 King Street. He was lying unconscious on the bed with his right leg in a pail of water into which the blood was running from a deep cut.

He was taken to Bellevue Hospital and placed in the prison ward. He regained consciousness later and told his story. He is an old man, and is said to have been a prosperous butcher at one time, but has lost money through speculation.

In his room were hundreds of newspaper clippings telling how rich persons had committed suicide. The old man said that after reading such things for several months he had come to the conclusion that if more fortunate mortals thought it proper to take their lives it was all right for him to follow their example.

He said that he had made every preparation to leave the world as quietly as possible, "without disturbing any one." There was a note on his bureau asking that the $365 be given to his wife, who lived elsewhere, and that she buy a piano with it. He was surprised that his attempt had failed, as he had supposed that he had cut the principal arteries in his leg.

On a table near the bed was a Bible open at Matthew xxv, 42: "For I was an hungered and ye gave me no meat. I was thirsty and ye gave me no drink."

The old man will recover, the doctors said last night.

RIVER RESCUE A STRUGGLE.

Two Policemen and Drowning Man Saved Just in Time.

A man about sixty years old, whose name and address are not known, was rescued from drowning by Policemen John J. Devlin and Felix Hoffman of the West Twentieth Street Station early this morning off the 700-foot pier of the Street Cleaning Department at the foot of West Fifteenth Street.

John Connelly, the night watchman on the pier, heard cries of "help" coming from the water, about half way out on the pier. He saw a man in the water struggling to keep afloat. Connelly's cries for help were heard by Devlin and Hoffman. They ran up, and Hoffman, throwing off his coat, waistcoat, and shoes, but with his helmet still on, dived into the river. The man caught him with a viselike grip. Hoffman tried in vain to beat the man's hold. Then Devlin dived into the river to the aid of both. He managed to help Hoffman free himself, and with the drowning man, who had become unconscious, between them they swam to the pier against the strong tide.

There was no rope at hand to pull the men out of the water with, and as a last restort Wtachman Connelly threw over the end of a hose which was used for a fire hose. This hose failed to support the three men, and kept breaking whenever the strain of the combined weight of the men got on it.

When the men were about exhausted a tug ran up in answer to the shouts for help raised by several men on the pier. The tug rescued the three men.

All three men were hustled to the New York Hospital by Dr. Cottle, who had responded to an emergency call from Police Headquarters. The policemen were soon in shape. The man they saved will recover.

Hoffman in his struggles to keep the man from drowning lost a diamond ring value dat $125.

Want to Rush Tuberculosis Camp.

The Board of Health has asked the Aldermen to let it have $20,000 to spend in improvements on the Otisville Tuberculosis Sanitarium without public letting. The regular routine requires advertising of contracts far in advance and then the publication of bids. If the Health Department has to follow this, it is said, the improvements and additions cannot be made in time for patients to reap the benefits of them this Summer.

SPORTSMEN'S SHOW SPLIT.

Motor Boat Makers to Hold Separate Exhibition—Water Sports.

Odors of the balsamic woods and gasoline from motor boat exhausts will not be mixed another season during the period of the Sportsmen's Show in the Madison Square Garden. The soft and seductive "call of the wild" will not fall upon ears heeding only the siren's enchanting whistle from the boats in the big tank. Both sides of the arrangement agreed upon yesterday at the Garden are satisfied that their best interests will be served by holding a motor boat show next year beginning Tuesday, Feb. 19, to Feb. 26. The true sportsmen's show will be from March 1 to 9, but both are to be under the direction of Capt. J. A. H. Dressel.

There was a strange mixing of races at the show yesterday, when the Chinese Consular delegation, headed by K. F. Sha and Vice Consul Lock Wing made a tour of inspection. They smiled with Celestial blandness upon the Indians and guides, who enjoyed the Chinese in return. The Chinese designated the show as a "very American." Henry H. Rogers was also a visitor. He minutely inspected a number of motor boats, as his son intends becoming a follower of the sportive little craft.

A second visit to the exhibition was made by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who was accompanied by Mrs. Vanderbilt. He devoted his attention to the high-speed craft. It is not unlikely that this prominent racing automobilist will purchase a fast boat, and follow the example set by his cousin, William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., who owns the best racing game. Other visitors were Senator Edward Bailey of New York, May Irwin, and Amelia Bingham. Miss Irwin purchased a twenty horse power boat, which she will use at her Summer home in the Thousand Islands.

Considerable interest was created by the order placed by Clarence S. McClellan for a cruising boat which he intends to enter in the ocean race from Marblehead to New York. The boat will be a thirty-eight-foot trunk cabin cruiser equipped with an eighteen-horse power motor.

WAS NEARLY STARVED IN A LINER'S HOLD

But Macaroni and Water Kept the Stowaway Alive.

WANTED TO SEE AMERICA

Alfredo of Naples Must Now Stoke His Way Back—Life Below Decks with the Rats Is Eerie.

When the Italian liner Citta di Napoli, in yesterday morning from Naples and Genoa, was seven days out of the latter port, one of her officers heard a tapping in the hold of the ship. An inspection of the ship was ordered by the Captain of the liner, and twenty minutes later the searchers found a young Italian, almost starved, prostrate on top of some cases of macaroni.

The Italian, whose name is Guido Alfredo, had stowed away at Naples, and for almost seven days his only food had been a few fragments of dry macaroni, while the only thing he had to drink was less than a quart of water which he had taken on board with him, when he decided that the United States would be a fine country to live in.

Yesterday the Italian, a fine looking fellow of the Neapolitan type, was almost crazed with a desire to smoke, and his cries for a cigarette could be heard all over the ship. On his knees he besought every one who approached the compartment where he was imprisoned for just one cigarette, and when the officers refused to give him one his grief was great.

"Just one, please, Mr. Officer," he said, "or I die for the want of it. Just a puff or two and then I'll throw it away. I promise not to let it burn long, and I swear harm will not come to the ship. Just one, please Mr. Officer, just one little cigarette and I will be so happy."

It is against the rules of the line for persons to smoke in the place where Alfredo was confined, and the officers had no alternative but to refuse his request. Later in the day Guido was taken to Ellis Island. All the way across the bay he begged for "just one puff," but the barges on which immigrants are transported to Ellis Island are not fireproof, and again Guido had to go without his smoke.

As soon as he landed at the island sombeody gave him a cigarette, and as with trembling hands he lit it Guido fairly danced with joy. "Oh, I am so happy," said he. "Now I care not what they do."

Later in the day Alfredo told, through an interpreter, the story of his stay in the hold of the Citta di Napoli.

"I so wanted to come to the great country on this side of the ocean," he said, "that when I saw that I had a chance to get on the ship without any one seeing me, I could not keep from stealing on board. It was so hot and stuffy in that place! For days that seemed like years I lay there. It was dark, pitch dark, all the time, and I was never certain whether it was day or night. Sometimes I could hear the people above me as they walked about, and then I guessed that the sun must be shining.

"I could hear the people talking sometimes, but it was only a faint murmuring that seemed miles away. All this time the little water I had in the little bottle was going, and I knew that the time must soon come when it would be empty. One day I lifted the bottle, but there was no water. It seemed that my tongue would dry up, and then I began to forget things. No longer I heard the people above me, and no more could I distinguish the murmuring of the things that they said.

"I could hear the big rats every now and then as they scampered about the ship. Sometimes they seemed so near as they dashed past me that I trembled and sweated, for I was weak and fast getting weaker. One day I awoke from my stupor for a moment or two, and I knew that unless I got out of that place soon I would never leave it alive.

"This terrible foreboding gave me a little strength. I found a piece of wood and managed to get it over my head and began to tap on the wall above me. A little later a big sailor found me and carried me on deck. You will never know how beautiful the daylight is until, like me, you have suffered alone, with only the rats for company, long in the darkness."

When Alfredo recovered his strength he was put to work in the boiler rooms shoveling coal. He will probably do the same work when he starts back for Naples a few days hence on the Citta di Napoli. But he is likely to prefer that to his life in the hold with the rats.

UNIFORM MOTOR BOAT LAW.

American Power Boat Association Wants New Bill Framed.

Energetic action toward securing from the Government proper legislation for all small pleasure boats in which gasoline is used in any way as fuel was taken last night at the annual meeting of the American Power Boat Association, held at the Arena, 39 West Thirty-first Street. The Committee on Legislation, Frederick A. Hill and Edward M. MacLellan, after presenting a report showing the need for some uniform legislation on the subject which would provide not only for the regular motor-propelled boats, but for naphtha launches as well, was directed by the association to confer with other organizations with a view of securing their cooperation in the framing of a bill which will be presented to the proper Congressional committee for future action. No opposition was manifested to the bill recently introduced in Congress and which provides for inspection of all motor boats under 15 tons that are used for hire. A broader bill than this is deemed necessary, and some concerted action from all the motor boat interests is to be urged.

Secretary Anson B. Cole reported that thirteen clubs had been added during the year, the total membership now being forty-nine clubs, representing 12,000 individuals. These clubs are located in thirty-two States, representing all sections of the country, as far West as the Mississippi and the great lakes.

James N. Oliphant of the Thousand Islands Yacht Club, succeeded J. Howard Wainwright as President, and the other officers chosen for the year were: Anson B. Cole, Secretary, Manhasset Yacht Club; J. H. Wainwright, Treasurer, American Yacht Club; H. J. Gielow, measurer, Atlantic Yacht Club.

The rule regarding the naming of the challenging boat for the gold challenge trophy was amended so as to give the challenging club making challenge until ten days before the race to name the boat. Formerly the boat had to be named much earlier.

HOCKEY CHAMPIONS WIN AMATEUR LEAGUE TITLE

Crescents Swamp New York A. C. by a 12 to 1 Score.

GIVE MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY

Big Following of Brooklyn Players Surprised as Goal Follows Goal at Clermont Rink.

The Crescent Athletic Club seven won an overwhelming victory over the New York Athletic Club hockey team in the Clermont Avenue Rink last evening in the final game to decide the tie for first place in the Amateur League series, and with it the hockey championship of New York for another year. Remarkable speed and magnificent team play scored the victory for the Crescents, together with the fact that they swept the New York seven off their feet by their fast play at the start, and never allowed them a chance to recover their balance.

New York was up in the air after the first goal was scored, and they were never allowed to descend until the first half was over. Crescents in this time had scored 8 goals, and lost another by offside play, while New York had never threatened the Brooklyn team's goal a single time.

In the second half New York scored once, and missed two other good tries for goal, but the Crescents again got them on the run toward the end of the game, and added four to their total. The game ended with the score 12 to 1 in favor of the five-time champions.

The result was a big surprise to every one of the eager partisans of the two teams crowded into the small rink. A Crescent victory was expected by a majority of those present, but a close score and a hard game was expected by every one of them. The speed of the Crescents at the start of the game disorganized the New Yorks so that they never got together again during the entire game, except for one brief spell at the beginning of the second half.

The Crescents began with a rush, and in less than a minute Wall placed the puck within the New York's net. From behind his own goal he took it the length of the rink down the extreme outside, dodging Castleman and Locke cleverly, and shot from the side into the net, Savage having no support from either Williams or Fenwick. Scarcely had they begun again before Schiebler took the puck down to the goal and passed to Liffiton, who placed it in the net, but it was disallowed for offside play. Within another minute Wall got a clear field, and, coming down the rink, passed to Shirreff, who put it in the net.

These three goals came so fast there was scarcely a dimiution in the cheering of the Crescent side. The play continued at the same pace with the puck constantly in New York's territory, and before their goal, Dobby shot to Shirreff from the right flank, and a third goal followed, while a fourth came immediately after, when Dobby by a lucky accident passed from behind New York's goal and the puck, striking Strange's skate, bounded into the net. Shirreff made another try for goal after a brilliant run, but a splendid stop by Strange averted the score.

Crescents seemed then to transfer their attack to the other side and Schiebler scored twice on passes from Liffiton. Between these goals Locke awoke the first cheer from the New York contingent by a bully run the length of the rink and a fine shot by goal, but Halleck checked it with his hand. Shirreff added the seventh goal on a pass from Dobby, and Dobby scored on a pass from behind the net by Shirreff. Time then stopped the play.

In the second half Castleman broke the ice for New York on a play similar to Wall's opening score, and followed it with another shot that should have tallied, it seemed, but was luckily stopped. For ten minutes following this the play was very even and changed from one goal to the other rapidly. Then Crescents got New York on the run again, and Liffiton, Dobby, Schiebler, and Shirreff scored in as rapid succession as had marked the first half play. Castleman had his shoulder badly sprained and the game was delayed for ten minutes while it was being treated, but he pluckily resumed play. The two teams lined up as follows:

Crescent A. C., 12.	Positions.	N. Y. A. C., 1.
Halleck	Goal	Strange
O'Flynn	Point	Williams
Wall	Cover point	Fenwick
Liffiton	Forward	Castleman
Shirreff	Forward	Dillonbaugh
Schiebler	Forward	Savage
Dobby	Forward	Locke

Goals—Wall, Schiebler, 3; Shirreff, 4; Dobby, 3; Liffiton, Castleman. Referee—Dr. MacKenzie, Hockey Club of New York. Associate referee—Maitland St. George Davids, Hockey Club of New York. Umpires—Benjamin Philips, Hockey Club of New York, and William Russell, Hockey Club of New York. Time of halves—Twenty minutes.

COLUMBIA BEATS PENN TWICE

Win Close Contests in Both Wrestling and Gymnastics.

Columbia's wrestling team defeated Pennsylvania last night in the Columbia gymnasium by four bouts to three, catch-as-catch-can style. The visitors scored two wins on clean throws and got a decision in the third bout, R. C. Folwell, Penn's former full back, not being able to throw Echeverria in the fifteen-minute time limit. J. M. Howell of Columbia gave the best exhibitions, throwing R. Waite in the welter-weight class, with a three-quarter Nelson, in a little over four minutes. After finishing Waite, Howell, who is intercollegiate welter-weight champion, met C. T. Lewis in the middle-weight class, taking Kilroe's place. The latter has not fully recovered from an injury received in practice. Although Lewis had thirteen pounds advantage over Howell, the latter won in 7:05.

Bloom and Pettit, in the featherweight class, mixed things up from the start, to the amusement of the spectators. Between holds the midgets got around on the mat like gamecocks, bumping each other in professional style and squealing, incidentally, by way of diversion. Bloom finally got Pettit on his back and won in 6:30. Summary:

Featherweight, 115 Pounds.—I. Bloom, Columbia, threw M. S. Pettit, Pennsylvania, with a Nelson and leg hold. Time—6:30.

Special Weight, 125 Pounds.—E. C. Marble, Pennsylvania, threw W. W. Wise, Columbia, with a Nelson and head chancery hold. Time—8:30.

Lightweight, 135 Pounds.—A. S. Shimmon, Columbia, threw C. T. Brown, Pennsylvania, with a half-Nelson and a roll. Time—2:45.

Welterweight, 145 Pounds.—J. M. Howell, Columbia, threw R. Waite, Pennsylvania, with a three-quarter Nelson. Time—4:30.

Middleweight, 158 Pounds.—J. M. Howell, Columbia, threw C. T. Lewis, Pennsylvania, with a bar lock hold. Time—7:05.

Light Heavyweight, 170 Pounds.—J. K. Dwyer, Pennsylvania, threw H. B. Post, Columbia, with a clutch hold. Time—8:45.

Heavyweight, 175 Pounds.—R. C. Folwell, Pennsylvania, won decision over J. F. Escheverria, Columbia. Time—15:00.

TOO MANY AUTO SHOWS, MANUFACTURERS SAY

Will Only Recognize New York and Chicago Exhibits in 1907.

GLIDDEN CUP TOUR CHANGES

National Association Will Present Suggestions to A. A. A. Directors To-day—New Committees.

Only two automobile shows will be sanctioned next year by the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers, the National show in New York and the Chicago show. Besides taking this action the Executive Committee of the association, at its regular meeting yesterday in its rooms, at 7 East Forty-second Street, placed itself squarely on record as opposed to the tendency to hold a continuous chain of shows, as has been the case this year. The resolution as adopted is:

Whereas, In the opinion of this Executive Committee the local shows of 1906 have not been productive of benefits to the industry commensurate with the loss of time and expense involved; therefore be it

Resolved, That no shows shall be sanctioned hereafter, except one annual show each at New York and Chicago, and that the resolution relative to exhibits at unsanctioned shows be continued in force.

Manufacturers exhibiting in unsanctioned shows are liable to incur the penalty of being barred from the sanctioned exhibits.

When the news of this action was communicated to several local agents surprise was expressed that the Boston show had been cut off of the sanctioned list. The Boston exhibit has always been one of the most successful of the year, and the demand for space this season has exceeded all previous years. General Manager Samuel A. Miles in explaining the reason for the resolution said that in view of the multiplicity of shows the Executive Committee felt that some radical step should be taken to protect the manufacturers.

Without the direct aid of the manufacturers, the success of the lesser shows at Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, and Philadelphia will be exceedingly doubtful, and unless the manufacturers show a tendency to be more lenient upon the question before the close of the year, the automobile exhibits next year will begin to experience some of the loss of enthusiasm that has already curtailed motor car contests and races, to the general satisfaction, be it said, of owners and manufacturers alike.

Mr. Miles reported that the net profits of the Chicago show were $25,000, one-half of which will be retained for the work of the association and the other half divided among the exhibitors.

The Directors and afterward the members of the new Contest Committee discussed informally, but nevertheless very seriously, the route for the annual Glidden Cup tour. The officers of the American Automobile Association have asked the manufacturers to make suggestions regarding the route and to state if any changes are deemed essential in determining the winning car. It is the purpose of both organizations to work together in making the tour this year more beneficial in many ways than was the case last year.

President E. H. Cutler announced the new committees for the year as follows:

Membership—S. T. Davis, Jr., G. W. Bennett, and Percy Owen.

Show—M. J. Budlong, G. W. Bennett, W. T. White, C. C. Hildebrand, and W. E. Metzger.

Railroad Transportation—Windron T. White, Charles Clifton, and W. L. Innis.

Auditing—Percy Owen, A. L. Pope, and M. L. Goss.

Good Roads—S. D. Waldon, S. T. Davis, Jr., and E. R. Thomas.

Legislation and Legal—G. W. Bennett, W. R. Innis, and A. L. Pope.

Contest—S. D. Waldon, W. T. White, S. T. Davis, Jr., L. H. Kittredge, and A. L. Pope.

The committee reiterated its decision made last October against members taking part in contests unsanctioned by the association.

HOPPE WON TWO GAMES.

World's Champion Easily Defeated Peterson—Made Good Averages.

Willie Hoppe, the world's champion, defeated C. T. Peterson yesterday in the afternoon and evening games in the series of special balkline billiard matches. Hoppe played 18-1 against Peterson's 18-2. The afternoon game was 300 points and the young champion ran out the necessary points in fifteen innings. In the fourth inning he ran 45 points, Peterson being unable to make any headway. From this point Hoppe ran away from his opponent. He obtained a perfect command of the ivories in the sixth inning and ran 90 before missing a difficult, long-draw shot. Three innings later he compiled 41 in his best style, and ran out his string with scores of 30 and 11. Peterson scored 40 points in his eighth and eleventh innings, but otherwise made a poor showing. The score by innings:

Hoppe—0 9 6 45 90 10 0 41 12 13 24 0 9 30 11. Total, 300. Average, 20. High runs, 90 45 41 30.

Peterson—6 4 32 0 4 21 40 9 11 40 0 1 7. Total, 148. Average, 10 8-14. High runs, 40 40 21.

In the evening game Peterson was again off his game, while he had more than his share of hard luck. Hoppe played a consistent game. His runs were very even, and only once did he fail to score. He scored more than twice as fast as Peterson, and finished his string of 400 points in seventeen innings, Peterson's string showing 181 when the champion ran out. The score by innings:

Hoppe—1 49 41 0 6 36 3 9 20 11 34 26 1 45 64 20 18. Total, 400; average, 23 9-17; high runs, 64, 49, 45, and 41.

Peterson—1 11 0 0 8 1 8 3 6 14 1 0 7 1 2 8 97. Total 181; average, 11 10-16; high runs, 97, 14, and 11.

Johnson Defeated Meehan at Pool.

C. Johnson (100) defeated F. Meehan (100) last night in the amateur pool tournament in progress at the Broadway Billiard Academy, by the close score of 100 to 94. Johnson's best single contribution was 16, while Meehan's high run was 17. To-night H. Schoenweg, (100,) the present leader in the tournament, and W. Crowell (125) will meet.

TOO MUCH RAIN FOR GIANTS.

Champions Spend Day in Poolrooms and Theatres—McGinnity Arrives.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 7.—From the diamond field to the poolroom and matinee was the change in tactics made by the Giants to-day, owing to a deluge which started shortly after midnight, keeping up in tantalizing doses throughout the forenoon until Manager McGraw sent word down the line that all hands might rest. Visits were paid to poolrooms, where odds could be had on New Orleans race results, while other players put in time at the billiard tables.

"Christy" Mathewson and others witnessed the afternoon performance of "Camille" by Mme. Bernhardt, and boosted the aged French actress's game so that after returning to the hotel there was a wholesale desire to see her play "La Sorciere" at the night performance. A hot tip that speculators had cornered the seat market, however, proved to be true. Catcher William Marshall, who arrived during the morning, attempted to do business with a speculator, but found $40 per pair as a minimum price for choice reservations. The Giants therefore cut out the theatre, and will prepare to wait for another farewell tour of the actress.

Joseph J. McGinnity also arrived this morning. Marshall has just put aside his medical books for another season of baseball, but expects to eventually sidetrack the National game for his practice. McGinnity looks in good condition, his eye being bright and clear and his color an indication of perfect health. He said that he had not been in a baseball uniform since the world's championship series.

AMERICANS AT BIRMINGHAM.

Greater New Yorks Greeted by Rain—Unable to Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 7.—Manager Clark Griffith and the other members of the Greater New York baseball team, who left New York on last Monday afternoon, arrived here early this morning. Jupiter Pluvius butted in during the afternoon, and prevented the practice that was scheduled. In the morning the Americans busied themselves strolling around Birmingham, and familiarizing themselves with the choicest "fans" in Dixie. Manager Griffith, in spite of the rain, paid a visit to the ball park, and said he was much pleased. He was accompanied by President Robert H. Baugh of the Birmingham Baseball Club and Manager Vaughan.

If there is no rain to-morrow the Southern League team and the Greater New Yorks will form themselves into two aggregations, and will busy themselves with driving slow grounders and knocking fly balls. The visitors are in fine fettle, and Griffith thinks that he has a chance to make the pennant winners hustle. He declined to declare himself positively as to the outcome of the championship, and smilingly said that he was the only manager who never claimed a pennant before the season began, and that he intended sticking to his determination. "We will do our best," was his final statement.

NEW ORLEANS TRACKS SLOW.

Scratches Reduced City Park Card to Six Races—Robertson Down.

NEW ORLEANS, March 7.—Owing to the sloppy condition of the City Park track and the number of scratches the sixth race was declared off to-day. Zinda, which far outclassed her field, was the only winning favorite, though Boserrian and Tom Dolan were equal choices in the first race.

Pursuing their investigation into the drugging of the horse Grenade, the Stewards to-day ruled off Abe Robertson, a rubber in the employ of J. H. McCormick, owner of the horse. Summaries:

FIRST RACE.—Three and one-half furlongs. Boserrian, 115 pounds, (Stille,) 11 to 5, won; Tom Dolan, 111, (Nicol,) 11 to 5, second; Odd Trick, 112, (Romanelli,) 5 to 2, third. Time—0:43 2-5. King Brush, Spion, Early Spring, Nannie Cohen, Edith M., and Leo Beach also ran.

SECOND RACE.—Mile. Colonel Bartlett, 119 pounds, (G. Schilling,) 15 to 1, won; Red Ruby, 109, (Dealy,) 20 to 1, second; Long Bright, 112, (Nicol,) 4 to 1, third. Time—1:48 2-5. Mayor Duncan, Lutie Mac, Sallie B. B., and Clover-nook also ran. Humpty Dumpty fell at the start.

ROAD DRIVERS' MEETING.

Distance Flag May Be Used in All Speedway Brushes.

The weekly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Road Drivers' Association was held last night at the Hotel Cadillac, Forty-third Street and Broadway, with Vice President W. M. Jermyn in the chair. Reports from the Speedway Parade and Cup Committees showed a satisfactory condition, and several important matters in connection with Speedway brushes were adopted.

The proposal to adopt a distance flag of fifty yards resulted in a long discussion and the matter was referred to the Brush Committee for action, together with the conditions for cup competition. It was suggested to set apart one or more of the cups for point winners, on the plan of the matinee races at the Empire City track last Summer, but a deal of opposition was aroused. The Cup Committee will decide the question and report at the next meeting of the association.

A special general meeting of the association has been called for next Wednesday, when an effort will be made to arouse more interest in the Speedway parade and horse show, and determine upon a permanent headquarters for the association.

Secretary Clark announced the official list of cups for Speedway brushes for the Spring and Fall. The cups were donated by Miss Julia Morosini, George H. Huber, C. S. Rice, E. Laplace, A. C. Schuyler, Dr. H. D. Gill, W. M. Jermyn, Frazer Wagon Company, Executive Committee, and Board of Directors. The ten cups will be competed for by Speedway horses in classes to be selected by the Cup Committee.

The question of the right of any member of the association to vote at a weekly meeting of the Board of Directors was decided by a motion which makes the meeting open to all members, with the privilege of voting.

Although there are still several points to be heard from, there is every assurance now that the nominations for the Saratoga Stakes will be unusually heavy. The class of horses engaged is up to the best that ever have been seen at the Spa, and the midsummer meeting promises the best of sport. All the principal stables have nominated liberally, and there is the same gathering of the East and the West, for which Saratoga has always been noted.

Five additional subscriptions have been received for the Saratoga Special, the principal two-year-old fixture, and these bring the total to nineteen, one less than the list of last year. When the California mails are received it is well-nigh certain that the total will be over the figure for 1905. The subscriptions received yesterday were: Harry Payne Whitney, two; Tippah Stock Farm, two, and John E. Madden, one. Entries thus far received are:

Bright weather and excellent track conditions resulted in yesterday being a busy day for the local trainers. Gravesend continues to be the principal exercise ground on Long Island, although there was much useful work at both the yearling track at Sheepshead Bay and at Brighton Beach. At Gravesend Frank Weir had about the full strength of his stable under saddle before the end of his exercises. Jacquin and Keator, in company, breezed a quarter in 0:14, after being indulged in a long gallop. Roseben and Clark Griffith, with three two-year-olds, received a slow gallop of a mile and repeat, and the others were only asked slow work. Roseben was more impressive in his appearance than ever before this Spring. He was pulling the boy out of the saddle all the way and wanted to go on at the end of the long gallop.

"Jim" McLaughlin, who is fitting a big string for Benning, had Race King, Jack McKeon, and High Brush out together, and after a warming-up gallop they were allowed to go along smartly for a half in 0:55. The Poet was worked alone and turned a clever six furlongs in 1:23½. Kuro, Blue Coat, and the Redfern filly Thaouka went along for a half in 0:53, with the latter showing the way. She is a four-year-old by Charade out of Flam, and never has started. The Galloper, Solly M., and Mode, of the two-year-old division, breezed three furlongs in 0:40. Sun Up and Moccasin, also two-year-olds, breezed the same distance in 0:40½, and Miss Dixon and Sunburst went a quarter in 0:26½.

Fred Burlew sent Green Room and Belmere three furlongs in 0:40½, and the way the move was accomplished pronounces both of them close to racing condition. Wentworth, the two-year-old brother to Old England, with two other colts of the same age, stepped a quarter in 0:26¼. Marius Calus showed a fine turn of speed when he went along for a quarter in 0:25¼, and he wanted to go further. The others in the big string had nice open gallops, though no speed questions were asked.

The full list of entries for the Benning Spring race meeting handicaps, the Washington Nursery, the Oxnard Dinner Stakes, the Jesse Brown Cup, Chevy Chase Steeplechase, and the Spring Handicap Steeplechase have all been received and in most cases show a gratifying increase over previous years. The Benning Handicap received 51 entries, one less than last year, but the other five show appreciable increases, the Oxnard Dinner Stakes having 30, the Jesse Brown Cup 85, Chevy Chase Steeplechase 13, the Spring Handicap 40, and the Washington Nursery no less than 50 entries. There are three stakes for two-year-olds, the Nursery, the Jesse Brown Cup, and the Oxnard Dinner Stakes.

GOLF ON PUBLIC LINKS.

New York Club Reports Extensive Improvements at Van Cortlandt.

Plans for an active golf season on the public links at Van Cortlandt Park were discussed last night at the annual meeting of the members of the New York Golf Club held at the Hotel Astor. The course is closed now for improvements, and Secretary George W. Dorland reported to the members that all of the loose stones were being carted away, the greens leveled, and the bunkers repaired. He expected the course would be opened by the Park Department for use about the middle of April. The New York Club will take an active part in competitions, repeating its successful series of handicap events, and probably giving one or two larger club tournaments.

The following managers for three years were elected: Edward C. Robinson, William E. Trull, Jr., Louis R. Taylor, Justus M. Scrafford, and John Clingen. Alexander J. Watson was elected manager in the one-year class. The first meeting of the new Board of Managers will be held Saturday night, when the officers and Chairmen of committees will be chosen. The New York Golf Club now has 142 active members, and financially is in excellent condition.

Eight Yachts for Roosevelt Cup.

There will be at least eight boats built in the Sonder Klass to represent America in the race against the coming German yachts to be held off Marblehead next September for the Roosevelt Cup. Orders have been placed for these, and there is a chance that others may appear at the line when the trial races are held to select the three American defenders in August. The choice of designers insures the strongest representation America could have. Three of the craft will be built from designs by Edwin A. Boardman. Nat Herreshoff will design two, B. B. Crowninshield will build two, and Burgess & Packard will build one. Five of the boats, it is said, will be built at Lawley's.

THE DOUMA AND THE CZAR.

Our St. Petersburg dispatches seem to intimate that the Council at Tsarskoe Selo, by its decisions embodied in the latest Imperial manifesto and Imperial ukases, has done its utmost to nullify the Imperial manifesto of October 30 which they purport to construe.

That is extremely likely. We may even take it to be established;—

> Ease would recant
> Vows made in pain as violent and void.

The Czardom was in great trouble last Autumn. Risings aimed at the whole existing order of things were going on all over Russia, at least in all the industrial and consequently intelligential centres of Russia. The Czar's own person and his own family were in danger. Trusted and trustworthy advisers told him that the only method of avoiding those dangers was to admit the nation to participation in its own councils. But when this admission had done its work in quieting Russia, there were, of course, not wanting products of the old state of things to protest against the new. Of course they argued that the Czar could now "afford" to break his word, though they did not put it in that way, but only undertook to show him how he could "retract" in detail much of what he had granted in the lump. Doubtless the latest manifesto and ukases are the result of this reactionary counseling.

All the same, they do not amount to much. "Revolutions never go backward." And, moreover, they are not too unreasonable in themselves. That the assent of both houses is necessary to send a measure up for executive sanction is a principle of the most advanced Governments. That a veto kills a bill for the session in which it is introduced may be taken as a reasonable safeguard against cabal and faction. So may the provision that a bill which has passed only one house shall not be brought up again without Executive sanction. The oath of fidelity to "Emperor, Autocrat, and Holy Russia" is no more than the Russian equivalent of the oath of allegiance to the existing order of things which every Government exacts of its legislators.

It is true that the withdrawal from the Legislature of certain subjects, including those subjects which contain the most obvious opportunities for oppression and for corruption, is, for the time being, a fairly solid triumph for the reactionaries. But evidently it will not avail against a distinct popular "mandate." The mere existence of a Legislature which can authentically exhibit the desires of the people of Russia, who have hitherto been prevented from voicing their own desires, is such an immense advance upon the past that almost any sacrifice should be made to insure it. Herr BEBEL, in Germany, is by no means a person acceptable at Court, and we are by no means sure that his counsel is always good. But the mere fact that Herr BEBEL can say what seems good to him in the Reichstag, though he could not with impunity say one per cent. of it out of doors, is of great value to Germany. His immunity is that provided by the Constitution of the United States for Members of Congress, in providing that "for any speech or debate in either house they shall not be questioned in any other place." So long as the members of the Douma are secured free speech, and so long as the newspapers of Russia are privileged to report what they say, the beginnings of a beneficent transformation are assured to the Russian Empire. In view of such a popular victory, it seems almost puerile to object to the restrictions which are put upon the legislative power of the Douma. The main point is that an arena of free discussion shall at last be opened to Russia.

COMPENSATORY RATES.

The Senators and Representatives from the Southern States all appear to be moved by a desire to help the President's rate bill out of its difficulties, but none of them has come forward with a practical suggestion worthy to be compared in value with the amendment proposed by Senator BAILEY of Texas. Mr. BAILEY would pander to the prejudices of the Constitutional lawyers by making provision for a review by the courts, but he proposes the further amendment that for the words "fairly remunerative" of the Hepburn bill there should be substituted the words "justly compensatory." That is to say, the rates fixed by the Commission must be "justly compensatory." The President is said to be satisfied with this amendment. If he and the other supporters of the Hepburn bill like the word compensatory, we see no reason why the opponents of the measure should object to it. Time might be saved, possibly, by adding the words "or confiscatory" to Mr. BAILEY's amendment. It would come to that, we imagine, as soon as the courts were called on to pass upon the bill.

Compensation is not the same thing as remuneration. A rate just covering the cost of the service without any return to capital would meet the terms of Senator BAILEY's amendment. Remuneration implies something more; profits, for instance. Compensation is a counterbalance, an equivalent, a return for something taken. Compensatory damages mean the repayment of the value of the thing taken, or a requital for the loss inflicted. If market value or the amount of the loss be exceeded, the damages become exemplary; that is, the party in the wrong pays compensation and something more. Remuneration implies more than the cost of service. A remunerative occupation, for instance, means a profitable occupation.

If a freight rate were merely compensatory the railroad would get back just the cost of the service. The Treasurer of a railroad operated under such conditions might lead a happy life. If he got in all the items of cost and apportioned the same fairly among the shippers he would always have money enough to pay his bills. But if the owners of the road called upon him for dividends he would be in a bad fix. As the bill thus amended would authorize the Commission to take away from the owners of railroads the full value of their property with the exception of interest-bearing securities, it would be unconstitutional and void from the beginning. In the constitutional sense a merely compensatory rate would be confiscatory.

Why make any further fuss about the matter, then? The President and the other supporters of the bill have been content with it in its present probably unconstitutional form. If they would like it better with an amendment certainly unconstitutional, it would be better to let them have their way.

FARMERS' RESERVES.

According to the January report our exports of agricultural products for seven months increased $107,000,000, yet our supplies are far from exhausted. A leading unofficial estimate makes the quantities remaining in farmers' hands as follows, and we add for comparison the official figures for this time last year:

	1906.	1905.
Wheat, bushels..	176,000,000	111,000,000
Wheat, price....	$0.87	$1.21
Corn, bushels....	1,077,000,000	954,000,000
Corn, price......	$0.48½	$0.58½
Oats, bushels....	871,000,000	847,000,000
Oats, price.......	$0.35	$0.37½

Here are 213,000,000 bushels above the quantity which was a sufficiency last year. If we export it, our money market will benefit. If we keep it, we have a guarantee against shortage in the crops soon to be planted. Sooner or later the railways will have the carriage of it, in one form or another, and their inability to handle any more than they have may help to explain why remaining stocks are so large. A better reason is the abundance of last year's crops, whose stimulative force is not yet spent. It is not surprising that all these grains are cheaper than at the corresponding date last year, and it is never easy to be fully sympathetic with those who suffer from superabundance of such necessities.

The situation regarding cotton cannot be stated similarly, because we are in the middle of a crop. Nobody knows how many bales were in the crop just picked, and only the rashest guess at the acreage soon to be planted. These facts, however, are suggestive:

	Visible Supply. Bales.	Price. Cents.
1906......................	5,146,160	11.30
1905......................	4,224,271	7.85

Here there is no indication of scarcity, present or future. That there is enough actual staple existing is cumulatively proved by the smaller visible supply of earlier years, and that there is unlikely to be any shortage is a fair deduction from the excellent price as the planting season approaches. It would be no misfortune if the price of cotton should fall into relation with the statistical situation as the price of grains has already done.

TRADES UNIONS AND VIOLENCE.

The indictment of two men for plotting to explode dynamite in the works of a firm against which a strike is pending is resented by the officers of the Housesmiths' Union as "a put-up job to bring the union into disrepute." How far that explanation can be made to hold will be disclosed on the trial of the accused. On the face of it it is a very thin explanation, involving as participants or dupes in the "job" the District Attorney's office, Inspector McLAUGHLIN, and a dozen or more experienced detectives and policemen. It also involves two confederates of the man who furnished the evidence to the police, both having resisted arrest when found on the premises where the dynamite was, according to the testimony before the Grand Jury, to have been exploded.

The incident is not an isolated one. The employers against whom the strike has been declared and has been in operation some four months have had their property repeatedly injured and destroyed, and their men assaulted, and other employers, notably the RAVITCH BROTHERS in Harlem, who have had "trouble" with the Housesmiths' Union, have suffered in the same way. Are we to believe that there is a widespread conspiracy including at least three firms of employers, besides the police and the District Attorney's Office, and something like a score of men who have been beaten, some of them seriously, all for the purpose of "bringing the Housesmiths' Union into disrepute"?

Unquestionably that union is in very grave disrepute indeed. But it is not due to the action of others, it is due to its own action or refusal to act. If the officers of the union really believe that men, falsely pretending to be members, are engaged in getting themselves under arrest for violence, arson, destruction of property, and endangering life, solely to harm the union, what are they doing about it? What steps are they taking to expose such singular and unprecedented and risky offenses? On the other hand, what are they doing really to detect and punish any members of their union whose misguided zeal may lead them to illegal acts? It is well known that the means at their disposal for such purposes are unusually effective, if they choose to employ them. They have intimate acquaintance with all their members, or can have. Not one of these can do anything hurtful to the union without being promptly brought to account for it. The discipline of the union is strict and complete, and the machinery by which it is maintained is very ingenious and trustworthy. What use is made of it to detect, prevent, or punish violations of the law or of the rights of non-union workmen? So far as is known, so far as the officers of the union have informed the public, absolutely nothing.

The spirit of the Housesmiths' Union, and, we regret to say, the spirit of most of the unions, is in effect lawless. Occasionally it happens that the unions take special pains to see that the law is obeyed, and they deserve praise when they do so, but the cases are highly exceptional. There is practically no effective desire among the unions to defend the law, no affirmative action to prevent its violation. It is the gravest evil connected with them. It flows naturally enough from the underlying false notion of the unions that their members are entitled to a monopoly of employment. We are in no sense enemies of the trades unions; we believe that they have, with all their faults, accomplished excellent results, and that they can do much that is useful in the future in the way of securing better terms for workers who earn them. But every case of indifference or worse toward the rights of others, especially every case of violence, weakens them for their legitimate uses and invites hostile organization to oppose them. Quite apart from that consideration is the fact that this is a law-respecting and law-abiding Nation, and any class that undertakes to defy the law is bound in the long run to suffer the penalty. The longer the imposition of the penalty is deferred, the more severe will be its application when the patience of the people is exhausted.

URBS VS. RUS.

That was a very pregnant question put to last Sunday's meeting of the People's Institute by a loud-voiced interrupter who announced himself as from the suburban districts, "Ain't it better for you folks who find your work monotonous to quit it?"

The People's Institute is understood to be a forum and arena for the lower east siders. Thither they resort on Sunday evenings for many reasons. One of these reasons, doubtless, is that the meeting relieves the monotony of life on the lower east side. Perhaps the most compelling reason is that it is cheap. But, as the negro preacher said, on a famous interrogation: "Such questions as that would upset any system of theology."

It does not follow that the question is as unanswerable as the questioner assumed. Perhaps the questioner had already some houses and lots to sell in some presumably squalid suburb, and was not the altruistical philosopher he appeared. Perhaps he was one of the owners of farm lands at the other end of the Blackwell's Island Bridge, who are dividing their farm lands into building lots in anticipation of the completion of that work, and already, it seems, in the prices they are asking for their holdings, discounting the completion of that bridge, and rather more, and thereby furnishing arguments specious, if not cogent, to the followers of the late HENRY GEORGE.

The plain fact is that if the discontented workers in the great centres chose to go "out into the country" and till the soil, the questions the People's Institute exists to agitate and discuss would not arise at all. The words of the old song of two generations ago are still true, "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm." In truth Uncle Sam's domain is nearly exhausted. But there are many hundreds of square miles in New England, perfectly open to be worked "on shares" by any agriculturist, with the certainty of a frugal support for himself and his family, and with better surroundings, in many respects, than he can command in an east side slum. Why does not the east sider go there?

The real answer is that he is not that kind of person. Either he is uninterested in agricultural pursuits, and knows no way of getting his living but by traffic, like the east side Jew, or he is a worker for wages, having in view the saving of enough of his wages to enable him to return to his own country and spend the rest of his days in agriculture among congenial surroundings, like the east side Italian. But in neither case would it be fair to say that his chief complaint of his actual surroundings is that they are "monotonous." The stentorian commuter who imputed that complaint to him is either ill-informed or disingenuous. In fact, his objection to suburban, and still more to rural, residence is precisely that it is more monotonous than the crowded, unwholesome, squalid environment of the lower east side, in which, nevertheless, he does find human companionship, and which he does find eventful and exciting. So long as he works for wages, so long he must live within accessible distance of his work. If he be a trafficker, it is plain that he cannot peddle shoelaces to advantage in Astoria or Weehawken. And, in either case, it is precisely the monotony of those places of residence, in spite of the possibilities of a "front yard" and a garden patch, which depresses him, and makes him resolve rather to stick to the ills he has, with a Sunday evening off at the Cooper Union, and week-day evenings at such other resorts as are open to him, than to fly to others that he knows not of, but that he justly apprehends, in the "monotonous" suburbs within his scope of commutation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Better Than Paying Blackmail.

Though JOHN BOZZUFFI, the Italian "banker," whose little son was kidnapped on Sunday, was a little slow in informing the police of what had happened, he did do it, and he took what we cannot help thinking was exactly the right course in making vehement announcement that he would not, in any circumstances, pay blackmail to the brigands. Of course it was highly shocking to the sentimentalist, and not quite pleasing even to the moderately sensitive, for him to say, "I won't give up a penny, and, if the kidnappers think I will, I serve notice on them now that I have seven more children they can steal before I'll pay one cent of blackmail." That is just a bit too "Roman father," but it seems to have been extremely discouraging to the child stealers, for, forgetting all their terrible threats, they not only refrained from hurting the boy, but they allowed him to make his way to the street and back to his home, there to tell a story of adventure that sounded, indeed, a good deal like a dime novel, and yet is so well supported by details of demonstrated truth that it is likely to get his captors into serious trouble. For the stern BOZZUFFI is not a man to let matters rest where they are. He has his son back in safety as well as the seven other children, but he is quite Americanized enough to recognize the fact that he can best safeguard himself from the vengeance of the criminals who vainly tried to scare him out of his money by hunting them into the prison where they so well deserve to be. Just how great the chances were which this father took it would be hard to say, and if the kidnappers really had carried out their menaces his reflections would not now be pleasant. His course, however, was not only successful, but more quickly successful than its opposite has ever been, and it will undoubtedly have a decidedly depressing effect on the child-stealing industry. Mr. CUDAHY, who both treated with kidnappers and paid what they demanded, went through many days of anxiety before his son was returned, and he has since felt obliged to make a rather elaborate defense of what he felt to be a weakness more easily pardonable in a father than in a citizen. In this case it will perhaps be noticed by some that such activity as the police displayed accomplished nothing. The prisoner was kept in a tenement only a few blocks away from his home until the faint-hearted bandits decided that there was "nothing doing," and, apparently, he could have been kept there as long as it was deemed advisable. Since the detectives did so little in the way of unassisted discovery, it especially behooves them to do something in the way of bringing to punishment men who ought not now to be so very hard to find.

Regulation of Speed Here at Last.

At a time when there seemed to be dawning an era, if not exactly of good, at least of better, feeling between the automobilists and those whom one of our neighbors likes to call the Common People, it is especially lamentable that the ingenious inhabitants of Chatham, N. J., have invented a device for moderating—and keeping moderate—the speed of motor cars traversing their streets. For this device is not only simple and inexpensive, but it is almost diabolically well calculated both to inflict no end of pain on good automobilists as well as bad ones and at the same time to appeal to other folks as no less humorous than effective. What the Chathamites purpose is to construct all their crosswalks in such a manner that their tops will be some five inches above the general road level, but with a slope of cobblestones on each side with such a delicate adjustment of the inclination that a slowly moving automobile can pass with only a gentle oscillation of its occupants, while those going at speed will leap wildly into the air and be likely to come down with a vehemence disastrous to more than nerves. The Chatham crosswalks will be, in short, a reversal of what are, or used to be, called "thank-ye-ma'ams" in New England and were the terrors of the Winter roads. That they would be extremely efficient as speed regulators cannot be doubted for a moment, and human nature, alas! is such that many could watch with an interest not altogether sorrowful the unpremeditated postures which would be assumed by all automobilists who in ignorance or forgetfulness might attempt to pass along the Chatham roads at their accustomed velocity. The spectacle, we fear, would be considered funny by everybody who had ever had an irksome experience with a too-ambitious or too-inconsiderate chauffeur, and this makes it highly probable that other towns will see merits in this crosswalk scheme. If they do it will be a terrible blow to the automobilists, and even more of them than now will begin to think of aerodromes.

On Guard Against "Militarism."

It is at once strange and discouraging that a man as able and intelligent as Senator HALE can see in the proposed increase and reform of the Army Medical Service only another evidence of that tendency toward militarism which has filled his imagination ever since the Spanish war began. The plan, he told his brother Senators this week, was only one of many for the enlargement of the military establishment—part of the plot concocted by the wicked General Staff for reducing the civilian population of the country to a bondage in which all their energies would be devoted to the maintenance of an enormous army. How little the Senator knows about the emotions with which most of our older officers regard the efforts of those who would put the Medical Service in a state of efficiency approaching that of Japan's! And he seems to think that our present system of caring for the army's health needs changing only as preparation for competition with the great armaments of Europe! For even a member of the Senate to express such opinions he must have been at most laborious pains to keep himself uninformed on the subjects he discusses. As a matter of fact, though we have army surgeons at least as competent as those of Japan, we are not utilizing their ability to anything like its full extent, and, even if our army were never to be called upon for the performance of harder tasks than those of the last ten years, the need for both the enlargement and the reformation of the Medical Service is urgent. And the reformation is even more to be desired than the enlargement. If Senator HALE and those like him would only permit, or rather compel, the adoption of a system under which our army surgeons could do for our soldiers what those of Japan did for theirs—with no very visible diminution of their military value—the increase of numbers might easily wait a while. With increase of authority alone, and a more enlightened understanding on the part of the line officers of what the surgeons should do and where they should do it, the most important of the reforms desired would be attained.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—During the reading of the message from the President on the coal and oil investigation resolution in the House to-day, Mr. Littlefield, one of the seven Republicans who voted against the Hepburn Rate Regulation bill, sat on the back of his chair and listened with a seraphic grin on his face. When the clerk came to that part of the message commenting on the extreme occupation of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, Littlefield's grin became an almost audible chuckle.

"Busy, are they?" he said afterward, still chuckling. "Well, if they are so busy with their ordinary duties now that they can't take on an investigation that is already two-thirds made for them by somebody else, I wonder how they will get along with the work the President wants to put on them by his rate bill?"

Senator Perkins took the floor to-day to argue the Statehood question. Mr. Perkins is a wholly uninspired orator. His dearest friend has never called him a second Demosthenes. While he spoke there were two lonely Senators on the Democratic side, Morgan and Mallory, and they were busy talking and did not hear the speech. On the Republican side a score of Senators sat busily reading pamphlets and writing letters.

But Perkins had one listener who was enthralled, thrilled, stirred to his very depths. This Senator took a seat beside Perkins, and leaning his chin on his hand looked up at the orator in adoring expression. He was as one drinking in wisdom from the fountain head. This Senator was Mr. Foraker.

Mr. Perkins was speaking in favor of the Foraker amendment.

Senator Philander C. Knox's legal residence is in Pittsburg, but he owns one of the finest farms in the country near Valley Forge, where he spends the Summer. At a dinner given the other night to the members of the Pennsylvania delegation in Congress by Senator Penrose, Representative Acheson of Washington, Penn., told a story of Knox's boyhood days at Brownsville, Penn. Mr. Acheson referred to the Senator as the "farmer of Valley Forge."

"Senator Knox early evinced a fondness for agricultural pursuits," said Mr. Acheson. "An old lady at Brownsville told me that during the civil war a boy about ten years old and no higher than a doorknob came to her father's house one morning and asked if he did not want some one to dig his potatoes. It was 'Phil' Knox. Her father gave the boy a hoe and put him to work in the garden. He dug the potatoes and put them in the cellar. He worked all day and it was dark when he demanded his pay.

"The old gentleman opened a bedtick and took out a woolen stocking filled with silver. At that time 'shinplasters' had driven silver out of circulation, and little of it had been seen in Brownsville for years. The future statesman got a silver dollar, which he eyed curiously first one side, then the other.

"When he had satisfied himself that it was real money he put it in his pocket and watched the old gentleman restore the stocking to its hiding place. Then he called the daughter to one side and in a cautious voice asked: 'How did he get all that money?'

"Thus," said Mr. Acheson, "at an early age Pennsylvania's farmer-Senator showed that he was suspicious of aggregations of capital and evinced that spirit of inquiry which later led to the dissolution of the Northern Securities merger."

Cordite Better Food Than Dynamite.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of Dr. Howard James's letter in re "Dynamite Eating" in Mexico, I should like to say that it is by no means an impossible habit, nor is it altogether a "pipe dream." It is done in Mexico and other parts of the world. Personally I prefer cordite, whose constituent parts are similar to dynamite, though different in results, in that one's headache is not so bad after overindulgence.

I am speaking quite seriously when I say that during the late South African Boer war our men frequently opened a cartridge and took out the little yellow strands of cordite and ate them. We always found that hunger was allayed, but overindulgence caused just the symptoms described by Dr. Howard James in his letter, that of vertigo, tumultuous heart action, flushing of the face, followed by a dull and depressing headache. The first sensations, however, were not altogether unpleasant, and I have known men who professed to have made a habit of it, but most of us confined ourselves to lighting our pipes with the vermicelli-like stuff, which made an excellent fusee by lighting it at a campfire.

BRITISH COLONIAL.

New York, March 6, 1906.

Man's Right to Flirt.

While Mr. Justice Bargrave Deane of London has hardly placed the stamp of his judicial approval on married flirts, or indorsed platonic polygamy, but no doubt his remarks will be comforting to many gentlemen of errant fancy. He declared that flirting did not in law constitute cruelty, and that so far as the law was concerned a man might love as many women as he pleased provided that he did not allow his love for them to destroy his love for his wife.

"If no married man is allowed to go for a walk with a girl we should all be in a very uncomfortable position," he added, in charging the jury in a recent divorce suit.

Just So.

From The Louisville Courier-Journal.

"I thought you said you couldn't live without me," sneered the girl.

"So I did," answered the man.

"Yet you're living."

"No; I'm not. Just boarding; that's all."

TEMPERANCE A VIRTUE.

In Statements from High Places as Well as in the Use of Alcohol.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On returning to town after a short absence, I have had my attention called to the remarkable revelation which appears to have been made by the Rev. Madison C. Peters of certain feminine excesses at a recent social function, a "luncheon," in this city. On that occasion, it would appear, twenty-four young women, presumably of the upper class, consumed collectively much wine and many cigarettes; the bibbers, in bulk, being credited with the absorption of thirty-seven bottles of champagne—a little over one and one-half bottles per young woman—while, incidentally, the fifteen members of the hilarious gathering, to whom alone are ascribed nicotian proclivities, are said to have smoked over five cigarettes apiece.

As one who is deeply interested in the cause of true temperance, I must express my great regret that a clerical gentleman of Mr. Peters's prominence in this community should have thus put himself on record as a disseminator of obvious misrepresentations in regard to the habits of our young women; and that, as the victim of a gullibility so great that he could swallow the extraordinary information which was fed to him, on the one hand, by "a woman of the highest social standing," and, on the other hand, by "the policeman on the block," the value of his future testimony illustrative of the drink-evil will be seriously depreciated.

"Save us from our friends!" is an invocation with which we are all familiar, and the present instance is one in which that invocation may be sadly said, or sighed, by those of us who, like myself, are untheatrical advocates of temperance. The gross facts of intemperance, properly so-called, are ever present to our observation, and need no reinforcement by illustrations gathered from dubious sources by eminent divines. It may be that young women (or, if you will, women generally) of gentle origin and refinement are surrendering their souls to the charms of alcoholic exhilaration. In other times and climes such a social horror was not unknown; but, in this age and Nation it is incredible that, at a "luncheon" could be gathered twenty-four young women capable of, and responsible for, the consumption, per head, at a single sitting, of one and one half bottles of champagne—to say nothing of the cigarettes!

Overzeal in the advocacy of any cause is always injudicious and invites disaster. Here I perceive is a well-marked case of overzeal. Mastered by his purpose to overthrow the demon alcohol by any means available to him, Mr. Peters appears to have lent an eager ear to statements which bear the stamp of idle gossip. As good wine needs no bush, according to the ancient saw, so the good cause of temperance needs no buttressing by the presentation of "terrible examples" of the kind suggested by the myth which Mr. Peters trustfully accepts and seeks to thrill us with; and I, for one, protest against the gratuitous gross sensationalism of such action on the part of our reverend and revered pastors and masters in morality.

Getting Rid of Dying Patients.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am glad to see that an effort is to be made to stop this transferring of dying patients from the various city hospitals to Bellevue. A patient may be the lowest of humanity, but when he is dying he would seem to have a claim to do it in quietness and peace, not amid the sound of clanging bells and the rush and hurry of the city's business. One has only to be a short time in the neighborhood of Bellevue to learn how much of this sad transferring goes on, for outside ambulances are continually driving up. A glance at the statistics of the hospitals shows under "discharged, not cured," how this is accounted for on the records. Let us hope it will end.

New Solution of Insurance Problem.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why not pass a law requiring that life insurance funds shall be invested in State, municipal, and county bonds only, and be apportioned to the different States in proportion to the amount of insurance written from the different States. I presume these bonds so used would not be subject to taxation, and the income, it seems to me, would be greater than that realized by the present methods of investment. Furthermore, it would not be necessary to have a number of men at $50,000 to $150,000 per year to manage "the business." A few honest men and some honest clerks could handle it all right. The people would then get what they pay for at a nominal expense, and there would be that degree of safety in insurance which would give the companies all the business they might want.

Hands Off the Bankruptcy Law!

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a credit man I wish to express commendation of your editorial "Defending the Bankruptcy Law."

In my humble opinion there are only two classes of traders who can advance tenable arguments—from personal interest—for the repeal of this admirable act; they are the dishonest debtor and the influential creditor who, under the old system, were in position to gain advantage through the intricacies of the separate State laws.

All others should immediately acquire a correct understanding of the facts and exert all the influence they possess for the preservation of the National law as it stands to-day.

No More Fatal Letters.

From The Boston Transcript.

The newest thing in paper is the disappearing kind. Soused in diluted sulphuric acid and then carefully glazed, it looks like the paper that abideth; but slowly the acid nibbles at the fibres under the glazing, till in a week or so the substance has clean gone out of it and the place thereof knows it no more. A most convenient sort of paper—when you're the one to use it.

You can now write promissory notes without a shudder. You can flirt by mail with perfect composure. You can even sign the pledge, if you like, and after several days' abstinence rejoin your "former associates." The grim sentence, "What I have written I have written," loses nine-tenths of its terror, and Omar's remarks about the "moving finger" are reduced to agreeable nonsense, for who wants to "wash out one word" when a judicious choice of stationery will insure the evanishment of the entire document? Moreover, we're enabled henceforth to scorn the fear that some day our adversary will confront us with a "deadly parallel."

From all this it's apparent that the world's peace is at last within measurable distance of realization. The prime basis of rows is paper. It's over paper that lawsuits and battles are chiefly waged. Abolish treaties, contracts, and promissory notes, and you usher in an era of all-around amiability.

Sure Proof of Death.

From The London Mail.

An Australian official sent a telegram from an outlying station:—"Stationmaster has died. Shall I bury him?" The reply was sent:—"Yes, but please make sure he is really dead." The report came back:—"Have buried stationmaster. Made sure he was dead by hitting him twice on the head with a fishplate."

REAL INSURANCE REFORM.

To Oppose the Demand for It Is to Invite Trouble.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to your able editorial of the 21st ult. relating to Mutual Life affairs, also to the article "Illinois Central Wrested from Fish," both relating to Mr. Fish's resignation from the Mutual Investigating Committee, will you permit me to state my opinion as to the dilatory tactics said to be resorted to by the Mutual's new management?

The investigations of the Armstrong Insurance Committee have aroused the people. They are awake. Let the man or set of men beware who trifle with the interests of the owners of those vast funds. No railroad or banking ring dare control them. Those who violate the law must be prosecuted. If nothing else be accomplished, it will elevate the morals of the Nation.

If those now in control represent cliques of capitalists seeking selfish ends, let them step down and out, or an outraged people will oust them. Life insurance companies must and will be managed by the insured, for the insured, and neither capitalistic combinations nor morality-preaching out-of-town charlatans will be considered proper guardians. Real reforms are demanded, and the sooner those in control comprehend this the better for all concerned. The air is surcharged with discontent. To oppose public sentiment would mean disaster.

A POLICY HOLDER.

New York, March 6, 1906.

IS THE FAULT THE VOTER'S?

And Is the Government No Better Than He Deserves?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your account of the Hunter-Stokes house party is amusing and at the same time rather disheartening as a proof that each of those who apparently have a deep desire to do something for the betterment of conditions is carried away with his own pet theory of government.

Having served a term as member of the Board of Supervisors of one of our counties in this State, I have gained a first-hand experience of practical politics at the bottom of the ladder, so to speak.

This experience has changed my opinion that this form of government was not good enough to the opinion that it is entirely too good for the average man in this country at the present time.

If it were not for the docility and viciousness of our average man it would be impossible for the corruption and hollow mockery of our present Government to exist!

Let the Hunter-Stokes party improve the average man first, and only after that let them worry about the form of government!

A Complicated Accusation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a late issue of your paper you vivaciously and somewhat flippantly endeavor to belittle the manly attitude of Messrs. Stokes and Patterson to get at Truth—social and economic and moral Truth—and to stand out for it conscientiously, even before they arrive at hoary "old age." Must a man of intelligence and character become hoary with age and sin before he should express his views on the flagrant, hideous, and obvious wrongs of modern mammonism? Or do you really think it adds to your paper's dignity and claims for "fair play" before a reading public to suppress Mr. Russell's testimony for municipal ownership in the January number of Everybody's Magazine, which contains the very limitations and qualifications Mr. Patterson declares make a further step to Socialism necessary, while you color his later paper in the opposite direction?

Responsible Dramatic Criticism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to heartily indorse a communication in your yesterday morning's paper regarding the flippant nature of some dramatic criticism. The newspaper reader of intelligence who is interested in the theatre turns with pleasure to just such a criticism as appears in the same edition concerning "The Embassy Ball."

There one has a serious consideration that conveys a clear idea of the play—free from all attempts at literary vaudeville.

Though I have not seen the performance that brought forth "Warren's" letter, I am convinced that a large percentage of playgoers are heartily in sympathy with the sentiments expressed.

A Bad Bill.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial in to-day's TIMES commenting on Assemblyman De Groot's bill is all that it should be. Assemblyman De Groot's bill is, of course, an enormity. It is thoroughly abnormal in conception as well as intention; and its enormity of reach reduces it to a futile absurdity. Besides, the bill makes manifest the existence of a good deal of physical cowardice and a squeamish, intellectual skepticism common to busybody believers in signs, witchcraft, and ghosts. The bill typifies a reactionary form of hysterical superstition and benighted fear. Let us hope the Assembly will shut the lid on it.

THE FEMALE G. A. R.

Another member of the original Florodora sextet has married.—News Item.

The balconies are crowded,
The orchestra is packed,
The poor standees by hundreds
Behind the seats are stacked,
A splendid sight—these legions
In full convention met,
The whole of Florodora's
Original sextet.

The President arises
And says: "My fellow-stars,
Once more I hear the prelude's
Premonitory bars,
I see our famed half dozen
In serried ranks appear,
Three hundred by the footlights,
Three thousand in the rear.

"I see the little chorus
All swallowed 'mid our throng,
I hear the mighty thunders
As we break into song,
I feel the theatre rocking
Amid the awful din
As our immense battalions
Their little dance begin."

"Ah! halcyon days of glory!
You'll never reappear
To six despondent ladies."
(Six thousand cries of "Hear!")
"For bygone 'Florodora'
Let's weep, ye five and I—
Shall we adjourn to do so?"

MET THE SEA COW AND VANQUISHED IT

Exciting Doings in Florida by Commodore Lyon's Party.

W. B. HORD WAS ONE HERO

His Oyster Knife and Mrs. Hord's Real Lace Finished the Job the .22-Calibre Rifle Began.

Commodore Whitney Lyon of the Columbia Yacht Club reports by letter to THE TIMES an experience off the coast of Florida which appears to have been not without thrills. Commodore Lyon and Mrs. Lyon have been in Florida some three weeks; they are due to return and tell the folks all about it within a week. Meantime—

The Commodore, Mrs. Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dale, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Hord, and Commodore Leland Sterry of the Lake Worth Yacht Club were cruising on Lake Worth the other day in an electric launch. Lake Worth is a long strip of water on the southeast coast of Florida, opening directly into the sea.

Well, all those mentioned, as well as the crew of the launch, "were thrown into a wild state of excitement," the letter says, "when a large, dark object having every appearance of a sea serpent rose to the surface of the water at short intervals."

Commodore Whitney Lyon does not say it was a sea serpent, but that it had "every appearance" of one. Sea serpent or no sea serpent, however, "something had to be done, and done quickly," the letter says. "The only weapon of defense on board was a .22-calibre rifle that belonged to the Captain of the launch."

Seizing this, Commodore Lyon, who is one of the crack shots of the Larchmont Yacht Club and has hunted ducks on Long Island, took careful aim, despite the excitement in the boat. Then he fired. "Squarely between the eyes" did he hit the "sea cow." An unmistakable sea cow had materialized from the vague image of a sea serpent.

"Immediately the monster sank," continues the letter, "leaving only a red patch of blood on the surface of the water. He remained down but a short time, rising again about twenty feet from the little boat, snorting and lashing the water into foam in his fury. He then started straight for the launch."

But Mr. Hord, who is a Wall Street lawyer, was ready for him. He grabbed up an oyster knife from the bottom of the boat, and "hurriedly tearing a strip of real lace from his wife's gown," he tied the oyster knife to the end of a boathook. "And as the great monster approached Mr. Hord braced himself and thrust the improvised weapon of defense deep into the breast of the animal."

Thus was the monster dispatched. "He thrashed about for a few seconds," the letter continues, "rose half out of the water, and then sank forever, leaving only a great circle of white foam streaked with the monster's blood."

Thus was the little launch and all on board saved (1) by Commodore Lyon, who had fired the .22-calibre rifle so true; (2) by the old Captain, who had so wisely brought the rifle; (3) by Mr. Hord of Wall Street, who had so strongly thrust the improvised weapon of defense, and (4) by Mrs. Hord, who so nobly had yielded the lace from her gown, without which the oyster knife might not have been tied strongly enough to the boathook to stand the thrusting into the breast of the monster.

"The sea cow is not often seen in Florida waters," writes Commodore Lyon, "and this one must have come up from the Gulf of Mexico to feed on the grasses at the bottom of Lake Worth. In appearance the sea cow resembles very much an ordinary cow, having hair, mouth, and a head much the same shape. In place of legs it has flippers like those of a seal."

Apparently Commodore Whitney Lyon and his party met one of the manatee family, which frequent Brazilian and West Indian waters. These animals grow to be eight or nine feet long, "although," the wise man says in the encyclopedia, "they are often reported to be some thirty or forty feet long."

Commodore Whitney Lyon, his brother says, is 40 years old. He belongs to many clubs here. Charles Dale is also known in New York clubs. Mr. Hord, who so strongly thrust the oyster knife, has an office at 10 Wall Street, and belongs to the New York Athletic Club. Commodore Leland Sterry belongs to the New York Athletic Club and lives at Bryn Mawr, Penn.

BOSTON SYMPHONY QUARTET.

A New Serenade Played for the First Time—Mme. Samaroff as Pianist.

The third concert of the Boston Symphony Quartet given last evening in Mendelssohn Hall was an occasion of exceptional interest in several ways. It gave the first hearing of a recent composition by Max Reger, the young German composer who is striving for the first place in "modernity" in the musical world at present. Although musical Germany is filled with strife and controversy over his music at the present time, very little of it has been heard here publicly. An important choral work will be added to this short list to-night by the Musical Art Society. The piece that was played last evening was trio for violin, flute, and viola. The programme also brought forward one of the later quartets of Beethoven least often played—that in E flat, Op. 127; and between these Prof. Willy Hess and Mme. Samaroff played Strauss's sonata for piano and violin.

Reger's trio has very little of the eccentricity, the "flightiness," and the enormous complication that are to be found in many of his compositions. It is called a serenade, and it has a gayety and lightness of touch that do not belie its title. Though there is much of the chromatic shiftiness in the melodic outline that he is fond of, there is also more of straightforward tunefulness than most moderns allow themselves, or are able to command. The composer makes most adept use of his unusual instrumental combination; the music seems lifted up into a certain ethereal region by the combination of the flute and violin resting upon the basis of the viola. The style is extraordinarily delicate and full of the refinements of contrapuntal device, employed with naturalness and freedom. The slow movement is a theme with variations, and the third movement, which is the last, is an aerial presto. No doubt the substance of the music is slight, but the composer has aimed at a certain character and effect in it which he has been wholly successful in producing. The work is charming, and was charmingly played, Prof. Hess and Mr. Férir having the assistance of Mr. Maquarre, first flutist of the Boston Orchestra.

Prof. Hess and Mme. Samaroff gave a splendidly robust and vigorous performance of Strauss's beautiful sonata, which seems more and more to make secure its place as one of the finest modern works in its form. The last movement especially they played with a spirit of juvenile impulsiveness that was joined to a clear view of it as a definite and well-balanced whole, and this is one of the chief difficulties the sonata presents.

The quartet has not played better than it did in Beethoven's eloquent music, which offers many stumbling blocks to perfect ensemble and perfect intonation. Clearly it had been studied with care and understanding, and it was presented with more beauty of tone and a finer balance than the players have sometimes achieved. There was an audience of good size that manifested intelligent enthusiasm.

CONRIED AT THE BAR.

His Counsel Argues That Sunday Concerts Are Soul-Inspiring.

The scene of the third act in the Conried case was laid yesterday in the Court of Special Sessions. Justice Deuel presided and with him were Justices Olmsted and McKean.

In the absence of Inspector Schmittberger, who has just undergone an operation on his eye, Frank C. Lammon, one of the patrolmen who accompanied him to the performance of Verdi's "Requiem Mass" to see if the Sunday law was violated, took the stand. He told how persons bought tickets and librettos, but he couldn't describe all the orchestral instruments.

"Were there violins?" asked Assistant District Attorney Krotel.

"Yes, violins, cornets, and—and—" he replied.

"'Cellos?" suggested counsel.

The witness nodded and they let it go at that.

Ex-Judge Dittenhoefer for the defense was satisfied with Lammon's admissions that there were no costumes or curtain, and called the Herr Direktor.

"Is not Verdi's 'Requiem Mass' performed in churches?" he was asked.

"On the most solemn occasions," answered Mr. Conried.

"It is sung in churches as you sing it at the Opera House?"

"Ach! we sing much better."

"But there is no payment for admission in churches," urged Mr. Krotel.

"They hand around the plate, don't they?" answered Judge Dittenhoefer.

Judge Dittenhoefer in his argument dealt with technical points. He contended that the law never meant to prohibit concerts on Sunday, but held that the hearing of music in a concert hall was as elevating and soul-inspiring as in a church.

Mr. Conried stood meantime at the bar, a far-away look in his eyes, while the Clerk of the Court enjoyed himself thoroughly with the jokes in the Opera House programme. Mr. Krotel asked for time to prepare a brief in reply and said:

"At any rate the defendant has violated Section 263 of the Greater New York charter in performing labor on Sunday not required by charity or necessity."

Judge Dittenhoefer requested the court to prepare an opinion on the case, and the hearing was adjourned to next Tuesday morning.

INDEPENDENTS GET THEATRES

Reported to Control Majestic Houses Here and in Boston.

It is understood that Lee Shubert of the firm of Shubert Brothers, theatrical managers, has secured from A. L. Arthur the control of the Majestic theatres in this city and in Boston. The houses will be used for the booking of independent attractions only.

Mr. Shubert said yesterday that he had nothing to say about the matter. He refused to deny that he had obtained the [illegible]s.

Bi[illegible] Changed at the Irving Place.

At the Irving Place Theatre last evening Lina Abarbanell appeared in the farce comedy "Kyritz-Pyritz," instead of "Papagene," the announced piece. Sickness of some of the members of the company was given as the excuse for the change. This evening "Lutli," with Marie Reisenhofer and Harry Walden, will be presented.

GULL FLEET ATTACKS CENTRAL PARK ENEMY

Birds Routed from Reservoir in a Brisk Engagement.

BUT THEY SOON COME BACK

Discouraging to Have to Fight Water Pollution with Blank Cartridges, but S. P. C. A. Wills It.

The Gull Fleet of the Department of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity was put in commission yesterday under general orders issued by Commodore William B. Ellison. Sailing from the northern end of the Central Park Reservoir, it attacked a large flock of the enemy, which has been in Winter quarters there, and forced it to retreat. There was no loss of life, but the sound of heavy firing attracted the attention of many Park visitors, who watched the flight of the gulls with interest.

The fleet consists of a single boat. It carries an armament of a 12-bore, double-barreled shotgun and is manned by an expert, who wages war under Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals rules. His ammunition consists of blank cartridges, and his aim is to make enough noise to frighten the gulls to other waters.

To drop naval metaphors, the Water Department, with the coming of Spring, has discontinued the gull patrol which worked afoot during the season when the reservoir was ice covered and impossible of navigation, and has replaced it with a guard which can operate afloat. There is no more favorite resting place for the thousands of gulls which make excursions from coast waters to those inland than the main reservoir in Central Park. They enjoy there immunity from hunters and pick up light fish luncheons. Often in the Winter the ice is fairly covered with the birds.

Their presence has caused many complaints from persons whose homes are supplied with water from the reservoir. In the beginning it was determined to shoot as many of the unwelcome visitors as possible, and hundreds of gulls were killed. Then the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals stepped in, and it was determined to use blank cartridges instead of the real thing. For a while the scheme worked, but gulls are wise birds, and they do not fear the man with the gun as they once did.

"The Water Department would gladly give a medal to any one who would solve the gull problem," said John E. McKay, principal assistant to the chief engineer of the Water Department, yesterday. "I don't see any remedy unless we roof the reservoir in.

"You never heard such a commotion as was raised when we went after the birds in earnest. Hundreds of women wrote letters denouncing the cruelty of shooting the innocent birds, and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals threatened all manner of legal proceedings. The best we can do now is to scare the birds away by bloodless means, and the way they give the watchman the laugh is a shame."

Willis Holly, Secretary of the Park Department, and Jake Snyder, the chief keeper of the Zoo, have collaborated in an attempt to discover some bird of prey which is the natural enemy of the gull, to the end of domesticating a few of them and appointing them reservoir guardians, but so far their researches have been in vain.

"It is a great mistake to assert that gulls are gullible," said Mr. Holly, yesterday. "As a matter of fact they have us nailed to the mast in the fight we are trying to put up against them, and it looks as if they will make headquarters at the reservoir as long as they see fit."

A BARGAIN PICTURE NIGHT.

Blenner's Maidens Bring Best Prices at Art Sale.

Bargain sale buyers of pictures should take a rainy night and the end of the season if they wish to get down to the mere cost of canvas and paints in stocking their galleries. This was shown last evening in the sale under the direction of William Clausen of the paintings of Edward Gay, Carlton T. Chapman, Carle Blenner, William A. Coffin, and Henry Ihlefeld at the Fifth Avenue Art Galleries. Seventy-six oils, water colors, and pastels by these artists brought a total of $5,557.50.

The first pictures of the sale, which go as a rule before the biggest buyers have arrived, brought last night the remarkable price of $12.50 for the first picture, and another a little later bringing as low as $10.

"Rosebuds," a copyrighted picture by Blenner of a girl with pale reddish hair, unbanded and falling over one shoulder, the hands in the lap holding a cluster of pink rosebuds, brought the highest price, going to Dr. Converse for $500. "Holly" went to C. E. Snedecor for $425, Dr. Whiting bid in "Venitia" for $330, and James Rice, Jr., paid $300 for "Waiting," all by Blenner. The persons who liked sunsets, wheat fields, hills, or marines paid $20, $30, $50, and $60 for them. The audience was composed largely of men.

MR. STOJOWSKI'S RECITAL.

His Second Appearance in Mendelssohn Hall.

Mr. Sigismund Stojowski had a large and appreciative audience at his second piano recital yesterday afternoon in Mendelssohn Hall. He showed in an even better light than at his previous appearance his sterling qualities as an artist. He played Beethoven's appassionata sonata, Mozart's rondo in A minor, Schumann's "Carnaval," Chopin's C minor nocturne, A flat ballade, and four studies, his own variations on a Cracovian theme, and Liszt's "Au bord d'une Source" and E major polonaise.

To these he added Paderewski's "Legende." Mr. Stojowski plays with a wide range of tonal coloring and dynamics. In the latter respect, indeed, he not infrequently pushes his tone to the extreme of the pianoforte's sonority. He found a great variety of expression in Schumann's imaginative representation of the carnival throng, but perhaps was less successful in finding the accent of sentiment and poetic grace that some of the pieces need.

His own theme and variations is a brilliant and fanciful composition, written in a "pianistic" idiom with much skill. He played them with much dash and bravura, and it interested his hearers greatly. His playing of Paderewski's interesting "Legende" was also highly effective.

WARM WORDS TO WOODBURY.

Lots of Lively Language Let Loose with Little Labor.

This warm alliterative protest, printed in bold black letters on a piece of white cardboard, was seen yesterday morning stuck on top of an unemptied garbage can in Bleecker Street:

To Dr. Woodbury,
Dust Department:

Dear Doc: The dwellers in this distinguished district do hereby demand that your dilatory dustmen do their daily duty and dispose of the dirt deposited in our dustbins. The dust cart has not been in this district since doomsday, and the disgusting condition of dirt and dust at our doors has not only become dangerously detrimental to health, but is driving the denizens of this district to drink.

This dirty and demoralized condition is a d—d disgrace, and is due to your dopey and disorganized dust department. We dwellers here are not denizens of a swell district, but, by the Declaration of Independence, we are not dogs, and we demand a square deal.

The Almighty Dollar is not everything, Doc; but your dictum appears to be: "No dollars, heap dirt; heap dollars, no dirt." Forget it and get busy.

Disregardfully yours,
DISGUSTED DWELLERS.

FEARED THOSE HYPNOTIC MEN

So They Sent Her to Bellevue, Despite the Surgeon.

A black-eyed little woman, who said she was Florence Corby of 230 West Thirty-ninth Street, walked into the Tenderloin Station last night and demanded protection.

"Sergeant," she said earnestly, "there are a lot of hypnotic men after me, and they have been after me for days. Sometimes I almost feel myself yielding to their hypnotism. I have braced myself and held out, but the strain is awful. I'm all right till now, but I cannot answer for it if you don't give me some protection from these hypnotic men. There are some outside there now; they followed me here."

They sent Florence Corby to Bellevue Hospital in the patrol wagon, as the ambulance surgeon from New York Hospital refused either to treat her or to take her to Bellevue in his ambulance.

CHARLES T. LYNCH DEAD.

Discoverer of "Rosey the Lawyer" and Many Other Quaint Characters.

Charles T. Lynch, who for the last eleven years had been a reporter in the Essex Market Police Court, died yesterday morning in the Methodist Episcopal Hospital in Brooklyn, of a complication of diseases. He had been ill for several months, but had been able to keep up with his work until about a week ago.

Mr. Lynch was 38 years old. He had been a newspaper reporter all his life, beginning his career with The Boston Globe. He came to New York to the United Press local bureau, and later became a member of The Sun staff. On the east side he found a field for his peculiar genius.

He discovered and recorded the doings of "Rosey, the Lawyer," created the "Duke of Essex Street," and reported the meetings of "The Essex Market Bar Association" and the excursions of the "Gloistein Fishing Club," accounts brimful of quaint humor.

On the east side Lynch was known to thousands of the residents. Gloistein, "the Duke of Essex Street," and "Cross-eyed Senftman," another of his characters, shed real tears yesterday when they learned of the death of their biographer.

CHINESE PRINCE'S SUITE BEAT HIM TO NEW YORK

Two of Them Went to See the Warships in Central Park.

MET A JOVIAL POLICEMAN

He Mentioned Their Old Friend Tu Fu—Party Brought 254 Pieces of Baggage—Prince Due To-day.

His Imperial Highness, Prince Tsai Tse, Watchman of the Graveyard and the official head of the Imperial Chinese High Commission sent out by the Chinese Government to make a general survey of the political, industrial, and commercial conditions in various countries, did not get here yesterday as was expected, but will arrive in New York to-morrow morning at 8 o'clock. Twenty-two of the Prince's party did arrive yesterday, and are now quartered at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. They came from Seattle overland, and reached the Grand Central Station at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, although they were not expected before noon.

All the members of the party, including seven servants, were dressed in Chinese robes of black silk. They had 254 pieces of baggage with them. These included 138 trunks containing the Prince's wearing apparel. One of the Prince's trunks was lost on the way and the result of this announcement caused much excitement in the corridors of the Fifth Avenue Hotel when the Imperial party got to talking about it. Some one said the Prince himself was lost in the shuffle somewhere between New York and St. Paul, Minn., and the managing secretary, the Hon. Kee Owyang, immediately hired a room in the hotel to telephone about it. He made the telephone buzz with Bingham-like expressions which brought back explanations from the Northern Pacific Railroad officials that the Yellow Dragon Prince had decided to change his itinerary that he might stop off at Buffalo to see Niagara Falls.

When it became known that the Prince would not reach New York until Friday morning, every man in the party at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, except the seven servants, set himself up as the only original secretary to the Prince. Then the fifteen began talking at once, leading [illegible] Americans to believe that a dispute as to authority was going on. The excited talk ceased just about as Detective Sergeants Funston and Fogarty arrived to pilot the party. Perhaps, though, this was only a coincidence. Capt. Chen Ngen-Tao of his Imperial Chinese Majesty's Navy, whose cards read, "Secretary to the Imperial Chinese High Commissioner," asked Detective Funston right away if he could get a permit to go aboard the war vessels in Central Park. He explained that he had met a high official in China who had told him that Central Park was a beautiful place to sail in.

"Well," said the detective, "there are no war vessels there, but plenty of wild animals; it might be worth while to take the trip."

"We don't have wild animals in the Chinese Navy," explained Capt. Chen, whereupon Major Liu En Yuam of the Manchurian Army added: "We don't need wild animals to fight; we can fight better than wild animals."

Detective Fogarty explained that Central Park was a pleasure park for the people. Capt. Chen and Major Liu then went out on Broadway and climbed into an electric car, telling the conductor to put them off at Central Park.

Meanwhile the reporters asked Secretary Kee what official place Prince Tsai held under the Chinese Government before becoming a High Commissioner.

"He was what in America you call to look after the Western Royal Graveyard," the managing Secretary said. "It is a very high office in China. What you call Watchman of the Graveyard. That was the Prince's title. He watched always the graves of the great Emperors in the Western Graveyard. He is related to the Empress Dowager—her cousin. Much thought is given to the graveyards in China. It is regulated by the feng-shui, or wind and water.

"Prince Tsai had a large guard of soldiers under him when he was Watchman of the Graveyard. That was his last high official place in China."

Chou Wen Hwa and Poo Chun, two of the high Imperial Secretaries, wanted to go to Coney Island ten minutes after they had arrived. Secretary Chou said he had met a man in Peking who had told him that the most interesting thing to be seen in America was at Coney Island, where New York's society women rode on the backs of wooden horses. He added that he was also told that there was a boat there that sailed to the moon. Secretary Poo said with a smile that he would like to spend about ten years at Coney Island so that he might see the moon thoroughly.

When Capt. Chen, the Naval Attaché, reached Central Park with Major Liu they walked over the lake and asked a mounted policeman if they might take a swim there. The policeman told them the weather was too cold. Capt. Chen said that when the Imperial party left China they had to wear their furs. They thought it was extremely warm here, and said they would be glad to get out of the United States to get cooled off. The Captain and the Major at last asked to be directed to a rice beer establishment, and invited the policeman to join them. When he said he dared not, they told him a policeman in China always took a drink when he had the price.

"Well," said the policeman, "here in New York we get too few."

"Tu Fu!" exclaimed Capt. Chen. "Why he was the Chinese poet who became a spoiled child in the imperial palace, where he produced impromptu verse when too drunk to stand."

"I've heard of Too Drunk," said the policeman, "but I don't remember Tu Fu. But if you're looking for Just One go over to Fifty-ninth Street."

The Captain and the Major went, and they asked for Just One, but they got a dozen before they left. They found the Fifth Avenue Hotel about dinner time, and expressed much regret when told that their stay in New York would be short, as the Watchman of the Graveyard, Prince Tsai, would insist on all of the members of the party sailing for Europe next Wednesday. They will go on the Baltic, visit England, then go to France and Belgium, to study conditions there before returning to China.

Until the Watchman of the Graveyard gets here to-morrow the imperial party will not do much sightseeing. Prince Tsai is accompanied by two other Commissioners, Li Chiu Kwei and Wong Moa Toa. They and a dozen secretaries will get into New York to-morrow morning. Three members of the imperial party were sidetracked at Seattle, and are now [illegible] to be wandering through California.

ROMANCE OF LONG AGO IN AN ELM STREET ATTIC

Crumbling Chair and Opera Cloak All That's Left.

A POOR DOCTOR'S LOVE STORY

She Married His Brother—Died in the Chair with the Cloak Upon It, and He Held Them Sacred.

Workmen have been busy for several days renovating the old three-story brick building at 122 Elm Street. It was a residence once, when that part of New York was a centre of the city's home life. More recently it has been used for business purposes, sweatshops, plumbers' shops—all sorts of miscellaneous purposes.

In a corner of a third-floor room the workmen stumbled across a curious collection of relics. These were the mummified bodies of two infants and a child about 3 years old, the skull of a grown-up person, and a withered hand. The bodies were inclosed in two oblong wooden boxes. They bore tags bearing the inscription 1868, indicating that they had been in their present repositories since that year.

Foreman Merriman of the repair gang sent word to the Board of Health, which in turn notified the Coroner. Coroner Shrady and the police at once went to work.

As they rummaged about the loft they ran across in the same obscure corner an old armchair and an opera cloak. They were so frail with age that the cloak and the chair covering fell to pieces when touched. The opera cloak was wrapped in a newspaper of the time of the civil war.

Then the officials tried to learn something about the old structure. They heard that for about forty years it was used as a distillery by Ephraim Howe, who died some twenty-five years ago. Nobody seemed to know exactly when the house was built, but it was old sixty years ago, when Howe moved in. Since then it has been occupied for factory purposes, as already described.

The Coroner and police, thinking at first that the grim find might be the relics of some old forgotten and undiscovered crime, set out to find some old residents of the locality. But the neighborhood has changed population several times since the sixties, and they did not have much luck until they ran across August Trenkmann, a worker in tortoise shell, whose place of business is at Broome and Elm Streets.

Mr. Trenkmann, who is a very old man, and his son, Henry, who is middle-aged, were both able to tell the story of the opera cloak and the ancient armchair, though they could not explain the mummies. They told the Coroner that probably they were the remaining estate of Dr. Samuel Morton, who died in 1898, and whom they both had known. The younger Trenkmann went to the loft. He looked at the old chair, then he said:

"Yes, that's the chair in which old Dr. Sam Morton died, after he had shut himself in from the world. I was with him the day he died, and I know that old chair well. Dr. Morton prized it higher than anything he possessed, except possibly that old cloak over yonder.

"His father," continued Mr. Trenkmann, "had been a surgeon in the British Navy in the early part of the century. Dr. Morton and his brother came here when very young. In the thirties Dr. Morton had a great practice, and was a visiting physician at some of the leading hospitals. His brother had a drug store at Grand and Elm Streets.

"In 1836 Dr. Morton went to Europe. He remained there for two years and returned to find that his brother had married the girl whom he himself had courted and expected to make his wife.

"The brother died some time between 1840 and 1845. The wife never remarried. She came home one evening from the theatre, laid her opera cloak on that chair and sat down in it to rest. She fell asleep in the chair and never woke.

"My father tells me that for twenty years Dr. Morton kept the room locked where his former sweetheart died. He left the chair with the cloak hanging over it just as it had been when the woman was found dead. He usually visited it on the successive anniversaries of her death and prayed and cried over it.

"He had become a recluse then. He neglected the drug store business, which he had taken over, and finally he had to give it up. Then his personal belongings were brought over to this house.

"Old Howe was the doctor's friend, and did not charge him any rent. The doctor slept here until the new owners came in. Then he was compelled to move over to 235 Centre Street. There he died sitting in that old chair, which must have been brought back here after his death and stored with some of the other small belongings which had remained here undisturbed.

"The doctor had some fine old furniture, but this was sold to pay for his burial. It is odd that these relics so intimately connected with the tragedy of his life should turn up at this time."

Mr. Trenkmann said he knew nothing about the bodies, but thought that they had been used by the doctor for experiments. The fact that the top of the skull found had been removed so as to expose the brain seemed to bear out that theory. The bodies were taken to the Morgue. They will be closely examined by the Coroner and his physicians before burial.

Last (Maybe) from Brady.

When William A. Brady came out after the second act of "The Redskin" at the Liberty Theatre last evening to make his usual speech about dramatic criticism, he ended by saying that this was his "farewell appearance."

Dinner to Major Keck.

A dinner was given last night in compliment to Major Frank Keck by the Major Keck Camp No. 53, United Spanish War Veterans, Department of New York, at the Colonial Building, 67 West 125th Street. Major Keck served with the Seventy-first Regiment during the Spanish war. A gold medal, commemorative of the Cuban campaign, was presented to [illegible]. Champe S. Andrews spoke on "The Spanish War Veterans and Their Future."

BOOKS
The Genius
A stirring romance, by Margaret Potter, based on the life of a famous Russian composer—the sensitive, gifted son of a powerful, iron-handed government despot. His carreer is a strange and deeply moving tale of shifting fortunes, dramatic episodes and final artistic triumphs.
The novel follows the hero into the high social and military circles to which he was born; into musical society, to which his art led him and into that of plotting revolutionists, where he fell by chance. Each shifting scene has an intense dramatic interest, and the whole is a striking presentation of the artistic temperament in its most interesting phases.

A HEN CHASE IN COURT.

Proceedings Were Suspended While They Caught the Plymouth Rock.

A Plymouth Rock hen compelled Magistrate Steinert to suspend proceedings in the Tombs Court for a while yesterday morning. She went to court under the arm of Antonio Gillo, an Italian arrested by Policeman McAnany of the Health Squad for keeping live fowls in his rooms at 133 Mott Street.

Gillo was unable to express himself properly without using both hands to emphasize his words. In the course of his gesticulations he loosened his grip on the hen, and, clucking excitedly, she flew to the top of the bookcase back of the Magistrate. There she sat, blinking.

But for the laughter of the spectators the proceedings might as well have continued. No amount of hammering with the Magistrate's gavel could enforce decorum, however, and nothing remained but to order the capture of the invader. A ladder was brought, and Court Interpreter Mark Moustaki mounted it.

The hen uttered a frightened cackle and took flight, landing on the railing at which the prisoners are arraigned. There somebody caught her, and a policeman took her out of court. Gillo was held in $200 for trial in Special Sessions. Then he smiled and said:

"No keepa de chick? Vera well—eata him den."

Market Rallies Uncertainly — Coal Road Inquiry a Factor.

Further progress toward recovery from the sharp declines of previous days was made in yesterday's stock market, but the movement was marked by even greater irregularity than the similar one of Tuesday, and near the close of the day, upon the receipt of advices from Washington that President Roosevelt had signed the resolution calling for an inquiry by the Inter-State Commerce Commission into the coal roads and had asked for a large appropriation and extra powers for the commission for the purposes of its investigation, a setback in prices occurred which in many instances wholly wiped out the earlier advances and replaced them with losses. Amalgamated Copper was again a feature of the rally, and, unlike many other issues participating in it, managed to close the day with a substantial gain. Reading, on the other hand, moved as it did on the previous day, advancing sharply in the early trading, only to sink back later, closing depressed under the influence of the President's action. Union Pacific once more exhibited firmness throughout the day. Elsewhere in the list the movements were unattended by significance, and the trading was on a very much smaller scale than for many days past. In addition to the coal road inquiry other matters which received consideration during the day were the reports which reached Wall Street of the unsettled situation in regard to the threatened coal strike, and the reports of the serious illness of a well-known financier who is now on his way to this city from the West. In the past the speculative commitments of this gentleman have been very extensive, and knowledge of this fact accounts for the interest taken in the matter by the Stock Exchange, although it is quite probable that the effects of an unfortunate issue have been much exaggerated. Further evidence of the lull in the iron and steel trade was contained in the weekly review of those markets yesterday. By this authority it was stated that the volume of business is now normal in contrast with the extraordinary volume which marked the Winter months. From Kentucky came official word that the condition of the Winter wheat crop is far above that of a year ago, while much-needed moisture was reported from the State of Kansas.

Following the shipment of $2,000,000 to San Francisco on Tuesday, there was reported yesterday the receipt of $700,000 in this city from San Francisco owing to the deposit there of new gold. The money position was further bettered by the release here of a portion of the funds to be deposited with the banks of this city under Secretary Shaw's plan, although there was much criticism of the discrimination which is said to have been exercised in the distribution of the funds thus far received. The loss of the local banks to the Sub-Treasury since Friday amounts to $2,851,000, which compares with a loss of $5,214,000 in the same period a week ago. The persistent holding of call money rates at unusually high figures for the season was followed by a further sharp decline in demand sterling, bringing the rates appreciably nearer the import point, although this is still some distance away. The markets abroad were helped by semi-official reports of a better understanding between France and Germany over the policing of Morocco. The London market, in particular, gained from the favorable progress of the fortnightly settlement and the better tone of the Kaffir shares.

BRITAIN'S TRADE INCREASE.

Improvement of $51,966,340 in Imports During Two Months.

LONDON, March 7.—The February statement of the Board of Trade shows increases of $23,419,500 in imports and $17,560,500 in exports.

The bulk of the increase in imports is accounted for by raw materials, which advanced over $15,000,000. Every class of imports was higher except wool, which declined $1,795,000; cotton was $7,355,000 higher. Practically the whole gain in exports was in manufactures, these showing an increase of $15,355,000, of which $3,770,000 was in iron and steel. The bullion imports for February were $38,347,160.

The total improvements in imports for the two months of 1906 reach the big total of $51,966,340. The exports of British goods amounted to $46,485,470.

BANKERS FAIL IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, March 7.—W. X. Fuller & Co., bankers and brokers, at 60 Devonshire Street, made an assignment to-day. The firm was not a member of any Stock Exchange. They had branch offices at Worcester and Hartford. These have been closed. The liabilities are placed at $125,000 and the assets $50,000. The break in the market a few days ago, following a period of poor business, is given as the cause of the failure.

W. X. Fuller, senior member of the firm, is a resident of Brookline. He has been a stock broker for eighteen years. Up to a year ago he was a member of the Boston Stock Exchange. Since that time, it is said, the firm has dealt through Consolidated Stock Exchange houses in New York City.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 7.—Money was in good demand in the market to-day for the settlement and rates were a shade harder. Supplies were not affected by the payment of $10,000,000 for Treasury bills. As a large amount was due to the Bank of England discounts were easy.

On the Stock Exchange an apparently firm tone prevailed despite the fact that a small amount of business was transacted. Prices hardened on the more hopeful view taken of the financial situation and the better political outlook, consols leading the advance with 5-16 on investment buying.

Americans in response to the strength of Wall Street opened at well over parity, and good buying caused a further hardening of prices. Disappointing Wall Street advices during the afternoon caused a reaction from the best quotations of the day, but prices at the close had a hardening tendency. Grand Trunk received considerable attention.

Foreigners strengthened in sympathy with the tone of the Paris Bourse and some buying from that quarter. Russians and Japanese were prominent.

Kaffirs reflected the improvement of the general market and scored fractional advances. Operators in these securities had a more confident feeling.

Japanese imperial sixes of 1904 were quoted at 103⅞.

Bar silver steady at 29⅝d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 18.05; Lisbon, 4.50.

Bullion amounting to £179,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day, and £150,000 was withdrawn for shipment to South America.

C., H. & D. BONDHOLDERS WANT A JOINT RECEIVER

Don't See Why the Morgan Stock Interests Should Control.

MAY GO TO THE COURTS SOON

Regard the Morgan Domination After Default on the Notes an Anomaly to be Corrected.

The Protective Committee representing the collateral trust notes of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company, the interest on which was defaulted on March 1, will consider at its meeting to-day the question of applying to the courts for the appointment of a joint receiver for the road to act with Judson Harmon, the present receiver. A member of the committee said yesterday that in all probability the committee would decide to make such an application.

The significance of this action will lie in the fact that the present receiver was appointed at the instance of J. P. Morgan & Co., and in this sense represents the interests of the stockholders in the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton property rather than those of the bondholders. The holders of the notes feel that they are entitled to the appointment of a co-receiver to be named for the special purpose of protecting their interests in the property.

Some of the noteholders expressed the opinion yesterday that to all intents and purposes the road is now being managed by J. P. Morgan & Co., who are at the head of a syndicate which holds practically all of the company's common stock. It is said that the policy adopted by Receiver Harmon represents, in effect, the Morgan policy in the property. This situation exists, it is pointed out, despite the fact that the road has now defaulted on its notes, which are a direct obligation of the company.

Situation Regarded as Odd.

In the case of nearly all receiverships, the noteholders assert, the receiver, in fact, represents the bondholders rather than the stockholders, and they see no reason why a different arrangement should continue to exist in reference to the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton.

Judson Harmon was appointed receiver of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway as well as of the Père Marquette Railroad last December on the application of a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., who a short time before had repurchased practically all of the company's common stock from the Erie Railroad. One ground for the application for a receiver was that the company was insolvent. Interest on a large amount of the company's bonds fell due in January and was met by the issuance of receiver's certificates, which were purchased by J. P. Morgan & Co., the interest on the bonds being paid at the office of that firm.

It was definitely known at the time that the decision of the receiver to issue these certificates for the payment of interest was reached after conferences with the Morgan interests, whose desires in the matter were recognized by the receiver. Between January and March 1 several offers were made by J. P. Morgan & Co. to the Protective Committee representing the noteholders, but the committee felt obliged to refuse all of these offers, which were seemingly intended to eliminate, temporarily, the claims of the noteholders.

That the Protective Committee is planning to enforce its rights energetically as the holders of bonded obligations against the company is evident from the feeling among the members of the committee that the application for a co-receiver should be made. The committee is still of the opinion that no formal proceedings to declare the notes in default can reasonably be taken before the expiration of sixty days from March 1, but at the same time the committee or at least some members of the committee are of the opinion that the application for a joint receiver should be made without awaiting the termination of the sixty-day period.

The opinion was expressed yesterday by some of the noteholders that if the Morgan interests were still desirous of dominating the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton situation through the receiver appointed at their instance they could do so only by meeting fully and immediately the claims of all the securities which come ahead of the common stock which represents the Morgan interests in the property. For the Morgan interests to be still in control of the property after default had occurred on the bonded obligation of the road is, in the opinion of these noteholders, an anomaly which they feel sure the courts will readily consent to correct by appointing a joint receiver.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Return to Normal Activity After Winter Rush—Southern Men Hopeful.

Conditions in the iron and steel trade have come back to about normal after the extraordinary volume of business in the Winter months, according to The Iron Age. The paper declares:

"In some branches the large consumers are being approached with the object of securing a renewal of contracts which expire on July 1. The attitude of the buyers, however, is one of indifference when the present range of prices is being talked, because they are doing considerably better on the material which is now being delivered.

"It is yet too early to judge how the Spring trade in the lighter lines will develop. The deliveries of wire, sheets, and tin plate are on an enormous scale, but new orders are not coming in to any extent as yet.

"In the plate trade the majority of the mills are delivering promptly, and Eastern mills are taking considerable business in the Western territory.

"The week has brought out only a moderate business in structural material, and some of the mills are able to make shipments in a much more satisfactory manner than in the past.

"A few good orders for steel rails have been placed and there is one very large contract pending. This year is proving a very satisfactory one for girder rails, for which the demand has been very light for some years.

"Reports from all the distributing centres show the pig iron trade to be very dull. The Steel Corporation has purchased from 8,000 to 10,000 tons of valley Bessemer. It is understood that the pig iron stock of the corporation is down to the very low figure of 133,000 tons of all kinds, or only a few days' supply."

An interesting comment on the iron situation is made by President J. C. Maben of the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company, whose place enables him to give the sentiment of a large part of the Southern producers. Speaking of the inactivity in the iron trade compared to the rush of the earlier season, he attributed some of it to the advance in freight rates on the first of this month, which was anticipated by consumers, and added largely to the shipments of the rush period just past. "The market is a trifle slow at present," says Mr. Maben, "when compared to the immense business of last Fall; I expect, however, an early if not immediate return to the brisk trade that is characteristic of the Birmingham district."

STILL AFTER CITY RAILWAY.

J. G. Wall Finds Explanation of Note Dealings Unsatisfactory.

Judson G. Wall, who recently brought to the attention of Gov. Higgins certain seeming irregularities in the accounts of the New York City Railway Company, said yesterday that the City Railway's explanations of these items, which had been forwarded to him through the State Railroad Commission late on Tuesday, fell far short of explaining anything. The Railroad Commissioners, in response to an inquiry, received the communication from Charles S. Ludlam, Controller of the company, which was forwarded to Mr. Wall.

Mr. Ludlam sets forth that the New York City Railway Company, in the years 1902 to 1904, sold to the Metropolitan Securities Company at 70 per cent. of face value $9,984,000 par value of 3 per cent. debenture notes, being part of an authorized issue of $15,000,000. Between the time of the first issuance of these notes in 1902 and the end of 1903 the New York City Railway Company had redeemed at par $9,324,000 of these notes. This resulted in a profit of $2,797,200 to the Metropolitan Securities Company, which Controller Ludlam states is still carried on the securities company's books in an account entitled "Profit on New York City Railway Company debenture notes redeemed."

The Controller admits that no reference to this item was made in the report of the Metropolitan Securities Company recently made to the stockholders. His explanation is that while the amount is carried as a credit on the securities company's books, it is carried as a debit on the books of the New York City Railway Company.

One fact which seems to stand out clearly is that the New York City Railway Company sold at a 30 per cent. discount notes which, within a relatively few months, were redeemed at par. Mr. Wall said yesterday that it was his intention to write to Gov. Higgins, pointing out this apparent payment by the New York City Railway Company of ruinous rates of interest and to ask the Governor whether the transaction was such as to comply with the laws of the State governing corporations.

NEW PENNSYLVANIA BONDS.

$15,000,000 Issue for Water Plants Soon to be Sold Here.

The Pennsylvania Railroad, it was said in Wall Street yesterday, would arrange to sell soon to local bankers $15,000,000 bonds to defray the cost of the water plants which President Cassatt, in his annual report, announced would be established along the main line between Pittsburg and New York.

The road has encountered difficulty in getting proper water facilities along its lines, and this plan has been devised to obviate any serious trouble. The new bonds, President Cassatt has declared, will be issued in serial form, with a provision for payment out of current earnings. The new bonds, it was said yesterday, would be collateral trust issues secured by deposit of the stock of water companies and by the pledge of the contracts between these companies and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

The report was renewed yesterday that in addition to these water bonds, the Pennsylvania would sell $10,000,000 equipment trust obligations which have been authorized.

$10,000 COFFEE 'CHANGE FEE.

Increased Initiation with Reduced Membership Limit Proposed.

A petition to reduce the Coffee Exchange membership limit from 500 to 325 and increase the initiation fee from $5,000 to $10,000 was presented at the monthly meeting of the Executive Committee yesterday. It was referred to the proper subcommittee.

At present the membership in the Coffee Exchange is 323, and seats sell at about $3,300.

The object of the petition, a member of the Exchange said yesterday, is to keep the allowed membership down to a figure which, experience has shown, approximates the demand.

Directors Consider Plans for Financing New Indiana Plants.

The Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, it was learned yesterday, are considering a sale of bonds to cover a part of the cost of the new steel plant which the company intends to erect in Indiana on the lake front. The total cost of this plant, it was officially stated yesterday, will amount to $50,000,000 and may reach $75,000,000. The completion of the plant will require possibly five years, so that only a percentage of the total expenditure will have to be met in any given year.

The Directors already have set aside $10,000,000 out of earnings for improvements and additions, and it is probable that all this sum will be used in the construction of this new plant. Among the plans discussed is the issuance of all or a portion of the $30,000,000 second mortgage sinking fund bonds now in the treasury of the company, available for sale at par. Another is the issuance of a bond specially secured by the new plant and guaranteed by the United States Steel Corporation. It is considered probable that before the completion of the new plant further sums to defray in part the cost of the plant will be appropriated from earnings.

The Indiana plant, when completed, will be the largest and, it is said, the best equipped steel plant in the world. It will have a maximum annual capacity of 1,750,000 tons of finished products, compared with the United States Steel Corporation's present tonnage of 13,000,000, of which only about 8,000,000 tons are in the form of wholly-finished products.

Cuban Revenue Tax Non-Dutiable—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Judge Somerville, the Board of United States General Appraisers sustained yesterday a claim filed by U. Koen & Co. of New Orleans. It appears that the Collector of Customs insisted upon including the Cuban internal revenue tax in the dutiable market value of cigars imported by the firm. Notwithstanding the fact that the Treasury Department specifically instructed the Collector to levy the duty complained of, Judge Somerville holds that the duty was paid by the importers under duress, and is illegal. The Collector is ordered to reliquidate the entries in accordance with the finding of the board.

General Appraiser De Vries wrote a decision sustaining a claim filed by Marshall Field & Co. of Chicago, regarding the classification of embroideries.

The board overruled protests filed by Burger, Richmann & Burger, Dingelstedt & Co., F. Behrend, and F. B. Vandegrift & Co. of New York, the Rosenthal-Sloan Millinery Company of St. Louis, George H. Leonard & Co. and C. F. Hovey & Co. of Boston, Charles D. Stone & Co., Vincent de Mossiny, Quong Yuen & Co., and Habicht, Braun & Co. of Chicago.

Claims partially sustained were filed by the American Bead Company and others, A. Steinhardt & Brother and others, and A. Herzog of New York.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 7.—Mount Vernon-Woodberry Cotton Duck 5s again easily led the market to-day. On large tradings they advanced half a point to 87, closing strong. United Railway income bonds and stock were active, the free incomes selling up to 74½ and the Baltimore Trust certificates at 72⅞. The stock certificates sold up to 18⅜, while the free stock touched 17⅝.

The tightness of the money market has caused several financial institutions to advance their rates to 6 per cent., and even at this figure no large loans are being made. The scarcity of funds has had a tendency to restrict operations the last few days. There were advances to-day in the securities of several local financial institutions.

The market closed firm and fairly active. Sales: Bonds, $169,500; stocks, 1,624 shares.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Davis Johnson retired yesterday from the Stock Exchange firm of S. N. Warren & Co.

The recent issue of shares in the Central Insurance Company, Limited, is said to have been applied for between four and five times over.

The New York State Bankers' Association will hold its next convention on July 5 and 6 at a place yet to be designated by the Executive Committee.

The Southern Pacific Railroad Company has obtained an official quotation on the London Stock Exchange for $75,000,000 4 per cent. first refunding mortgage gold bonds, Nos. M 1 to M 70,000 for $1,000 each, and D 1 to D 100,000 for $500 each.

At the special meeting of the stockholders of the Interborough Bank yesterday the proposal to increase the capital stock from $100,000 to $200,000 was ratified. The new stock will shortly be issued, present shareholders having the privilege to subscribe at 160. The bank will move from its quarters at 110 Wall Street to Exchange Place.

The Directors of the Franklin Trust Company have declared a quarterly dividend of 3½ per cent., payable March 31. This is an increase of ½ per cent. quarterly, making the total yearly dividend 14 per cent.

The common stock of the Pittsburg, Youngstown and Ashtabula Railroad Company has been stricken from the Stock Exchange list.

The American Grass Twine Company held its annual meeting yesterday. The report was not presented, and only the election of Directors came before the stockholders. The old Directorate was re-elected, except Charles E. Barnes, Thomas J. Harby, John Dougherty, and H. M. Cohn, retired, whose places were filled by the election of J. B. Probst, Erwin C. Stump, Myron W. Robinson, and Richard E. Cochran. President J. M. Robinson was re-elected. George E. Lindley took the place of H. M. Cohn as Vice President and Treasurer.

Stockholders of the United States Exchange Bank voted yesterday to increase the Directorate from 17 to 19.

Special meetings of the stockholders of the Jefferson and of the Monroe Banks, two Canal Street institutions which it is proposed to merge, have been called for March 26.

The American Car and Foundry Company earnings for the three months ending January 31 were $1,008,110.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Suppose as an extreme outcome of the popular agitation now in vogue, that the coaler railroads should be required by law to divorce themselves from their coal properties—then what? The coal properties are an asset that cannot be destroyed. If they were sold under the conditions imagined it would mean simply that the railroad companies had been compelled to take profits in bulk on their investment in coal lands. Holders of coaler railroad stocks might reasonably expect, in that case, to receive a very handsome distribution, since these coal properties have increased enormously in value in the last few years. Afterward, the coal would still have to be hauled by the railroads. This tonnage would seek the railroads offering the best facilities for handling it.

The idea is spreading in Wall Street that a fair regulation of railroad rates would be ultimately beneficial to all interests, including the interests of the investment holders of railroad securities. Robery Goodbody, arguing that a rate bill is bound to pass, says: "The interests that have been favored may not like the prospect, but investors in railroad stocks will gain, and so will every owner of property, by the removal of a legitimate grievance, through exploiting which demagogues get their power at the cost of the interests of their dupes. Therefore we do not see that a reasonable rate regulation bill is a menace to values, but ultimately will be a help to them. There may be a feeling among big capitalists who have been used to advantages greater than those possessed by the ordinary man, that they will withdraw their capital and let people feel what the result will be. But where are they to go? To go to England or France or Germany would be to go 'out of the frying pan into the fire' even now, and also to lose the advantage that our Constitution gives them in preventing almost every form of improper adverse legislation. Therefore it would seem improbable that they should do anything of the sort."

⁂

Those who talk of capital as if it were moved to and fro in a whimsical and spiteful manner do not know how great a problem it is to keep immense amounts of it safely and profitably employed. If conditions arise under which it may be somewhat less profitably employed, through the prohibition of special advantages, it must needs be employed still, and so long as the opportunities in this country are greater than can be found anywhere else on earth, it seems reasonable to argue that it will continue to be employed here.

⁂

"The money market," says a prominent banker, "is at Algeciras. If that war cloud is dissipated we shall have access to an almost unlimited amount of foreign money."

⁂

The stock market has been totally oblivious to the decline in wheat as a bull argument on security values. This movement is the best indication of what the grain trade thinks of the crop outlook.

⁂

Rumors that Charles M. Schwab was beyond recovery, or dead, were kept in continuous circulation yesterday, but they had not the slightest effect upon the stock market. The circumstances of the case made an unusual opportunity for rumors. Mr. Schwab left El Paso, Texas, on Tuesday evening via the Rock Island, and nothing official concerning his condition was received in Wall Street during yesterday's session of the Stock Exchange. Officials of the Rock Island system were appealed to, and they could only promise to find the train and get the information from its conductor at the earliest possible moment. In the meantime, it was generally reported that when Mr. Schwab left El Paso he was almost beyond hope, his physicians hardly expecting him to survive the night. Naturally there was much conjecture as to what effect Mr. Schwab's death might have upon the market. The prevailing opinion seemed to be that it would have very little effect, if any. Mr. Schwab has been known at times to operate in the market on a pretty big scale, but recently he has confined his activities chiefly to outside matters—that is, to matters outside the precincts of the Stock Exchange, such as Bethlehem Steel and mining ventures. It is customary for Wall Street men to scale down their open speculative commitments in the stock market before going away, and the chances are that even if Mr. Schwab had been active in the market of late he would have cleaned up to some extent before setting out on this Western trip.

⁂

St. Paul will sell ex dividend 3½ per cent. on Friday. From the basis of yesterday's closing quotation this would bring the price of the stock down to 174½, where it might be supposed to look rather cheap after having sold at 193 in January.

⁂

It is understood that the House of Twelve Partners has been pounding American Smelting and Refining. Its clients were counseled yesterday to sell the stock, but there wasn't any money in doing it.

⁂

After five weeks of decline, in which the active issues have suffered losses of 10 to 40 points, and even more, the market has now become very dull. Yesterday's transactions were the smallest that have been reported since the dull period of last October. Bulls are wont to regard this as a happy omen. It indicates to them that the market has been sold to a standstill. They believe the liquidation, for the time being, has run its course, and that the short interest is vulnerable, which is possibly true.

⁂

It is not to be supposed that the market will recover immediately from the shocks of the last few weeks and start up again as if by a common impulse. It takes time to turn a market. First one or two stocks are turned to the bull side, then two or three more, and confidence is gradually restored. The commission-house element never gets the full benefit of a violent set-back in a bull market. It waits to be sure that the turn has come, then demands a reaction on which to buy, waits until it has lost 2 or 3 per cent. more and finally comes in with a rush and clamor. One has only to recall the sequence of things after the break in December, 1904, again after the break in April, 1905, and a third time after the less violent reaction in September of last year to know that this is true. In neither of these cases did the public get half the benefit of the break. It was too timid to buy at the lowest prices, when brokers urged it to buy moderately with a view to taking more on further breaks, and then when it was apparent that the market had really turned, prices were up 5 to 8 points all around, and those who had missed their opportunities demanded a reaction on which to be let in. They didn't get the reaction, and so came in at still higher prices. A scales operation does not appeal to the average commission-house trader. He wants to buy his stocks at just the psychological moment, which is a thing that professional speculators never hope to do except by accident.

⁂

Probably for a while, and within narrow limits, the fluctuations of the market will be left largely to the trading element, which is bullish one day and bearish the next, according to its feeling of things. Traders were bearish yesterday, for reasons best known to themselves, and were reported from the floor to be going around the room supplying stocks wherever there was a strong bid for them. Specialists, on the other hand, reported that their books were almost bare of selling orders. It was, on the whole, a very stupid market, influenced in its idlings almost wholly by the scalping operations of the floor crowd. London came very strong, but stocks did not open up to a parity with quotations from the other side. Reading was kept under pressure. It touched 130 on the opening and sold down rapidly to 127⅛. It closed at 128, showing a net decline of ⅝ per cent. Amalgamated Copper was the strongest active stock in the whole list, closing above 104. Add to these movements a sharp rise in Colorado Fuel and all that happened on the tape yesterday of particular interest to speculators is told.

The buying of Amalgamated Copper this week, by all indications, has been much stronger than the selling. It is understood that several large speculative accounts, which were in a vulnerable position, notably one at Boston, have been liquidated. The buying below 105 has been more of the character of that which carried the stock to par last December. The influence upon sentiment of the addition and subtraction of points, otherwise fluctuations, is strikingly illustrated in Amalgamated Copper. It is only three months since the stock crossed par, and that was an incident hailed by the bull element as a speculative allurement hardly to have been dreamed of. It was a big advertisement for the bull market. Since then the stock has sold as high as 118¼. Its return this week to par was looked upon as almost a disaster. Early in 1905 it was predicted in a responsible manner that the stock would cross par before the end of the year, and that seemed to be about the limit of the speculator's imagination. A prediction in January that the stock would sell at par in the first fortnight of March would have seemed extremely rash.

Currency Receipts from 'Frisco.

The Sub-Treasury received yesterday $700,000 from San Francisco. This offsets about a third of the $2,000,000 transfer made to San Francisco on Tuesday. The origin of the money received from San Francisco yesterday was not definitely known, although the assumption is that money sent this way from San Francisco by telegraphic transfer through the Sub-Treasury represents the deposit of new gold at the San Francisco Mint. Frequently, however, transfers are made on other account, though nominally reported as being made against gold deposits.

BANK LOANS ON FARM LANDS.

Favorable Report on Bill to Extend Scope of National Bank Act.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The House Committee on Banking and Currency today authorized a favorable report on a bill permitting National banks to lend money on farm lands up to one-half their value, excluding improvements.

The bill was introduced by Mr. Lewis, (Ga.) The National Bank act prohibits National banks from lending money on other than "collateral" security. At the last convention of bankers the proposition to lend money on real estate received approval. The Lewis bill carried out this suggestion, but the committee restricted the additional security to farm lands.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 7.—The local stock market was exceptionally dull and without feature. As usual the New York influence dominated, and Reading was quite irregular under the sudden fluctuations there in the early trading. Subsequently it became quieter and steady.

The Pennsylvania Railroad was reported as contemplating the issue of more securities, about $10,000,000 equipment trust and $15,000,000 bonds, to finance its extensive system of water supply on the main line and branches. This gave some food for discussion as to the probability of the money market readily taking new securities to any large amounts in its present condition.

The whole trading in this market was less than 20,000 shares, with little interest displayed in the public utility stocks. The list:

SUCCESSFUL MEN
have the courage of their convictions
Investigate, certainly and most carefully, but when assured, act.

"Procrastination is the thief of time" and opportunity. The opportunity to do small things comes every day. The opportunity to do big things comes but seldom.

We believe an investment now in the shares of the PITTSBURGH BULLFROG MINING CORPORATION, LIMITED, presents opportunities for large profits, second to none, even in the famous Bullfrog District.

Our Directors and their friends have backed their faith with their own money, the strongest possible evidence of their belief in the future of this enterprise.

It will cost you nothing to investigate.
Let us tell you about it.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Trading Has a Sluggish Day.

Bethlehem Steel Common Down to 26 on Small Sales—Coppers Dull and Weak.

Trading was sluggish in the curb market yesterday and price movements for the most part slight, though many stocks on the list closed the day with fractional losses. Bethlehem Steel common was the most conspicuous loser among the industrials, dropping from 28½ to 26 on sales of 600.

Coppers were duller than in any other market for a long time. United sold 17,600 shares between 64½ and 62½, closing at 63½. Slight declines were the general rule in the mining list.

LITTLE BOARD TO SELL.

Randolph's Report on Deal for Broadway Building Approved.

The members of the Consolidated Exchange, after the close of the market yesterday, heard the report of President Randolph on the proposed sale of the building at Broadway and Exchange Place and its equity in the ground lease which has six years to run with a renewal of twenty-one years. The Exchange has been divided on the question of giving up its old building, which is a landmark on lower Broadway, and a bitter fight was expected yesterday.

The meeting, however, after listening to the President's report, passed a resolution of confidence in the officers and Board of Managers of the Exchange which was equivalent to giving its approval to the sale. President Randolph refused to make public the details of the deal by which the property will be disposed of. It has been reported that Charles T. Barney, President of the Knickerbocker Trust Company was behind the offer of $300,000 for the property and lease.

The Exchange pays to the owners of the ground 5 per cent. on the assessed valuation of $1,500,000, or $75,000 a year. This sum is a heavy burden to the organization, which receives a comparatively small income from rentals of the upper floors, and removal to a cheaper location has been discussed for some time.

The opposition to the movement has come chiefly from the older and more responsible members and commission houses who fear the loss of prestige that would follow removal of the Exchange from its present conspicuous place on Broadway. This element did not assert itself yesterday, and some of those who have opposed the rushing through by President Randolph of the negotiations for sale declared after the meeting that they had no opportunity to discuss the President's report.

INVOLVED WITH EDELHOFFS.

Schickerlings Indorsed Their Notes—Offer 30 Cents on Dollar.

Thirty cents on the dollar was the offer made to the creditors of Schickerling Brothers & Co. at their meeting in the Astor House yesterday. Leonard Bonner appeared as representative of the bankrupt corporation, which was in the diamond and jewelry business at 28 East Twenty-second Street. He said that liabilities, secured and unsecured amounted to $160,000 and his estimate of the value of assets was $66,000. Part of these assets are demanded by certain creditors.

Albert H. Gleason, Chairman of the meeting, questioned Mr. Schickerling, who said that James Talcott was a creditor for $40,000 and held as security jewelry, $23,000, and customers' notes, $40,000. Of the notes, $36,000 were from Edelhoff Brothers & Co. for which firm a receiver was appointed three days ago. The State Bank is a creditor for $19,000, and holds as security jewelry, $35,000, and accounts and notes, $5,000. Mrs. Schroeder, a relative of the Schickerlings, is a creditor for $30,000, but she gave the jewelry held as security to the receiver. More than $50,000 of paper of Edelhoff Brothers & Co., indorsed by the Schickerling Company, is held by various creditors. Chairman Gleason appointed a committee to make an examination and report.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 7.—The local money market is quiet and rates are practically unchanged. The usual table follows:

Call loans, 6@7 per cent. Time loans, collateral, 5@6 per cent. Time loans, mercantile paper, 5@6 per cent. Clearing House loans, 6 per cent. New York funds, 15@16 2-3c. discount. Clearings, $28,034,244. Balances, $2,290,820. Sub-Treasury debit, $46,030.

A continuation of yesterday's strong market was witnessed in the Copper shares to-day. The opening was steady and generally at an advance over Tuesday's closing figures. Commission houses appeared early as buyers, and some advices were seen. United States Smelting gained over a point, and Amalgamated sold up to 104, but later lost a point part of the advance. Bingham was strong, and gained a fraction. In the afternoon trading Trinity became the feature, gaining a half point, a large amount of stock changing hands. The closing was quiet and steady.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—A resumption of stop-loss selling and bear pressure on a big scale demoralized the wheat market yesterday, and it closed at the lowest point of the season. The Northwest was a leading seller, acting on the increase of 700,000 bushels in Minneapolis stocks in the last four days. In the afternoon selling was greatly increased by the receipt of cables announcing that Dornbusch estimated the world's wheat crop at 3,352,000,000 bushels, or 107,000,000 more than the previous popular estimate, and 243,000,000 more than 1904, making the total a record breaker. Paris was 5 points up, but Berlin closed 6 points lower. Primary receipts were 409,000 bushels, compared with 300,000 bushels last year. On export account the sales were 5 loads, cash prices closing as follows: No. 2 red, 82⅞c elevator, and 85⅝c free on board afloat, nominal; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 86⅞c free on board afloat.

CORN.—The tendency of corn was rather more bullish than otherwise, but it had little chance to follow its inclination owing to heaviness in other markets. A weak spot developed in the afternoon, partly on a private estimate suggesting over 120,000,000 bushels for the Argentine export surplus. The exports in 1904 were 97,221,000 bushels. The general forenoon steadiness was based on the upturn of ½d at Liverpool, estimates of only 136 cars at Chicago for Thursday, small interior receipts, and continued unfavorable weather. The cash market was rather firm, with export sales of 12 loads reported. No. 2 corn closed 50c elevator and 48¾c free on board afloat; No. 2 white, 49¼c, and No. 2 yellow, 48¾c free on board afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market was nervous and unsettled yesterday. Opening steady at an advance of 3@5 points, and selling at new high records for the upward movement right after the call, the market eased off and closed within a point or two of the lowest, but steady at a net decline of 6@8 points. Sales were estimated at 250,000 bales.

At the best May sold at 10.87c and July at 10.98c, or 42@47 points up from the low level of last week. Sales of 20,000 bales reported for the day were partly in the way of swapping futures for spots. The situation in the general market is said to be very firm, with mills sold ahead for several months to come. Private cables from Manchester said that mills there were sold ahead up to next Autumn.

BERTHE CLAICHE TELLS HOW SHE PAID POLICE

Says She Used to Give Four of Them $2 a Week Each.

ELY TALKS WITH BINGHAM

The Doings of the Former Vice Squad to be Sifted Thoroughly, It Is Announced.

Berthe Claiche was taken from her cell in the Tombs yesterday to the office of Assistant District Attorney Ely, where she spent several hours. Her former counsel, Messrs. Rosalsky and Levy, were not present, nor were they represented. Earlier in the day Mr. Ely and Abraham Levy paid a visit to Commissioner Bingham at Police Headquarters and spent some time in conference with him. Nothing could be learned from any of them about the nature of their talk.

When the Claiche girl was sent back to the Tombs yesterday afternoon it was understood that she had given Mr. Ely much valuable information about police corruption. It was said that the girl gave names that will enable the District Attorney to get all the corroboration needed.

It was learned, too, that the woman had named four policemen to each of whom she had been paying $2 a week for a long time in order to insure herself against arrest. Those men, it was said, collected similar tribute from scores of other women, and the prisoner gave the names of nearly fifty women who have made similar payments. Other policemen than the four just referred to were implicated, but the evidence is not complete in other cases.

Former members of the Vice Squad, four of whom were mixed up in the Claiche trial—and they are not the four mentioned by the woman yesterday—have already betrayed considerable anxiety for their own fate. It is regarded as likely that the District Attorney will get useful information from some of them.

Certain phases of the case may be placed before the Grand Jury very soon, and arrests may occur at any time. But the investigation is likely to drag along for some time, the purpose of the District Attorney and the Police Commissioner being to go to the bottom of the matter before taking final action.

One of the jurors drawn to try Berthe Claiche has started among his fellow-jurors a petition to Justice Davis for leniency toward the girl, who is soon to be sentenced for manslaughter.

MAY REINSTATE McLAUGHLIN.

Ex-Policeman, Convicted of Manslaughter, Will Try to Get Back.

Ex-Policeman Frank McLaughlin, who was dismissed from the force after being convicted of manslaughter in the first degree for shooting down John W. Patterson, a negro watchman, and to whom Recorder Goff later granted a new trial, succeeded yesterday in having the original indictment dismissed by Judge O'Sullivan in General Sessions.

Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler told the court that his client's motive for wanting the indicted disposed of was his desire to obtain reinstatement on the police force. Assistant District Attorney Smythe opposed the motion on the ground that the finding of new evidence might at any time make a new trial desirable.

Judge O'Sullivan said that it seemed unjust to him that such a serious charge should be kept hanging over a man's head, and granted the motion.

This will undoubtedly be followed by an immediate suit for reinstatement. The shooting of Patterson caused a sensation. From evidence produced in court it seemed that the policeman had fired the fatal shot when the watchman was lying on the ground. On the other hand, much of the testimony given by the witnesses for the prosecution was contradictory.

TELLS OF A PATRICK PLOT.

Texan Says $250 Was Offered for Testimony to Aid Him.

District Attorney Jerome had a letter yesterday from Clyde Creighton of Houston, Texas, concerning whom he received this telegram while the hearing on the motion for a new trial for Albert T. Patrick was on before Recorder Goff:

> Keep the present witnesses you have and send for Clyde Creighton, and then Houston will be a good town.
>
> MAXCEY, LUCAS & BONNEY.

The identity of the signers of that message has not been revealed. Creighton, who read of the telegram in a Houston newspaper, has this to say to Mr. Jerome:

> I was approached upon the streets of Houston by McNearney, a one-legged man. [illegible] Patrick witness,) who told me that th[illegible] a good thing in sight in the Patrick m[illegible] case in New York, and told me that I had a chance to accomplish something by going there. He told me that Mr. Millican (John T. Milliken of St. Louis, brother-in-law of Patrick,) was in Houston and would make a proposition to me. He offered me $250 to go to New York and swear in behalf of Patrick. I refused.
>
> I then went to Sheriff Archie Anderson and John Kennedy and explained the situation. They advised me not to enter into the conspiracy.
>
> I told McNearney that I didn't want any money of that kind. I saw a man introduced as Millican. He made no direct proposition.
>
> Skinny Martin, the alias of Joseph Jordan, the Patrick witness who was sent to Sing Sing for a year and a half after pleading guilty to perjury, told me that he was going to New York, and showed me a twenty-dollar bill. He asked me to take a drink, but I refused.
>
> By the New York dispatch I am characterized as a disreputable character, but I have never been in jail on a serious charge that could be substantiated. I consider myself superior to the witnesses you've had before you in New York.
>
> Hoping that you will give this letter the same publicity given the telegram sent from Houston, I am yours,
>
> CLYDE CREIGHTON.
> P. S.—I am informed that your witnesses, before leaving Houston, were flush with money —more than I have ever seen them with before. I was told by them that they were going to New York to get a new trial for Patrick, charged with the murder of W. M. Rice. I don't want any blood money. Therefore, I am getting along without that kind of coin.

Milliken retained ex-Judge A. R. Railey of Houston, who took the affidavits of the Texas witnesses and sent them on here. He was an affiant himself in the motion for a new trial for his brother-in-law, and said in his sworn affidavit that he had spent large sums for detectives, who ferreted out the witnesses. Railey, when placed on the stand, said he had hired no detectives.

It was also brought out at the hearing that Mr. Jerome had an affidavit sworn to by F. M. Quinby, a member of the Houston Fire Department, who alleged that $200 had been offered to him by Railey to come North and testify on behalf of Patrick.

Milliken was quoted in court as having said that he had spent $71,000 on the defense of Patrick. This statement was corroborated by Mr. Olcott, counsel for Patrick. When Milliken was ordered by the Recorder to appear in court and let himself be cross-examined by the District Attorney in regard to the facts set forth in his affidavit, he failed to appear, and the only explanation given by counsel for his absence was that he was very busy. Mr. Jerome seemed very anxious at the time to get a chance to cross-question Milliken.

POLICEMEN WEREN'T LOOKING

Two Prisoners Walked Past Them from Court to Freedom.

Not one but two prisoners escaped from the Adams Street Court, Brooklyn, on Tuesday through the negligence of the police offices stationed in the court.

The first prisoner to walk out of the pen and into the street was Edward Wilson, who is known to the police by several names, and who was charged with being a pickpocket. The second prisoner to disappear was Frank Healy, arrested last Friday by a policeman who suspected him of burglary.

The two men, with fourteen others, were taken to the Adams Street Court for arraignment before Magistrate Wahle. When Wilson's name was called there was no answer. Inquiry revealed the fact that while another prisoner was being led to the bar a door between the pen and the courtroom was left open, and Wilson slipped out, passing in front of the Magistrate, officers, and spectators. He walked to the street.

There were two complaints against Healy, one charging him with burglary and the other with vagrancy. The Magistrate held Healy on the burglary charge to await the action of the Grand Jury. The man was then taken back to the pen and the officer who appeared against him left the court.

Later the Magistrate found the complaint charging the prisoner with vagrancy and had him brought before the bar. There being no one present to press the complaint, Magistrate Wahle marked the paper "dismissed," and Healy calmly put on his overcoat, made for the street, and was blocks away before his absence was noted. He was afterward arrested in Dean Street, Brooklyn, and returned to jail. Wilson is still a free man.

CHURCH TO COST $1,000,000.

Dr. Stires Wants at Least That for the New St. Thomas's.

The Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, rector of St. Thomas's Church, told his congregation recently that plans have so far progressed toward the new St. Thomas's to go up on the site of the building destroyed by fire last June that it will be impossible to erect a structure sufficiently representative of a great parish for less than $1,000,000. It is not unlikely that the estimated cost of the new church by the time the plans are fully determined upon may be far in excess of that sum.

It was said soon after the fire that perhaps a structure costing at least $500,000 would be built. A survey of the situation sufficient to show that the excessive price of building materials would make impossible anything like an adequate building at that price caused the first estimate to be raised by some $300,000. This amount Dr. Stires now believes will be by no means too much. In an appeal to his congregation Dr. Stires says:

"Let us build here a church whose reverent beauty, without and within, shall persuade and almost compel man to worship; a church whose aspiring lines and enduring substance shall suggest and inspire a firm Christian faith; a church that shall be so impressive as to make the mere pleasure seeker who passes think more deeply for a moment of the things which are eternal."

THE MAN HIGHER UP IN THE DYNAMITE PLOT

Ironworker-Detective Accuses One in the Union.

NEW ARRESTS ARE EXPECTED

Trial of Moran and Weir, Charged with Attempting to Blow Up Building Begins To-morrow.

The trial of Charles Moran and Thomas Weir, the ironworkers who are charged with attempting to blow up the building under erection by Post & McCord at 304 East Twenty-third Street, will begin before Judge Foster in General Sessions to-morrow. Among the first witnesses to take the stand will be John Guthrie, through whose work the alleged dynamite plot was exposed and the arrest of the two defendants made possible.

Whether these men actually belong to the union once ruled by the late Sam Parks has not yet been proved. The defendants and the union deny it. Guthrie says they do. Yesterday he had a long conference with Assistant District Attorney Train, who is prosecuting the cases. Guthrie was brought to the Criminal Courts Building under guard of half a dozen detectives, hired because they were able to cope with men of the kind that once composed the notorious "entertainment committee" of the Housesmiths' Union. Should he fall into the hands of his enemies, it was said yesterday, his life would not be worth a cent.

It was learned yesterday that Guthrie had furnished information insuring the arrest of the man "higher up," or the man within the union who directed the movements of Moran and Weir as well as of Guthrie himself. This man also furnished the money, it is said, with which the dynamite was bought. When, where, and how the explosive was obtained is not yet known, but there is hope, it was said yesterday, that some very valuable information may be obtained from a woman in Brooklyn with whom the District Attorney's office has already been in communication. She is supposed to know the whole inside of the conspiracy besides being able, it is thought, to furnish some badly wanted information about the two prisoners.

Guthrie was arrested with Weir and Moran and treated by the police just as if he had been in the same boat as the others. This was part of the plan mapped out in advance. Instead of being turned loose at once Guthrie was locked up in the Tombs with Moran and Weir and kept there a week. In that time his fellow-prisoners had no suspicion that he was against them.

They were visited several times by counsel said to have been hired by the union, and a plan of defense was laid out. Guthrie agreed to this. It consisted, he says, in a proposal to testify unanimously that the dynamite found on one of them had just been picked up in the street near the Bliss Building, and that the prisoners were engaged in preventing what they suspected to be a plot instead of carrying out one. Guthrie managed to convey the report of this plan to his employers. Not until he left the prison after a week did the other two men guess how they had been taken in.

Although Guthrie has furnished most of the evidence turned over to Mr. Train, other parts have come from the secret service department of the Building Trades Employers' Association. At present detectives in the employ of the association, as well as a large squad of detective sergeants, are at work in Brooklyn, Jersey City, and Manhattan gathering up loose ends of the evidence to be used against the alleged conspirators. New arrests may soon be looked for.

Secretary Patrick J. Farrell of the Greater New York Council of the Housesmiths' Union made announcement last evening that the union had begun an investigation on its own account into the alleged plot to dynamite the East Twenty-third Street building. Regarding the arrest of Guthrie, Moran, and Weir, he said:

"The union would like to know who furnished the cash bail, as Guthrie did not have the money to furnish it himself. In fact, it is known that up to a month ago he did not have a dollar to his name. He was then living in Jersey City.

"Another thing the union would like to know is why Guthrie has not been indicted the same as the others. All the dynamite taken by the police was found in Guthrie's possession. Guthrie himself admits this. The union has been carefully following up this case since it was first made public. It has also been investigating Guthrie's antecedents.

"It is not true that Moran is or ever was a walking delegate of this union. The only walking delegates are Marsey, Dolan, Henrietta, Curran, and Hawkes."

Acting District Attorney Trying to Verify Jury Fixing Stories.

Acting District Attorney Nott said yesterday that the records of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company had been turned over to the District Attorney's office and that efforts were being made to find in them some corroboration of the stories about jury-fixing and bribery told by Stanley S. Bagg, the former investigator for the company, and John H. Tillinghast, the professional juror who, after confessing, was sent to the penitentiary a few days ago for impersonating a juror in the City Court a few weeks ago.

Speaking of the criticisms of the District Attorney for taking no action against the street railway company officials who used Tillinghas, Mr. Nott said:

"We found at least eight cases in which Tillinghast had served as a juror in the City Court, although his name did not appear on the regular panel. The court records prove this. According to the law there was a conspiracy between Tillinghast and the clerks. Theoretically the cases were good. But conspiracy is a misdemeanor, and a misdemeanor is outlawed after two years, and none of the cases discovered was less than two years old. Tillinghast was not sent away on these cases.

"We tried then to make out a felony charge, by showing that false statements had been made under oath, constituting a subornation of perjury. Unfortunately it was proved that the jurors had been questioned first and sworn afterward, making the perjury charge impossible.

"We got from Stanley S. Bagg, the former investigator of the street railway company, a confession that he had received $10 a month from a certain person in the legal department of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company to give to Tillinghast. Bagg described vouchers that were to back his confession. No such vouchers exist. There was nothing but Bagg's word against the other man's. We have never said that any felony that was brought to our attention was outlawed. What we lacked utterly in the suggested cases against the company was legal corroboration.

TO STOP SMOKE NUISANCE BY REVIVING OLD LAW

Health Board Wants Ordinance for Smoke Consumers Restored.

OFFENDERS TO BE FINED

Darlington Promises to [illegible] on Complaints—If a Tugboat Wakes You Give Its Name.

There was a warm discussion of the smoke nuisance at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Health. Nearly all the three hours and a half spent behind closed doors was given up to plans to make permanent the blue sky above New York. The board came to a decision in favor of re-enacting an old ordinance requiring the use of smoke consumers.

Hereafter the police Bureau of Boiler Inspection, which issues licenses, will examine firemen and engineers in regard to taking care of superfluous smoke. Sergt. McDermott, in charge of the bureau, was present yesterday as an expert and agreed to add to the regular examination a test of the applicant's knowledge of smoke and smoke consumers.

In the Low administration, when the Sanitary Code was revised, the section which required all furnaces to be equipped with smoke-consuming appliences was left out. It was the general opinion yesterday that it should be reinstated in the Sanitary Code with the least possible delay.

There was a decided difference of opinion among the members of the board as to what course should be pursued, but none would tell about the argument afterward. The final decision was unanimous.

"I am very anxious to stop the nuisance of smoke hovering over the city," said Dr. Darlington, "just as anxious as anybody. I am going to do all I can to have the law enforced. We cannot say that a man shall burn hard coal or soft coal in his factory. It would be against the Constitution to tell any man that he could not use a certain sort of fuel. But we can order that he does not create a nuisance, and we can punish him if he disobeys."

When smoke becomes a nuisance is generally determined by the policemen attached to the Department of Health. There are about sixty of these policemen. When a citizen complains that too much smoke is pouring out of the chimneys in his neighborhood an officer of the sanitary squad is sent out to investigate.

Of course there are regular sanitary Inspectors in the department, but their services are needed for examinations that require more technical knowledge than does an examination of smoke in the sky. It is considered that a policeman is good enough for that. Besides, there are not nearly enough regular sanitary Inspectors to go around, and if their attention was depended upon to keep the skies visible, New York might be another Pittsburg to-day.

When a citizen complains of smoke and the sanitary squad policeman, on examination, reports that the smoke has reached such a density and volume that it is a nuisance, then the department issues an order to the owner of the building to reduce the volume of smoke. If he refuses then he can be arrested and tried before a Judge in Special Sessions.

Section 1,264 of the New York Charter empowers the Health Department to arrest anybody who shall continue to disobey its order or resist enforcement of it. The section also says that "any person so arrested shall be thereafter treated and disposed of as any other person arrested for a misdemeanor." This section, reinforced by the old law relating to the construction of furnaces, the Board of Health considers ample.

The plan now is to issue an order against every persistent offender and to have him fined according to law. The attempts of the department to abate the nuisance will be limited only by the number of Inspectors and sanitary squad policemen.

The board also considered yesterday the whistling of tugboats at night on the Hudson. Residents of the upper west side, led by Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, called on the Health Department to aid them. It was decided that no additional law was re[illegible] plaints and have the Captains fined. A peculiar difficulty is that when a sleepy west sider is waked up in the middle of the night he cannot know the name of the tug whose whistle disturbed his slumbers.

HELD FOR PRACTICING LAW.

Charles B. Steele's Name in a Firm, but He Is Not a Member of the Bar.

Charles Brewster Steele of the law firm of Brainsby, Doris & Steele, at 32 Broadway, was arraigned in the Tombs Court yesterday on a charge of practicing law without being admitted to the bar. He waived examination and was held for trial in Special Sessions.

Steele had made an affidavit that he had been admitted to the bar in Maryland. Later he said he meant only that he had been in a law office in Baltimore. His assertion that his name had been joined to the firm name, Brainsby, Doris & Steele, without his knowledge brought out the assertion that he had issued personal circulars giving notice of his admission to the firm. Steele is the owner of an estate on Long Island known as Linden Hall.

JUSTICE BROWN TO GO; FULLER ALSO MAY RETIRE

Talk of Reorganizing the United States Supreme Court.

TAFT MAY SUCCEED FULLER

Believed in Washington the President Will Select Judges Who Will Uphold the Rate Law.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The announced determination of Justice Brown to retire from the Supreme Court has revived the report that Chief Justice Fuller, who is now in his seventy-third year, would also retire. Justice Brown reached the age of 70 last Friday, and became eligible to retire; but he will continue to serve on the bench until the October term, spending a part of his Summer abroad.

The main reason for his decision to retire arises from the failure of his eyesight. Three years ago his sight was nearly lost, but he placed himself under the care of expert oculists and submitted religiously to their mandate that he should not use his eyes and should remain for a certain length of time in a dark room, and after one or two operations his sight was partially restored.

The President, when notified of Justice Brown's intention three weeks ago, tendered to Senator Knox the appointment to succeed Justice Brown. The Pennsylvania Senator declined on the ground that his health would not stand the strain incident to the arduous labors of a Supreme Court Judge. Hardly a week passes that Senator Knox does not suffer from some slight illness, and at this time he is confined to the house by a serious cold, which kept him from the Capitol to-day.

It is understood that the President will look for a successor to Justice Brown in the Third Judicial Circuit, but there has been no mention of any particular lawyer or jurist who has been specially considered.

The revival of the expectation that Chief Justice Fuller will soon retire has again brought forward the probability that Secretary Taft will be selected to succeed him. No other name has been mentioned as likely to be considered in this connection.

The occurrence of a vacancy on the Supreme bench just at the psychological moment when Congress is likely to put a railroad rate law on the statute books has given rise to gossip as to what sort of men President Roosevelt will choose for Supreme Court Justices. There has also to-day been talk of a project to increase the Supreme Court from nine to eleven Justices. The last increase was made during the Administration of President Grant, when it was desired to sustain the policy of the Republican Party in banking legislation.

It is urged that President Roosevelt would not hesitate at this time if the policy of rate control should be in danger at the hands of the Supreme Court to follow the precedent and ask that the court be enlarged. The fact that the business before the court is always far beyond its capacity for consideration, and that it is always several months behind its docket in hearing cases would give support to the contention that the court should be increased.

There can be little doubt that in the selection of the three Justices to succeed Chief Justice Fuller, Justice Harlan, and Justice Brown, who are all entitled to retire, and also in the appointment of two additional Justices, the President would choose men who would sustain the law that Congress seems likely to pass.

Justice Brown has served on the Supreme Court bench a little more than fifteen years, having been appointed by President Harrison in 1890. His recent birthday furnished the occasion for an amusing incident. Ten years ago Justice Field was still sticking to the Supreme Court bench, despite the fact that age had so impaired his faculties that he was no longer able to adorn it. The overworked and short-handed court was seriously hampered by the presence of a Judge who was able to bear so small a part in its labors. Justice Brown, meeting an old friend in Pittsburg, talked to him of the difficult situation that Justice Field had created, and concluded:

"When I get to be seventy, if I don't resign from the bench, I want you to come to Washington and kick me off it."

Last Friday his Pittsburg friend paid a visit to him. The Justice was glad to see him, and asked him what he had come for.

"I have come to remind you of a conversation we had ten years ago," replied his friend. "This is your seventieth birthday, and I have come to comply with the instructions you gave me then."

Justice Brown remembered the conversation and laughed. In fact, he laughed so much more heartily than the mild joke seemed to call for that his friend suspected some hidden reason. To-day, when he learned that Justice Brown had notified President Roosevelt some time ago of his intention to retire this year, he knew what it was.

WALDORF ASTOR TO WED.

Bride-Elect Was Divorced from Robert Shaw, 2d.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., March 8.—The statement is published here from an apparently authoritative source that Mrs. Nannie Langhorne Shaw, the divorced wife of Robert Gould Shaw, Second, of Boston, is engaged to be married to Waldorf Astor, son of William Waldorf Astor.

It is announced that the wedding will take place in the Spring.

Mrs. Shaw is a daughter of C. D. Langhorne of Albemarle County, Va., and a sister of Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mrs. Reginald Brooks, and Mrs. Moncure Perkins of this city.

Waldorf Astor is 25 years old, and is the elder of the two sons of William Waldorf Astor. Some months ago he paid a rather long visit to New York. He was very young when his father, defeated for Congress, and, as he said, disgusted with America because of newspaper attacks on him, went to England to live and became a British subject. Young Astor was educated at Eton and Oxford, and was a great favorite at both places. At Eton he was prominent in sports and was Captain of the Boats.

Mrs. Shaw is the third of the Langhorne sisters, famous throughout this country for their beauty. In 1897, when 18 years old, she married, at her father's place in Virginia, Robert Gould Shaw, Second, of Boston, a well-known society man and polo player. The couple were often in New York and attended the smartest entertainments in Boston and this city. They also hunted a good deal in Long Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw separated in 1902. Mrs. Shaw obtained a divorce and the custody of her only child, Robert Gould Shaw, Third.

Just before the decision was rendered Mrs. Shaw sailed for Europe, and has lived in England during the greater part of the time since then. Last May it was reported that she was engaged to be married to Lord Revolstoke, head of the Baring family. At one time she shared a house at Market Harborough with Mrs. John Jacob Astor.

Three days after the divorce was granted to Mrs. Nannie Langhorne Shaw, Mr. Shaw married Mrs. Mary Converse, widow of C. H. Converse of Newton, Mass.

The brother of Waldorf Astor, John Jacob Astor, a few days ago became an officer in one of the crack English Guard regiments. It is understood that William Waldorf Astor wants his elder son to enter Parliament.

80-CENT GAS CLINCHED.

Senate Passes Page-Agnew Bill—Mayor McClellan Pleased.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 8.—The Page-Agnew bill for eighty-cent gas from May 1 next went through the Senate with a rush today, only three members, McCarren, Cassidy, and Coggeshall, all of whom stood against the bill last year, voting against it. As Mayor McClellan, to whom the bill now goes, is on record as favoring it, and Gov. Higgins also favors it, the measure will quickly become law.

Mayor McClellan expressed himself as much gratified yesterday regarding the passage of the Eighty-Cent Gas bill. While the Mayor would not in any way indicate what his action would be on the measure when it comes before him, he called attention to the fact that last year he wired the Tammany members of the Legislature urging them to vote for the measure. Early in the present year he sent a message to the Board of Aldermen urging that it indorse the Eighty-Cent bill then pending at Albany.

PURCHASE LAKE ERIE ROAD.

Pennsylvania and Vanderbilt Interests Combine to Buy New Line.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 8.—The announcement is made to-night that the Lake Erie & Pittsburg Railroad, which was begun as an independent line by Kenefick & Carter, the railroad contracting firm, has been purchased jointly by the Pennsylvania and Vanderbilt interests. The amount involved in the deal is not less than $3,750,000.

This sale means that the Pennsylvania and the Vanderbilt interests have in effect accomplished a merger to shut out future competition from the lake ports. It is also a blow at the projected trunk line which is being built by the Standard Oil interests from Norfolk, Va., to tap the West Virginia coal fields.

The new road will also be used as an extension of the Pittsburg & Lake Erie Railroad, which will give that line an exclusive route into Cleveland.

The Lake Erie & Pittsburg was planned as a double track line from Lorain, Ohio, to Pittsburg via Youngstown. Its cost is estimated at $15,000,000. By the terms of sale the road is to be completed by its original owners so far as they desire it.

ACCUSED OF $10,000 FRAUD.

Henderson, at Hotel Algonquin, Arrested on West Virginia Warrant.

Charles Henderson, staying at the Hotel Algonquin, in West Forty-fourth Street, was arrested last night as a fugitive from justice by a detective from Wheeling, West Va., and Detective Sergeant Thor of this city. He is under indictment in West Virginia for obtaining $10,000 from William P. Hubbard, a Wheeling lawyer, by false pretenses and obtaining the attorney's signature to notes by misrepresentation.

Henderson was connected with the International Mercantile Agency and, it is charged, unloaded a lot of the stock of that concern upon Mr. Hubbard, alleging that it was treasury stock and had never been sold below par.

ARTIST STRICKEN ON CAR.

William H. Richardson Dies on the Way to the Hospital.

Stricken while on an Eighth Avenue car with his brother last night, William H. Richardson, an artist, died on his way to St. Vincent's Hospital. The Coroner will make an examination this morning. Mr. Richardson lived in a tiny room at 322 West Thirty-fourth Street. Yesterday when he went out he told the landlady that he was suffering from bronchitis.

"But I got over it a year ago and I'll get over it again," he said.

He was 65 years old and lived all alone. The tenants in No. 322 remember him kindly for the courtesy with which he treated all about him. Occasionally his brother Arthur called to see him; otherwise he seemed to have no acquaintances.

Union League for Voting Machines.

The Union League Club last night adopted a petition to the Legislature to make such preparations as will enable an effective trial of voting machines in this county at the next general election.

TRAP SET FOR BANKER AT THE HOTEL ASTOR

Man with Forged Letter Took President Moore There.

A PINKERTON MAN FOLLOWED

Would-Be Robber of Amsterdam National's Head Says He's a Ticket Speculator in Desperate Straits.

Just as the employes of the New Amsterdam National Bank, at Thirty-ninth Street and Broadway, were settling down to work on Wednesday, a young man walked in. His appearance was more innocent than his intentions. A good part of his face was hidden behind big smoked glasses, and as he peered through them he kept his chin atilt. Walking up to one of the grilled windows, he spoke to the clerk on the other side.

"Is Mr. Moore in?" he asked.

"Yes," said the clerk.

"Well, please give him this letter."

Two minutes later President Robert R. Moore tore open an envelope and read this, written on Hotel Astor stationery:

Mr. Moore.

Dear Sir: I have just discovered what seems to be a scheme to obtain a large sum of money from you which has a rather queer look about it, and have detained the man until you can see if anything is wrong. He claims to be closely related to you, and asserts that you understand the matter. He registered last night under an assumed name. Though I am not known to you, you will meet with no unpleasantness. For certain reasons I would advise you to come at once—without delay. I have engaged the room next his apartment and, unless you wish, your presence need not become known to him. The bearer, my assistant, will show you it.

JNO. CORNISH,
Manager Pinkerton Agency.

Knew Cornish's Signature.

Now President Moore has had dealings with John Cornish, and he knew that the Pinkerton man signed himself "John" and not "Jno." The signature and the general, vague character of the note excited the banker's suspicion. Without delay he turned to his desk telephone and called up the Pinkerton Detective Agency at 57 Broadway. Assistant Superintendent Dougherty answered the call.

"Is Mr. Cornish there?" Mr. Moore asked.

"Yes, but he's busy now. This is Dougherty; anything I can do for you?"

"There's a man here with a letter signed with Cornish's name, telling me to go to the Hotel Astor. I suspect something wrong."

It was all news to Cornish.

"Keep the man there," he told Mr. Moore over the 'phone. "Just let me send a man up—I'll send Duhain. Don't let the man get away."

Going out of his office Mr. Moore took a look at the visitor and said:

"I'm very busy now, come back in about half an hour and I'll be ready to go to see Mr. Cornish."

Meanwhile Clovis E. Duhain of the Pinkerton Agency had sped into the Subway station at Wall Street, changed at the Grand Central, and mounted to the street at Times Square. When he got to the New Amsterdam Bank the man with the smoked glasses was in the lobby waiting. Duhain went past him and into the President's office. It was as he passed that he took careful note of the glasses.

"Go on with him," the detective said in a whisper, when Mr. Moore's door had closed behind him; "I'll be right behind you."

Banker Went with Him.

So the banker and the young man started up Broadway. Duhain was on the other side of the street. When the Pinkerton man reached the Hotel Astor he passed on around into Forty-fifth Street and entered the side door. In doing so, of course, he had lost sight of the two men. Going up to the desk Duhain said to the clerk:

"There's a man named John Cornish stopping here; what room is he in?"

"Hello!" exclaimed the man behind the desk. "What's up, Mr. Duhain? Trouble?"

"Something's going to happen," the detective said. "Where's your house detective?"

"Not here—just gone out."

"Well, I'll have to do the trick myself. What room is this 'Cornish' in?"

"Hundred and nineteen, first floor."

When Mr. Moore had entered the Astor by the main entrance his guide took him straight to the first floor. They walked up to a door and the young man with the smoked glasses rapped on it with his knuckles. There was no answer.

"He must be dressing," he said to Mr. Moore. "Just come in my room and wait."

"No, I guess I'll wait in the corridor," replied the banker, casting a look at the elevator. He was not going into a room with the stranger and trust to the Pinkerton detective breaking in.

The wait was not long. As Duhain stepped out of the elevator Mr. Moore called him. The detective would have liked to let the game go a little further, but it was too late now. He approached the stranger and told him he was under arrest.

Prisoner a Ticket Speculator.

Then a message was sent to Headquarters and Detective Sergeant Carey was soon on the spot. As soon as Carey saw the man he recognized him as a ticket speculator who had operated in front of Broadway theatres.

"So it's you, is it?" the Central Office man said. "What's your game?"

"I haven't got any game."

"Who's the other fellow?" Carey had asked, when Duhain had told him of the letter.

"There isn't any other fellow," was the answer.

"Who wrote the letter, then?"

"I wrote it."

Then the man broke down completely. He said he was Henry Pillsbury, a ticket speculator, of 266 West Forty-third Street.

"I was down and out," he said, and as he spoke he wept. "I didn't have a cent, and I was ready to stick somebody up for it."

He had only fifteen cents and a speculator's license. What he intended to do when he got Mr. Moore in the room the detectives cannot tell. They have only two theories—either he contemplated assault, or meant to blackmail the banker by threats. He said that before registering at the Astor as John Cornish, New Orleans, he had registered at both the St. Andrew and the Belleclaire, and had left when unable to pay his bills.

After a night at Police Headquarters, Pillsbury was arraigned in Jefferson Market Court yesterday. Mr. Moore signed a corroborative affidavit, which was affixed to the complaint papers signed by Mr. Cornish, and Pillsbury was put under $2,000 bail on a charge of forgery in the third degree. There will be a hearing of the case to-morrow. Pillsbury could not furnish bail, and was locked up.

GEO. E. GREEN ACQUITTED.

Jury Frees Him on Post Office Graft Charge—Scene in Court.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Former State Senator George E. Green of Binghamton, N. Y., who has been on trial here for a fortnight on charges of conspiring with George W. Beavers, late Superintendent of the salaries and allowances division of the Post Office Department, to defraud the Government in connection with the sale of time recording clocks to the department, was acquitted by the jury this afternoon.

When the verdict was announced one of Mr. Green's closest friends and fellow townsmen who sat by his side threw his arms around him and fairly shook him. Others jumped to their feet and rushed toward the table at which Green sat, and for several minutes he was kept busy shaking hands. Mr. Green was overwhelmed with congratulations. The jurymen also shook hands with him.

Mr. Green was much moved. His first act was to telephone to his wife, giving her the news. He also sent a telegram to a little girl in Schenectady, who had written him that she had prayed for him, telling her that her prayers had been answered.

As soon as the verdict had been given Attorney Worthington asked that the bond for $10,000 in one of the other cases against Green be reduced. With the consent of the District Attorney the court fixed the bond at $5,000. O. G. Staples of Washington signed the bond.

DWIGHT FOR STATE CHAIRMAN

Senator Platt Comes Out for Him and Says Reorganize Now.

United States Senator Thomas C. Platt came out strongly yesterday for Congressman John W. Dwight for Chairman of the Republican State Committee to succeed Benjamin B. Odell. The Senator returned to New York with Senator Depew, and at his office discussed the plans of the reorganizers of his party.

"They seem to have dropped things for the time being," said Senator Platt. "I am in favor of reorganization now, and if the move would be made at once by some one of its proper standing I am confident that its object would be accomplished. Congressman Vreeland would not take the place, and I believe that Congressman John W. Dwight is the most available candidate. I am in favor of his selection as State Chairman.

"As for possibilities in the line for the Governorship next Fall I do not wish to enter into any discussion. It is too early, and the situation has not yet developed sufficiently."

FRESHET MUD IN CITY WATER.

But There's No Danger in the Mud, Engineer Birdsall Says.

The yellowish tint which New York householders find to-day in their drinking water is due to a freshet in the Croton water shed following the heavy rainfall of Saturday last. North of Central Park the water contains more mud than below Central Park. Chief Engineer G. W. Birdsall of the Water Department explained this yesterday. There are no settling reservoirs north of Central Park, so the water can't stand until the mud in it settles. After a freshet like that caused by Saturday's rainfall, Engineer Birdsall said, New Yorkers must expect this muddy condition of the water.

"But," he said, "folks need not get scared over the appearance of the water. There is no danger of disease from this water, whether it is clear or muddy. Of course, some folks have a prejudice against it, but can easily remedy things by using a simple canton flannel filter. It can be made in big shape, with the fuzzy side of the flannel inward. Then tie it to the faucet. This will clear the water, leaving it just a little bit milky looking."

ASSEMBLYMAN COHN TO WED.

Originator of the "Bachelor Bill" Has the Courage of His Convictions.

There was an automobile collision in Lakewood a year ago and now ex-Assemblyman Isidor Cohn, who introduced a bill in the Legislature to fine unmarried men $50 apiece, is engaged to Miss Anna Galitzka. The sequence is not exactly clear, but this is how it happened:

Mr. Cohn was in one automobile and Miss Galitzka was in the other. Nobody was hurt, but the occupants of the two machines were thrown into rather sudden acquaintance. Mr. Cohn apologized to Miss Galitzka because his automobile had run into hers, and she accepted his apology. Then there were mutual congratulations that nobody was hurt. The couple were soon very friendly.

Two thousand invitations to the engagement reception have been sent out. The reception will be held at the prospective bride's home, 506 First Street, Brooklyn, on March 18. The wedding will take place in the Hotel Astor in June.

DE MAURIAC AGAIN REJECTED.

His Second Attempt to Enter the Stock Exchange Fails.

Yesterday was the regular meeting day of the Stock Exchange Committee on Admissions, a routine event to which little attention is paid on the floor, but yesterday the list of elections was awaited with interest because of the candidacy of Norman P. De Mauriac, a well-known figure in Wall Street, who was making his second try to get into the Exchange.

Last Summer Mr. De Mauriac bought a seat, but was not elected, and a fortnight ago he broke all precedent as far as the memory of the Street goes and purchased another seat. It was generally supposed when a membership was posted for transfer to Mr. De Mauriac that he had some private assurance that his candidacy would be more favorably considered.

Yesterday when the list of elections came out of the committee meeting, Mr. De Mauriac's name was not on it. No explanation is ever given by the Exchange for failure to elect. The usual procedure when a candidate is not acceptable is to have his sponsors withdraw his name.

ROGERS AND ARCHBOLD CONFER WITH ROOSEVELT

Night Conference at White House with Standard Oil Men.

ALL THREE KEEP SILENCE

President May Have Summoned Them for Serious Discussion of Recent Happennings—Hadley's Suits.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—H. H. Rogers and John D. Archbold of New York, Vice President of the Standard Oil Company, were in conference with President Roosevelt at the White House to-night. Neither of them would discuss the nature of their call. They arrived in Washington early in the evening and expect to leave here to-morrow.

While nothing official could be learned as to the subject of discussion it is surmised that the President summoned Messrs. Rogers and Archbold for a serious discussion over the recent efforts of the Standard Oil Company to delay inquiries respecting the ouster suit brought by the State of Missouri. The whereabouts of John D. Rockefeller, it is also thought, came under discussion.

Rogers and Archbold went by appointment to the White House at 9 o'clock and remained until 11. Whether or not they will hold any further conferences with the President or will see any Senators, Representatives, or Cabinet officers, they would not reveal.

There is a report current that the subject of the conference was the investigation into the oil industry conducted by the Bureau of Corporations under direction of Commissioner Garfield, and that the President had been placed in possession of facts which were the basis of the discussion.

Special to The New York Times.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 8.—Attorney General Hadley to-day flatly denied that he had entered into an agreement with Standard Oil attorneys by the terms of which he was to call off his process servers that have been seeking for months to subpoena John D. Rockefeller, in return for a promise that W. H. and H. M. Tilford and M. M. Van Buren would appear before him in New York to testify.

"After the decision of the Supreme Court of Missouri sustaining my contention that I had a right to evidence concerning the common stock ownership in the Standard, Waters Pierce, and Republic Oil Companies," said Mr. Hadley, "attorneys for the Standard informed me that there would be no further disposition on the part of witnesses to refuse to answer questions put to them fully. I informed the Standard's attorneys that if the two Tilfords and Van Buren would give me all the information I wanted I did not expect to take any further testimony.

"What I have endeavored to secure in this case is evidence in support of the allegations in my information, not witnesses who might lend a sensational interest to the proceedings. No agreements have been made or considered that John D. Rockefeller or any other person will not be subpoenaed as a witness, and I do not intend to make any such agreement."

Alfred D. Eddy of Chicago, Western counsel for the Standard Oil interests, will meet General Counsel Elliott this morning at 26 Brodway and submit to him the views of Attorney General Hadley of Missouri, relative to the possibility of expediting the New York hearing in the suits against the Oil Trust instituted by the Western prosecutor.

"It is possible," said Mr. Elliott yesterday afternoon, "that some agreement may be reached between opposing counsel by which the taking of testimony may be much simplified when the hearing is resumed here. It may be that certain facts may be agreed to, and that the Standard Oil Company, through its attorneys, will agree to produce certain witnesses. It is not true that any compromise has been reached, or that anything definite has been determined.

"Mr. Eddy and Mr. Hadley were together in Missouri, and they talked over the situation, Mr. Hadley outlining the subjects on which he desired information. That is all that has been done to date."

"Is it true that the Standard Oil attorneys are actuated by a desire to relieve John D. Rockefeller from pursuit by process servers?" was asked.

"It is absurd," Mr. Elliott replied, "to imagine such a condition of affairs. I do not suppose Mr. Rockefeller has been in 26 Broadway twice in the last three years."

SUBWAY'S FURTHEST NORTH.

Trains Will Be Run to the Ship Canal at 6 A. M. March 12.

After being in the about-to-be-opened state for months the Subway under Washington Heights will be really opened next Monday. The time for the first train is set. At exactly 6 A. M. a shuttle train will leave 157th Street, pass through the deep tunnel and travel over the elevated section, across the valley beyond Fort George, to the Harlem Ship Canal.

The deep stations at 168th Street and 181st Street are not yet completed, so the shuttle train will run by them at about thirty miles an hour. The first stop north of 157th Street will be at Dyckman Street, which is a hundred yards or so beyond the tunnel's portal and where the road is elevated. The next station, at 207th Street will be skipped, but stops will be made at both 215th and 221st Streets.

The elevators are the unfinished parts of the two deep stations. At 168th Street the trains are 100 feet from the surface of the earth and at 181st Street about 125 feet. To accommodate the passengers the elevators must be very large, especially at 168th Street, which is just outside the gates of the American League baseball grounds. In the baseball season the crush at this station will undoubtedly be tremendous.

All travelers beneath the Heights will have to change cars at 157th Street. Later, of course, a through train service will be established. The now unfinished stations, it is expected, will be finished within two or three months at the latest.

How often the shuttle trains will run has not yet been decided. It depends on the number of passengers. If there is sufficient demand they will run on a very small headway.

ROCKEFELLER'S GATE STOLEN

One of Three Ordered to Bar Sightseers—Watchmen Eluded.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, March 8.—John D. Rockefeller, when he was here early in December, gave orders to his Superintendent to put gates across each of the three roadways entering his property. He was annoyed by hackmen, who drove around his place with sightseers.

The barriers were completed a few weeks ago. When the workmen employed in building roads at the Rockefeller place got there early this morning they found that somebody had walked off with the Ridge Avenue gate in the night. The gate was about twenty feet wide and four feet high, and would require more than one person to handle it. Two watchmen guard the Rockefeller place at night, but knew nothing about the disappearance of the gate.

IS J. J. HILL BACK?

Some Mystery, but No Fear of Subpoena Servers in His Case.

Wall Street heard yesterday that James J. Hill had come back from Aiken, S. C., presumably to take up the threads of the negotiations for a lease of the Great Northern's ore lands to the Steel Corporation where these were dropped a fortnight ago, just before Mr. Hill's departure for the South. None of his friends, however, would admit that he had seen Mr. Hill.

One of Mr. Hill's friends, when asked if he knew whether Mr. Hill had come back, said:

"I do not believe he has. There are no strings tied to Mr. Hill, however. There would be no need in his case of negotiating for the calling off of subpoena servers to permit his return to this city in comfort."

STUCK TO BLAZING ENGINE.

Engineer Badly Burned in Saving His Train—The Cab Destroyed.

UTICA, March 8.—Engineer James Jacobs runs the accommodation train on the Central Hudson Road leaving this city for Albany at 5:25 A. M. This morning when the train was between Fort Plain and Palatine Bridge the engine cab caught fire. Soon the whole framework was blazing.

The train was at that time about three-quarters of a mile from Palatine Bridge. The engineer stuck to his post and decided to make the station if possible. The cab was ablaze on all sides when the station was reached. Jacobs was badly burned about the face and head, but his fireman had escaped over the tender soon after the blaze started. The cab of the engine was destroyed.

WORK, SAYS WADSWORTH.

Adjournment in April Desired by Leaders—Senate Balks.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 8.—Speaker Wadsworth to-day, acting, it is understood, for Gov. Higgins, called a conference of all the committee Chairmen of the Assembly.

"Get to work," was the burden of his speech. "It is the plan," the Speaker is understood to have said, "that we dispose of every bit of legislation now before all the committees. Decide whether bills are to come out or stay in. Those that are to come out, get them out with all dispatch. Do everything possible to clear the decks within three weeks."

It was made plain that adjournment early in April was the thing desired.

The conviction that the Senate will do nothing whatever toward facilitating legislation militates against unanimous action by the House Chairmen. A prominent Senator, in talking of adjournment, said that late April would be the only reasonable date to talk about, and that if May 1 arrived before adjournment he would not be surprised.

JOHN P. HAINES RESIGNS; QUITS THE S. P. C. A. MAY 1

Society's Board Unanimously Accepts His Resignation.

FIGHT FOR REFORM GOES ON

There May Be an Investigation—Retiring President Complains of Malice in His Opponents.

Yielding to overwhelming pressure from within and without the organization, John P. Haines resigned yesterday as President of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. His resignation was unanimously accepted by the Board of Managers, and will take effect May 1.

That President Haines took this action to forestall any further discussion of his administration or any adverse action by his oppenents in the board was the opinion of some of the latter who had come prepared to begin a determined fight to retire him. Their plans included an open investigation of the society's affairs, and, if necessary, an appeal to the Legislature to have him ousted.

The fight was to begin at the regular meeting of the Board of Managers, which had been fixed for 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. Haines offered his resignation at a special meeting, which had been called by him an hour in advance of the regular meeting. In the meantime it is learned that his letter of resignation had been in the hands of one of his friends on the board for two days, and the way had been carefully paved for its acceptance.

From the turn the proceedings took, however, it became plain that Mr. Haines's opponents were in complete control, and that there may be some investigation after all. Hardly had his letter of resignation been read and acted on by the board before one of its members offered a resolution with that end in view. The resolution was passed.

Complaints Filed in Batches.

This was at the special meeting. At the regular meeting which followed, two batches of complaints against the administration of the society, the nature of which was not divulged, were filed by four members who had been active in their opposition to the Haines policy. In the committee which was appointed to investigate these complaints and report to the board the majority was made up of opponents to Mr. Haines. It was predicted last night that there would not only be a complete investigation of the Haines administration, but a complete reorganization of the society following the retirement of Mr. Haines.

Of the nineteen members of the Board of Managers, fifteen attended the meetings. They were Gen. Charles F. Roe, Gen. Henry W. Carpentier, Gen. James Grant Wilson, Col. Alfred Wagstaff, Joel B. Erhardt, John H. Iselin, Frederic R. Coudert, John Mason Knox, Gordon Knox Bell, Evert J. Wendell, Nicholson Kane, the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, Charles M. Jesup, Henry Bergh, and R. W. G. Welling.

Col. Wagstaff presided at the special meeting which preceded the regular one. As soon as the meeting had been called to order John Mason Knox, Secretary of the society, arose and said:

"I have here a communication from the President to the Board of Managers which I have been requested to read to this meeting."

He then read the letter of resignation of Mr. Haines. It was long, some three thousand words, and the reading occupied nearly half an hour. In it Mr. Haines reviews his seventeen years of service as President of the society, gives statistics to show that the society has advanced in usefulness since he took hold, and contradicted the charges made against him by his opponents.

To the charge of financial mismanagement, Mr. Haines makes this answer:

Mr. Haines's Defense.

Of all the charges that have been brought against us the silliest is that of bad financial management. In the last seventeen years our work has grown immensely; our expenses have grown also. In 1888 we had nineteen persons in our employ; we have now eighty-four employes, all actively engaged in some part of the work. We had then only one ambulance and no horses; we have now three large ambulances, two motor ambulances, seven smaller ambulances, two tricycle carriers, and ten horses. We had then only one building in Manhattan and an office in Brooklyn; we have now our own spacious, well situated, well equipped headquarters in Manhattan, and we maintain an office with its own separate corps of employes in Brooklyn, two thoroughly equipped ambulance houses, and three shelters for animals which are used in connection with the work instrusted to us by the State. How, then, after all this expansion, do our finances stand? The answer may be very briefly given. It is this:

In 1888 our income (exclusive of bequests) was $26,906.08; in 1905 it was $100,785.

On Jan. 1, 1889, the assets of the society amounted to $209,041; on Jan. 1, 1906, they were $865,385.

And in 1888 the total income-producing investments of the society amounted to $230,922. On Jan. 1, 1906, our income-producing investments, cash on hand, and funds receivable within a few weeks, amount to $411,812.

Mr. Haines concludes his letter as follows:

It is at this time—after a long service, in which my whole energies have been engaged without consideration of personal business or personal comfort, without the moderate vacation that the busiest of business men allow themselves—that I have been assailed as though I had committed some act of wickedness, by a small but persistent band of people with this one common characteristic, that none of them has ever before been known to care for animal protection. For months, indeed for years, their malicious assaults have been kept up in the correspondence columns of the newspapers. Many articles have appeared under many names, which were actually written by the same hand. The agitation thus begun has been brought into the meetings of our society. Nothing has been too vile to be said, so long as the slanderers could keep clear of the danger of prosecution. It is said, for instance, that I have "misused" the funds of the society. I cannot prosecute for libel because the word misuse does not necessarily imply the dishonest or larcenous use that is insinuated. Many other statements have been made equally false and elusive.

While I have been willing and glad to serve the society and its cause with no other reward than the satisfaction of my own conscience and the fairly earned approval of my associates, I do not feel that, at my time of life and in my state of health, I am bound to continue a service which entails the endurance of a ceaseless stress of calumny and obloquy. Largely at the expense of my family, the society has had the best powers of the best years of my life; under existing conditions I am not willing to continue the sacrifice; therefore I resign.

But the day that I step out of this office there must be no possibility of question of the absolute integrity which rules and has ruled in every part of our business. After seventeen years of cheerful voluntary service, I hold myself entitled at least to that justice, and I therefore include in this letter of resignation, and make part of it, a communication from two of the best-known accountants in the United States.

The accountants, Stephen Little and Farquahar J. MacRae, write that at the request of President Haines they have carefully reviewed the report of Haskins & Sells, the expert accountants employed by the society to examine its accounts. They summarize their findings as follows:

Found No Wrong Intent.

"We found no peculiar or improper investments and no wrong intent anywhere manifest, and in our opinion, based on the examination of the books for the year 1905, all the receipts have been properly accounted for and all disbursements properly vouched for, and the affairs of the society honestly administered. Any impression to the contrary that may have been erroneously created we believe to be not only unjust but unfounded."

After the letter had been read Gen. Roe got up and moved that the resignation of President Haines be accepted. The motion was put to the vote immediately by Col. Wagstaff, the members of the board voting viva voce and all in favor of its acceptance. Then Gen. Carpentier got the floor.

"I am sure I voice the opinion of those present when I say to Mr. Haines that we accept his resignation with regret," he said.

After the matter of Mr. Haines's resignation had been thus briefly disposed of, Col. Erhardt announced that he had a resolution to offer. The resolution, according to the announcement made after the two meetings, which were held behind closed doors, was as follows:

Resolved, That the Auditing Committee be directed to confer with Haskins & Sells in view of the statement of the President at the last meeting of this society that an error appeared in the report of Haskins & Sells to the extent of $10,000, and that moreover Haskins & Sells in said report forced a balance by inserting an item that did not appear in the report of the society.

Mr. Knox, who in the presence of Mr. Haines made the statement to the press after the meeting, was asked how the expert accountants could have made such an error.

"I don't know exactly, but I understand there was a mistake made in adding up to the extent of this sum, and that a cross entry was made of a like amount in order to strike a balance," he replied.

"Was this error made in adding up expenditures or receipts?" Mr. Knox was asked.

"I could not tell you that," was his answer.

Haskins & Sells would not comment on the statement made by the officials of the society until they received the consent of their client.

President Haines himself occupied the chair at the regular meeting of the Board of Managers of which he is Chairman. The meeting had not been long under way when John H. Iselin handed up to Secretary Knox two batches of complaints, both in affidavit form and sworn to by Mr. Leonard Opdyke, F. D. Bethune, Mrs. Edith Wharton, the author, and Gen. Rush C. Hawkins.

Complaints Not Made Public.

These complaints were not made public, but it is understood they deal with a number of cases in which agents of the society are alleged to have been delinquent. There are other charges bearing on the allegations of general mismanagement of the society's affairs. Mr. Haines from the chair, moved that the complaints be received and investigated, and a committee was at once appointed for that purpose. This committee is composed of Mr. Iselin, Mr. Welling, and Henry Bergh. The two former have been active in opposing Mr. Haines.

Gen. Roe introduced a resolution which was unanimously passed directing the attorneys of the society, Messrs. Strong & Cadwalader, to oppose a bill now pending at Albany and framed for the purpose of enlarging and extending the powers of the Henry Bergh Humane Society, a rival organization. In order that this action should not be misunderstood, Frederic R. Coudert offered another resolution to the effect that, while the society is opposed to the policy of dividing police powers in a district between two or more societies as inexpedient, it welcomes the formation of any auxiliary organizations for animal protection.

That a policy of rigid economy will be inaugurated at once was declared by members of the board, and a beginning was made by the unanimous adoption of a resolution introduced by Henry Bergh, a son of the founder of the society. This resolution provides that the expenditures of the society, except for investment purposes, in no one year must exceed by more than $5,000 the receipts, exclusive of legacies and bequests.

This is a most radical departure, and by many was taken to indicate that the building at Madison Square, where the society has its headquarters, will be sold before the year is over. The building, which by many members is considered far too large for the volume of work done by the society, is said to be worth $500,000, and the new limit on the expenditures of the society would not permit of its maintenance in the style that things have been done under Mr. Haines.

May Rent Office Space.

The Board of Managers, it was said last night, are seriously considering whether it would not be wiser to rent office space and devote the funds to the cause for which the society was organized.

Steps were taken for a revision of the by-laws of the society, and a committee of five, composed of Gen. Roe, Gen. Carpentier, Mr. Coudert, Col. Wagstaff, and Mr. Welling, were appointed to do the work and report to the meeting to be held on April 12.

Mr. Haines refused to talk about his resignation or the resolutions looking toward reorganization and investigation that had been adopted. "It was decided by the board that the only statement was to come from the Secretary," he said to the reporters.

It was announced that Frederic R. Coudert, who resigned as a member of the Board of Managers at the last meeting, had reconsidered his action and been restored to full membership. Announcement was also made that Frederic Gallatin and Benjamin D. Hicks, both of whom are Vice Presidents, had resigned as officers of the society and that their resignations had been accepted. Mr. Gallatin is abroad, and Mr. Hicks pleaded business pressure.

SAYS SHOES MUST GO UP.

Mr. Healey Blames Duty on Hides—His White House Visit.

The Hide and Leather Association of New York and vicinity held its third annual dinner at the Hotel Astor last night, the President of the association, William McCarroll, acting as toastmaster.

The chief speaker of the evening was A. Augustus Healy, First Vice President of the United States Leather Company. He said the tariff on hides would make the footwear of Americans increase in cost, while it hampered the exports of manufactured leather.

"Our expansion would be larger at home," he went on, "if we were not handicapped at home. The United States does not and cannot produce more than two-thirds of the hides needed by our manufacturers.

"We are handicapped in the markets of the world. South American hides are bought at the greatest disadvantage. Our neighbors in Canada prosper at our expense, and our shoe manufacturers are in an especially distressing condition.

"The shoe manufacturers have been greatly troubled of late. These duties have caused such an advance that they see nothing but loss unless they raise the price of shoes."

Other speakers were Gen. Stewart L. Woodford of Brooklyn, Judge Frederick E. Crane, the Rev. Madison C. Peters, and Prof. William Felter.

INQUIRY ON SUGAR REBATES.

Federal Grand Jury Takes Up Investigation Here.

Evidence has been presented to the Federal Grand Jury here concerning the payment of rebates to sugar refiners. The evidence considered yesterday, it is understood, was documentary for the most part, although one witness was examined.

It was said that other subpoenas are out. It is generally believed that ex-United States District Attorney Burnett, now a Special Assistant Attorney General, is to conduct the investigation.

AMMONIA THROWER NOW IN HOUSESMITHS' WAR

Post & McCord's Pay Clerk Attacked on His Way from Work.

POLICE LAY IT TO STRIKER

Man Caught in Chase Says He's a Laborer from 'Frisco—Dynamite Plot Trial Delay.

Following several dynamiting cases, ammonia was used last night as a weapon in the labor war between Post & McCord and the unions of iron workers in this city. Armed with a quart bottle of this stuff a man, who, the police believe, is one of the striking ironworkers, attacked William Malaney, assistant paymaster of Post & McCord, in Lexington Avenue early last evening, injuring him badly.

Malaney said at his home late last night that he recognized his assailant and a companion as members of the Housesmiths' Union.

Malaney had just left the new building of the Fiss, Doerr & Carroll Horse Company, which is being built in East Twenty-fourth Street by Post & McCord. It was just after 5 o'clock and he was going home to 169 East Thirty-fourth Street. While he was walking north on the east side of Lexington Avenue, near Thirty-fourth Street, a man suddenly grabbed him by the shoulder and emptied a bottle of ammonia in his face. Although momentarily blinded, Malaney pulled a revolver and fired at his fleeing assailant.

Policeman Charles McGowan of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station, who was near by, heard the shot, and, seeing Malaney groping about the sidewalk, thought he had been shot. His attention was attracted to a man running down Lexington Avenue, and he gave chase.

"Stop or I'll shoot!" yelled the policeman, but the man ran faster. He paid no attention to two shots, which the policeman fired in the air.

The chase continued east on Thirty-second Street and south on Third Avenue to Thirty-first Street, where the policeman, being the faster runner, seized the ammonia thrower. The man resisted arrest, and a crowd was treated to a fight in which the policeman and prisoner rolled about in the dust. It was only after a vigorous use of his club that McGowan was able to take his man to the station.

The prisoner said he was "John Doe," a laborer, living in San Francisco. He was held on the charge of felonious assault.

Malaney, who was painfully burned, was attended by Dr. Hunt of Bellevue, but refused to go to the hospital. Later at the police station he made a formal complaint against the John Doe.

"My life has been threatened several times by striking ironworkers," he told Sergt. Routh, "and I have a permit to carry the revolver which I fired."

According to the police rule, Capt. Corcoran preferred charges against Policeman McGowan for firing his revolver.

The trial of Charles Moran and Thomas Weir for attempt to blow up the building which Post & McCord are erecting at 304 East Twenty-third Street, was to have begun before Judge Foster, in General Sessions, to-day, but it will not get under way till March 21. An agreement was reached yesterday between Lawyer Cohalan for the defendants and Assistant District Attorney Train. It was also agreed, with the approval of Mr. Jerome, that no application for bail should be made in the meantime, but that $5,000 in each case should be acceptable.

The arrangement to postpone the trial followed a talk between Mr. Train and Patrick H. Farrell, Secretary of the Housesmiths' Union, to which organization the two prisoners, it is said, belong. Farrell denied this, and said that neither he nor Jersey Nolan, the business agent of Local No. 45, ever had seen the men.

"All right," remarked Mr. Train. "That will help clear up the matter considerably. The defendants will be in my office this afternoon. If you come around and have a look at them and don't recognize them, all you have to do is to give me a sworn statement to the effect that they are not members of your union."

Farrell assured Mr. Train that he would be on hand. The prisoners were taken from the Tombs at 3 o'clock, and remained with Mr. Train till nearly 5. But Farrell did not appear.

A third indictment in the case may be expected to-day or Monday. Mr. Train got much valuable information from Farrell, and still more from the two prisoners. Moran was convicted of grand larceny in 1896, and served a year in the Penitentiary. This makes him liable to indictment for a second offense, and imprisonment for as much as fourteen years.

John Guthrie, who joined the union to expose the plot against Post & McCord and who later divulged the steps taken by the conspirators to the police, was with Mr. Train several hours yesterday and embodied all his information in an affidavit.

Peter H. Conroy, said to be a fellow-worker of Moran and Weir, was indicted yesterday for assaulting William Kunzeman, a watchman employed by Post & McCord on the Bliss building, which Moran and Weir tried to blow up. Bail was fixed at $1,500, and he went to the Tombs. Kunzeman was shot on the night of Feb. 13.

Policemen Kealy and McGowan were up before First Deputy Commissioner Waldo yesterday charged with refusing to make arrests at the request of special watchmen employed by Post & McCord. The cases were dismissed.

In response to a request from the Central Federated Union some weeks ago, President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor held a conference yesterday at the Ashland House with representatives of local and National unions in the building trades over the local troubles. John Mitchell took part as Second Vice President of the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Gompers made this statement:

"Anything that can be done will be done to bring about peace. There will be another meeting, for which the date has not yet been fixed."

BERTHE CLAICHE'S RECORD.

It Does Not Agree with Her Testimony, Prosecutors Say.

Berthe Claiche, the Frenchwoman who killed Emile Gendron and was allowed last Tuesday to plead guilty to manslaughter in the first degree, was transferred from the prison hospital to a regular cell in the Tombs yesterday. Assistant District Attorneys Ely and Vandiver learned particulars of her history which may influence the court when sentence is pronounced.

In 1902 Berthe Claiche was arrested with another girl who was several years younger than she. They were tried before Justices Wyatt, Hinsdale, and Holbrook, in Special Sessions, under the names of Berthe and Carmen Gendron, the charge against them being that of maintaining a disorderly resort in West Sixty-fourth Street. Berthe Claiche then testified that she was 22 years old and had been in this country a year and a half. She gave other information concerning herself which contradicted her later statement that Gendron was the cause of her downfall six years ago.

From what she told the Justices then, it would seem that she had lived the same life since she was a young girl in Paris. The French Consul testified that her companion's real name was Helene Schott, and that she was only 14 years old. The Consul told the court that Berthe Claiche had lured young girls from Paris to this country. She was sent to the city prison for thirty days.

SUIT OVER BROKAW AUTO.

Buyer Says It Did Not Come Up to the Promises.

Irving Brokaw of 9 East Seventy-ninth Street was the defendant before Justice Giegerich in the Supreme Court yesterday in a suit brought by Edward W. Browning of 18 West Seventy-fifth Street to recover $3,200, the amount the plaintiff says a certain damaged automobile should have been worth had it been in the condition he supposed it was when he bought it.

Brokaw sold the machine to Browning for $2,100 in June, 1904. Browning says Brokaw warranted it to be sound and kind, and that the only reason Brokaw advanced for selling it at such a low figure was that he needed the money, because he had been a loser at the races. Brokaw said he paid $5,000 for the auto, the plaintiff asserts. He declared that Brokaw represented that the machine was of sixty horse power.

Browning, on the stand, declared that the machine was neither sound nor kind. It had a cracked water jacket, and sometimes he and his chauffeur had to sit up nights with it in remote places to humor it. He also declared that the machine never developed more than thirty horse power.

"I sold the machine to Mr. Browning after some dickering," said Mr. Brokaw. "He came to me and wanted to buy it. I told him distinctly that I would not warrant or guarantee it, and later told his father that I would not do so on account of the low price at which I was selling it. I paid $5,000 for it. I told Browning plainly that it was an experimental car. I never knew personally that there was a crack in it, but I thought it was slightly defective. I ran it ten or fifteen miles a day before I sold it. I never tested the machine for power, but was told that it was from forty to sixty horse power."

David F. Graham of Middletown, Conn., who designed the engine, described its construction.

The case was given to the jury last night, and a sealed verdict will be returned to-day.

SHOOTS SAILOR DEAD.

Hawaiian Line Officer Quells Mutiny at Brooklyn Pier.

There was a fight on board the American-Hawaiian liner Massachusetts yesterday morning, which did not end until one of the officers of the vessel shot dead James Slocum, one of the ship's firemen. Elmer H. Kerwin, fourth officer of the Massachusetts, did the shooting. According to his friends it was in self-defense. The police took him on a charge of homicide.

The Massachusetts, which plies between New York, San Francisco, and Honolulu, arrived several days ago, and went to the Bush Terminal Stores in Brooklyn to discharge cargo and to take on another for the Pacific. Trouble had been brewing on board the big freighter from the time she passed Cape Horn.

Policeman Schwartz of the Fourth Avenue Station, Brooklyn, was ordered to the dock, and was near when the fight occurred. He promptly notified his station and had the reserves sent. The police arrested six of the crew besides Kerwin.

The firemen's complaint that the food was bad, that the officers did not treat them with proper consideration, started the trouble, just around Cape Horn. Slocum, a powerful fellow six feet tall, was the leader. Most of the crew, except the firemen, sided with the officers, and the division among the men only tended to make matters worse, arguments being long, heated, and of great frequency. But there were no blows exchanged at sea.

As soon as the Massachusetts was docked the firemen and sailors were paid off, and went ashore to see how soon they could part with their money. Kerwin learned that Slocum was still holding his grudge. Early yesterday morning the men returned to the ship and to quarters. Several, including Slocum, were in bad humor, and decided to sit up and play cards. Slocum began to denounce the officers.

Kerwin, hearing the noise, went to the forecastle, ordered the men to stop talking and go to bed. The next moment he was sprawling on the floor from a blow Slocum landed on his face. Evans ran to help Kerwin, and six men jumped on him. The members of the crew friendly to the officers also stepped in.

A minute later a shot rang out and the big fireman fell to the floor with a bullet hole in his head. The shooting quieted the men, and when the reserves got to the ship most of them had gone to bed, others standing in groups and talking of the affair.

FIRE IN FRAUNCES'S TAVERN.

And George and Martha Washington, the Finest Kittens Ever Seen, Die.

Fraunces's Tavern, at Pearl and Broad Streets, was afire last night. At least, a part of it was.

George Washington Glutenkamp, son of the proprietor of the tavern, discovered flames in the cellar. He notified his father, and an alarm was quickly turned in. When the firemen arrived, smoke was rolling out of the place, and it looked like the end of the tavern where Washington said good-bye to his Generals. But what amazed the firemen—and gave some of them queer chills—was when the Glutenkamp boy rushed up to them and shouted:

"Oh, save George Washington! He's in the corner by the coalbin."

"And save Martha Washington, too!" wailed little Edith Glutenkamp. "She's with George. Save 'em both!"

In the hustle of getting the hose attached the firemen learned that Jennie was the pet cat of the Glutenkamp family. A few weeks ago she brought six kittens into the world. The finest two were named George and Martha Washington. The others were named after famous Revolutionary Generals. Only George and Martha had been kept, the others having been given away as valuable Revolutionary cats born in Fraunces's Tavern. The firemen decided to make an effort to save Jennie and her high-named kittens. The smoke, however, beat them back.

It was only when the flames were partly subdued that George Washington Glutenkamp discovered that the kittens had not yet been rescued. He was indignant. Where was the patriotism of the firemen—even if George and Martha Washington were just two little kittens?

"I'll get 'em myself!" he yelled, and dived into the smoky cellar.

In a minute he came out again with two little black objects in his hand. He laid them tenderly on the stoop and turned to his sister Edith. Laying a hand on her shoulder, he said quietly:

"Edith, Martha Washington's d-dead." Then, after a huge gulp, "So's G-George."

Jennie, the mother, escaped destruction. So did Fraunces's Tavern, which has now another story added to its history. The fire originated in the coalbin from some unknown cause, and didn't get much further.

NEW YORK 'FINANCIERS' ARRESTED IN LONDON

One of Them Is Everhart, Who Vanished from Here in 1904.

ACCUSED OF STOCK FORGERY

Fraudulent Certificates, Some of Them for $50,000, Seized—Everhart's Get-Rich-Quick Game in This City.

LONDON, March 8.—Harry Samuel Simons and Franklin Everhart, Americans, were arrested here to-day and were each remanded in $10,000 bail on charges of conspiracy and obtaining large sums of money by fraud.

The prisoners, who are described as stock and share brokers, are alleged to have issued forged shares and certificates in connection with Alaska, Oklahoma, Cripple Creek, and Manitoba mining companies.

According to the police evidence Everhart is Vice President and Simons a Director of the "Mining Securities and Investments Corporation," said to be registered at Oklahoma City. The couple have been in London a few months.

One of the specific charges against Simons and Everhart is forgery of share certificates of the La Chivia Mining Company. Two hundred and fifty of these certificates, forged in London, have been seized. They purport to represent shares varying from a few hundred dollars to $50,000 each.

The advertising matter of the "Mining Securities and Investments Corporation" gives the address of the head office as 220 Broadway, New York. Other documents seized bear Everhart's name as President of the "Index Mining Company, Incorporated, of South Dakota"; President of the "Sun Incandescent Light Company of New York City," and Treasurer of the "International Dash and Fender Machine Company of New Jersey."

Simons represents himself as from Illinois and Everhart as from Pennsylvania, but it is understood that both men have been in business in New York. They are believed to have been operating on the Continent and in the provinces as well as in London.

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 8.—"The Mining Securities and Investment Company" had an office here about a year ago for a short time, but little is known here of either Simons or Everhart.

They left Oklahoma City several months ago.

Franklin Everhart in the early part of 1904 conducted a mining stock and grain brokerage business at 18 Exchange Place. At the same time he promoted the United States Cereal Company, which had offices at 27 William Street. The literature of the two concerns was sent out together. It promised to pay 1 per cent. to 2 per cent. a week on investments in either concern.

So well was the literature received, particularly in towns in Ohio and Kansas, that Everhart and the United States Cereal Company gathered in during the course of a few months over $1,000,000. Much of this, apparently, was paid out in the form of weekly installments of interest. How much was left in the hands of the two get-rich-quick concerns when they closed up in June, 1904, was never made known.

Everhart himself disappeared from his office and from the Park Avenue Hotel, where he had been stopping. A clerk who was left behind in the Exchange Place office said the day after Everhart's disappearance that his employer had mailed a letter to the firm's customers announcing its suspension. This was apparently hastened by the activities of the United States Postal authorities, who were working up a case against Everhart when he disappeared.

The postal authorities were handicapped in their work on the case by the unwillingness of many of Everhart's customers to give any information against him. They were relying on the continuance of the 2 per cent. a week interest payments.

It was some days after Everhart ceased to visit his former haunts that the first formal complaints against him were lodged with the Federal authorities. Then two of the victims, brothers named L. E. Jay of Englewood, N. J., and John H. Jay of Colorado, made known to the Post Office Inspectors the extent of their investments with the Everhart concerns.

Towns scattered all the way between New Jersey and Colorado were losers by the Everhart "failure." Madison, Ohio, invested in the concerns $50,000, and one of the larger towns in the mining district of Pennsylvania contributed, it was said, $200,000.

Everhart in the letter announcing his failure offered to settle with his customers by giving them stock at par in the Index Mining Company. Among other things that Everhart said in his valedictory to his customers was that his heart was heavy in "this the hour of his need," and that he deemed it "wise for all concerned to quit for the present." This "present" has continued until the present time.

EXPLAINING A BOND DEAL.

Mayer Says State May Examine City Railway Company's Books.

ALBANY, March 8.—The power of the State Railroad Commissioners to examine the books and investigate the transactions of railroad companies is certified to in an opinion submitted by Attorney General Mayer to the commission, and made public this afternoon. The case arose in connection with the complaint of Judson G. Wall of the Prospect Heights Citizens' Association of Brooklyn relative to the affairs of the New York City Railway Company.

Mr. Wall complained to Gov Higgins of the alleged failure of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company to publish in its annual report to the State Board of Railroad Commissioners for 1903-4 statements of the disposition of the sum of $4,500,000 which was charged against the company for commissions and discounts on the sale of $15,000,000 of 3 per cent. debenture bonds.

In its reply the company stated that the bond issue was made by the New York City Railway Company. The bonds were subscribed for by the Metropolitan Securities Company, and the profit on this transaction did not appear, as it was a transaction between the two companies and was entered as a charge to the one and a profit to the other.

The Attorney General in his opinion says the commission has the authority under the railroad law to examine the books and affairs of the railroad corporations referred to, and that every assistance will be given by the Attorney General.

The Railroad Commissioners will consider the matter this week in Buffalo.

Pattison, President of the Young Men's Christian Association of Tarrytown and North Tarrytown, has just announced that the association has received a gift of $35,000 toward its new building from John D. GERMAN MOROCCO PLAN NOW MUCH MODIFIED Kaiser Willing to Let France and Spain Officer the Police.

ASKS A NEUTRAL INSPECTOR

Agreement at Algeciras Believed to be Near—French Policy Unchanged by Rouvier's Resignation.

ALGECIRAS, March 8.—The success of the Conference on Moroccan Reforms cannot be described as absolutely certain, since two of the main points in dispute, the allotment of the bank capital and the control of the police, are not yet settled. Hopes, however, run high that these outstanding difficulties will soon become subject to arrangement.

The French delegates show an inclination to regard the way as opened for an understanding, and the other delegates consider that a great forward step was made to-day, when a strong spirit of conciliation became evident. One of the most prominent delegates, moreover, expressed the view that "matters have proceeded so far that neither side will dare break up the conference."

The opinion gains ground that France will finally consent to a diminution of her financial influence in Morocco by accepting a reduction of the voting power allotted to French subscribers to former loans. In return for this concession, it is thought, the police will be placed under the direction of France and Spain, with a neutral inspecting officer who will report to the Powers, but not exercise command.

The news of the Ministerial crisis in Paris caused profound astonishment among the delegates of the powers, and at first the impression prevailed that the event might possibly prove disastrous to French diplomacy. Later in the day, M. Revoil, head of the French delegation, received a telegram from M. Rouvier, stating that the resignation of the Cabinet left the previous instructions to the delegates operative.

The conference this morning resumed the discussion of the police question. Three distinct propositions were presented—one, by the Austrian delegation, embodying the German ideas; another by the French, and the third by the Moroccan Mission.

The Austrian plan gives the Sultan supreme command of the police, and he is to select French officers for the police at four ports, namely, Tangier, Saffi, Rabat, and Tetuan, and Spanish officers for three ports, namely, Mogador, Larache, and Mazagan. The Sultan is to select an Inspector General of Police from Switzerland or Holland. The Inspector General is to have his headquarters at Casablanca, on the Atlantic coast, and is to command the Franco-Spanish police at the other ports.

The Moroccan plan makes the Sultan supreme, and provides that all the powers participate in the organization of the police.

The French plan, as heretofore outlined, establishes Franco-Spanish police at eight of the leading ports.

An official note issued at the close of the day's session was as follows:

"Herr von Radowitz (chief of the German Mission), referring to the statements made by the Russian, French, and Spanish delegates at the last session of the conference, said that the German Government did not object to the organization of the Moroccan police by France and Spain at the ports open to commerce, under proper guarantees assuring economic liberty."

The conference adjourned until Saturday night in order to permit the delegates to study the police projects.

PARIS, March 8.—The Government finds itself without a Ministry at the culminating stages of the conference at Algeciras. A semi-official statement on the subject says:

"The Ministerial crisis does not affect French policy at the conference."

This is designed chiefly to warn Germany not to take advantage of the situation.

A strong reaction has set in in favor of M. Rouvier. The newspapers to-day severely criticise the action of the Chamber of Deputies in defeating him when he was performing a patriotic duty, which promised to produce the most notable diplomatic success of recent years. It has now become quite evident that France will not waver in her policy in the conference at Algeciras.

M. Rouvier appears to think a Franco-German agreement is in sight. He said to-day to a friend:

"Like Jules Ferry, my success will be realized after I was defeated."

BERLIN, March 8.—The fall of the Rouvier Ministry is now regarded in Berlin as affecting only the internal politics of France and as not likely to render more difficult an agreement on the subject of Morocco.

M. Rouvier was liked by German public men, and his defeat in that sense is regretted.

ROME, March 8.—Parliament reassembled to-day. Premier Sonnino read the programme of the Cabinet.

Referring to the Government's international policy, the Premier said that Italy remained loyal to the Triple Alliance was the friend of France and Great Britain, and was exercising disinterested, peaceful action at Algeciras.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—State Department advices from Algeciras to-day are decidedly encouraging. They convey a strong impression that the delegates are approaching an agreement.

Details of the reports to the department are withheld.

TRAMPS TRY TO WRECK LACKAWANNA EXPRESS

Spike a Bar to Track Before Buffalo Flier.

WORKMEN JUST IN TIME

They Tear Away the Obstacle Just as No 8 Thunders By—Would-Be Wreckers Caught.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, March 8.—Half a dozen men who had been working all night in the Manhattan Rubber Works on the outskirts of Passaic started for the washroom of the factory about daybreak yesterday. One of them stopped and peered out of the window to see the state of the weather. He saw four men working with sledges and spikes on the tracks of the Lackawanna Railroad which run beside the works.

"Boys," he remarked, "the railroad men are out early this morning; must be something special doing."

All of them stopped and joined him in watching the quartet on the tracks. After noting their movements for five minutes the workman who had first spoken started for the front door with a yell:

"They ain't railroad hands, fellows; they're the thugs who've been tryin' to wreck the Buffalo Express. Let's get 'em!"

The other workmen jumped after him, ran out of the shop, and down to the tracks. When they got within fifty feet of the four men on the tracks the latter, dropping their tools, ran as fast as they could along the tracks toward Passaic. Some of the factory men followed them and the others stopped to see what they had been doing.

Examining the tracks, they found that the four men had spiked an eighty-pound iron bar to the rail of the east-bound track. Flanges or fishplates had been used to make the bar secure, and, as the work had been finished, a complete switch had been formed which would have derailed any train which struck it.

When the factory hands saw the danger they got to work in a hurry to break the switch.

"Quick, boys!" cried the leader; "No. 8'll be here in a bit. If she hits this she's gone, certain."

Wielding the sledges, they began to break the bar from its fastenings, and as the first blow of the hammer struck, the engineer of No. 8—the Buffalo express—blew his whistle two miles off to enter Passaic. Working quickly the men hammered at the flanges and the bar until they had them loose.

The express could be heard rumbling closer and closer as they toiled. Finally the train loomed up on the tracks 200 yards distant, sixty-five minutes late, and running at the rate of forty miles an hour. The engineer whistled and the train darted forward just as the men on the tracks hit the wrecking switch its final blow, lifted it from the tracks, and jumped to one side. As they did so the express, comprising three day coaches and three Pullmans, whizzed past and lost itself in the distance toward Hoboken.

A wreck had been averted by thirty seconds, and when the factory men realized what had been done and how narrow the escape had been, they sat down on the tracks looking at each other and trying to congratulate themselves.

In the meantime the men in pursuit of the would-be wreckers chased them toward town, and were only able to catch up with them when Passaic was reached. The police joined in the chase in time to participate in the capture.

The four men were taken to the Passaic Jail, where, upon cross-examination, it was found that they were Poles. They said they were John Bonk, his brother, Joseph Bonk; Thomas Gaula, and Frank Wilsenzak, and that they lived in Passaic. Each of them is about 19 years old.

At first they declined to talk, but at length confessed that they had intended to wreck the Buffalo express, and that they had made several efforts to do so before.

Justice Dalrymple gave them a hearing in the Police Court to-day and held them in default of $500 bail for the action of the Grand Jury.

"What did you try to wreck the express for?" they were asked.

"Oh," replied one of them, "we want to see fun. Great time, smash-up, and lots excitement."

The extreme penalty for their offense in New Jersey is twenty years in the penitentiary. None of the men arrested is known in Passaic, and they are believed to be tramps.

NO FRENCH MINISTRY YET.

M. Bourgeois and M. Sarrien Both Refuse to Form a Cabinet.

PARIS, March 8.—President Fallières's efforts to induce one or the other of the several statesmen with whom he conferred to-day to undertake the task of forming a Cabinet have not yet borne result.

M. Sarrien, who declined either the Premiership or a portfolio, suggested M. Bourgeois, whom M. Dubost, President of the Senate, and M. Doumer, President of the Chamber of Deputies, also put forward. M. Bourgeois, however, declared that he did not feel physically strong enough to undertake the Premiership, but he would consent to accept the foreign portfolio under M. Sarrien, whom he thought the best fitted to take the reins of power.

M. Rouvier wants to retire from the Premiership, but he may be induced to retain the portfolio of Foreign Affairs or that of Finance under another Premier.

The vote in the Chamber of Deputies last night, resulting in the resignation of the Cabinet, also requires that the Government temporize with the Church manifestants, who are becoming increasingly demonstrative, particularly the peasants.

THE TWO BURNHAMS AND ELDRIDGE INDICTED

Mutual Reserve Life Men Charged with Larceny and Forgery.

DECEPTIVE ENTRIES ALLEGED

Libel Suit Settlement Charged as "Legal Services"—Each Arrested and Held in $12,500 Bail.

President Frederick A. Burnham, Vice President George D. Eldridge, and Second Vice President George Burnham, Jr., of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company were indicted by the Grand Jury yesterday. Five indictments were returned against each defendant, two for grand larceny in the first degree and three for forgery in the third degree.

The three men were arrested at the office of the company by Detective Sergeant Farley and taken to General Sessions, where they were arraigned at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon before Judge O'Sullivan in Part I. William Rand, Jr., formerly Chief Assistant District Attorney, appeared as counsel for them. At his request the defendants were allowed until next Thursday to enter a plea. Meantime bail was fixed at $2,500 for each prisoner on each separate charge, making the total amount of bail for each man $12,500. It was furnished at once by Richard Deeves, a Director in the company.

The first indictment charges the defendants with embezzling $7,500 of the company's funds on Oct. 24, 1901. In the second they are charged with embezzling the sum of $1,500 on the same date. The third indictment, charging forgery, alleges that they caused the sum of $7,500 to be entered on the cash book of the company as paid to Nicholls & Bacon, lawyers, in settlement for a claim held by their client, F. B. Armstrong, against the company and arising out of a contract between him and the company, while, in fact, the money was paid to settle an action which J. Douglas Wells had brought against Frederick A. Burnham individually.

The fourth indictment, also for forgery, alleges that, in similar manner, the sum of $1,500 was entered on the books of the company as paid to the law firm of James, Schell & Elkus for legal services to the company, while the money instead was paid to that firm with instructions to use it to reimburse Wells for his expenses in defending an action for criminal libel brought against him by Frederick A. Burnham and George D. Eldridge as individuals.

According to the fifth indictment, which is the third for forgery, the three defendants are charged with having entered $5,000 on the books as paid on Sept. 24, 1901, to James, Schell & Elkus for legal services to the company. Instead, the indictment alleges, the sum in question was paid through the law firm to Baldwin & White, attorneys for J. Thomson Patterson, to settle a suit brought by Patterson against the company and two of the defendants, as well as to settle costs growing out of suits brought by Frederick A. Burnham and George D. Eldridge as individuals and by the company against Patterson.

The indictments refer to the company as the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association, which was its name in 1901. They allege finally that the cash book of the company is kept under the direction of the three defendants.

Patterson was Assistant Secretary of the company at one time, while Armstrong and Wells were connected with it as agents and policy holders. All three men severed their connections with the company about the same time in 1901. Shortly afterward an article appeared in a weekly publication in this city charging Frederick A. Burnham and Eldridge with misappropriating the funds of the company. Names and date and figures were given in proof of the charges. Burnham and Eldridge brought suit against Patterson, Wells & Armstrong on account of the article. Patterson was actually indicted and arrested. He brought countersuit at once for malicious prosecution, asking $50,000 damages. Before any one of the suits came to trial they were settled.

The two Burnhams and Eldridge were lined up at the bar in General Sessions yesterday like any other persons accused of crime. Three former Assistant District Attorneys, Rand, Lord, and Kernochan, appeared as their counsel. Mr. Jerome was on hand, accompanied by Acting District Attorney Nott and Assistant District Attorney Kresel, to whom the task of working up the cases against the Mutual Reserve officials has been intrusted.

When the question of bail was raised, Mr. Jerome suggested $3,000 for each prisoner on each charge, making the total for each man $15,000. Mr. Rand promptly called the sum excessive, and said that his clients were reputable financiers, who had remained in town for months while knowing that the District Attorney's office was busy preparing the cases against them.

"Do you remember, Mr. Rand," said Mr. Jerome, as he turned with a smile to his former right-hand helper, "how we asked $25,000 bail when Larry Summerfield, another financier, was arraigned, and how we got it?"

"I do," rejoined Mr. Rand. "But one of my clients is a lawyer. I remember another case—the last in which a lawyer figured as defendant in this court—and he was paroled on his own recognizance."

"The case mentioned by the District Attorney is not to be classed together with the one now before us," Judge O'Sullivan broke in. "I think $2,500 instead of $3,000 will be reasonable."

The indicted men declined to discuss their case in court. Mr. Rand said he had instructed them not to speak at all on the subject. Before they were arrested by Farley, however, George Burnham, Jr., was seen at the offices of the company. He said:

"We had been expecting this. I have been practicing law for the last twenty-five years, and this is the first time I have ever been accused of any wrong. I have never been in the criminal courts and know nothing of their procedure. I care not to discuss the case beside stating that if there has been any crime committed it is but a technical one."

INSURANCE MEN WILL FIGHT.

Rand Shows That They Will Meet Any Criminal Actions Jerome Brings.

The first sign that the men implicated by the revelations of the Armstrong Investigation Committee are preparing to fight the efforts of the District Attorney to proceed criminally against them was observed in Part I. of General Sessions yesterday. William Rand, Jr., the right-hand man of Mr. Jerome up to Jan. 1, made a request to the court which is said to be wholly without precedent in the legal annals of this country.

To the surprise of his former chief, as well as of the court, he proposed to turn the action of the court on the presentment made by the Grand Jury last Tuesday into an open hearing, in which he would appear in opposition to the District Attorney and for the contention that no crime had been committed by the executive officers of life insurance companies by contributing of their companies' money to political campaign funds.

The court was apparently unwilling to consider the matter even, but Mr. Jerome furnished another surprise by supporting the request of Mr. Rand. He expressed himself as happy even to have Mr. Rand's assistance in clearing up the problem. All he wanted was that Mr. Rand disclose the name of the clients he was to represent in the matter. This Mr. Rand positively refused to do; thus the proposal came to nothing.

MUTUAL REFORM COMMITTEE.

The Prominent Men Who Will Direct the Policy Holders' Work.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The Mutual Life Policy Holders' Association to-night gave out the names of the members of the Executive Committee, which is to consist of one member from each State, to bring about reformation in the management of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York. The committee is:

Maryland, B. N. Baker, Chairman, Baltimore, President Baltimore Trust and Guarantee Company; New York, Calvin Tompkins, New York City, President Newark Lime and Cement Manufacturing Company; Massachusetts, Albert A. Pope, Boston, President Pope Manufacturing Company; Connecticut, Albert E. Hammer, Branford, President Malleable Iron Fittings Company; Virginia, John Skelton Williams, Richmond, President Richmond Bank; Wisconsin, James G. Jenkins, Milwaukee, United States Circuit Judge; Mississippi, John Sharp Williams, Yazoo City, member of Congress; Georgia, Col. W. S. Thomson, Atlanta, President Atlanta Title Guaranty Company; Michigan, William Livingston, Detroit, President Lake Carriers' Association and Dime Savings Bank; District of Columbia, Dr. Maurice Francis Egan, Washington, professor, Catholic University; Florida, Cromwell Gibbons, Jacksonville, attorney; South Carolina, E. W. Robertson, Columbia, President National Loan and Exchange Bank.

The late John B. Stetson was an active supporter of this association, and it was expected that he would serve on the National Committee for Pennsylvania. The organization of the policy holders of that State is under way, and the National Committeeman will be announced very soon.

Committeemen from other States are being selected.

Judge D Cady Herrick of New York City has been retained to be associated with the present counsel, John De Witt Warner. The association has directed them to appear at Albany to-morrow before the Insurance Committee of the New York Legislature in the advocacy of such legislation as will bring relief to the policy holders. Judge Herrick has been engaged for the last six months as one of the counsel for the Truesdale committee, and resigned with Stuyvesant Fish.

GATHER FOR ALBANY HEARING.

Insurance Men Will Talk About the Bills To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 8.—Everything is in readiness for the big insurance hearing that is to be held before the Insurance Investigating Committee of the Legislature in the Assembly Chamber to-morrow. All the prominent men in the insurance world are here, including the Presidents and other officers of the leading companies, many agents, actuaries, and others interested. Not in years has Albany been so crowded as it is to-night. Cots in the corridors of the hotels are a premium.

Ex-Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff, President of the Provident Savings Life, will introduce the speakers representing the insurance interests. He said to-night that the arguments would be made by practical insurance men, and that it was improbable that any legal representative would be heard. The subject will be so sub-divided that the entire scope of the proposed legislation will be covered without reiterations and the consequent waste of time. The officers will speak from the practical business standpoint. The actuaries will set forth the objections which the companies have to many of the restrictions on insurance business proposed. The representatives of the agents will address themselves mainly to the sections of the general amendment bill which limits the expenses of agencies and sets a maximum amount of policy writing for any one year.

The home coming of Andrew Hamilton at this stage has given rumor mongers a chance to work overtime in propounding theories. First came the hint that he had been whipped into line to get certain adverse legislators to withdraw their objections by threats on his part and promised immunity to him. Then rumor switched around the other way, and it was said that the insurance companies had brought him on to line up the opposition to the bills. It is likely that neither of these is true, and that his return to Albany at this time is merely a coincidence. He certainly was not needed at the hearing, and if his influence was wanted with legislators in either direction he could have stayed away several weeks longer. Hamilton has not been near the Capitol, continues to keep his own counsel, and refuses to be interviewed at his home here.

FATHER TYRELL RESIGNS.

Declines to Recant His Writings and Leaves the Jesuits.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Catholic Church leaders in the Jesuit colleges and other institutions of the Church at Washington manifest no surprise at the news received to-day of the withdrawal of the Rev. George Tyrell, the English Jesuit writer, from the Society of Jesus. His recent publication in an English journal was at such variance with Catholic doctrines in its heterodoxy that there was nothing but withdrawal from the order left for him when he declined to recant those of his writings which were objectionable to the higher Jesuits of the English jurisdiction.

Father Tyrell was a convert to the Catholic Church from Protestantism. A native of Ireland, he studied at Trinity College, Dublin. He afterward became a Catholic and many years ago became a Jesuit. He has been looked upon during the past ten years as one of the most brilliant of the English Jesuit writers.

Recently he wrote for an English periodical an article in which he expressed opinions which were regarded by his superiors as heretical on the subject of hell and the methods of punishment there. In this article he showed a certain sympathy with very advanced scientific opinions as suggested in the case of St. George Mivart, a great authority on biology, who some years ago was excommunicated by Cardinal Vaughan. He is understood to be at Oxford, England.

OPEN BREAK POSSIBLE IN THE MUTUAL LIFE

Some Trustees Not Enthusiastic for a Perfunctory Inquiry.

REPORT SHOWS SOME LOSSES

Also Two Gains, Aggregating $76,000, from Some "Inadvertent Charges" and "Overpayments."

An interesting situation is understood to be developing again in the Board of the Mutual Life Insurance Company that may lead to further resignations, if not to a more open break, despite the appointment of Joseph H. Choate as counsel for the Truesdale Investigating Committee. It is learned that the attitude of some of the Trustees in standing resolutely in the way of anything but a perfunctory investigation is little appreciated by other Trustees who believe that they have nothing to fear from an investigation, but do not feel in a position to push for one and take the consequences that visited Stuyvesant Fish.

The appointment of Mr. Choate as counsel for the Truesdale Investigating Committee is being supplemented, it is learned, by efforts from some quarters to persuade him to enter the board itself.

The annual statement of the Mutual Life as of Dec. 31 last was given out yesterday, and showed some interesting changes as the result of the year's life insurance exposure. The Mutual in 1905 wrote $181,662,643 of new insurance, as against $229,532,430 in 1904, and its terminations from all causes were $141,327,354, as against $129,125,280 in 1904. The gain in insurance in force, therefore, was but $41,937,808; there was a gain of $102,619,766 in 1904.

Of the terminations, $82,116,481 were by lapses, this amount being practically four times the amount of terminations by death. The lapses the year before were $74,909,951; $23,759,386 of insurance went off the Mutual's books through the taking of surrender values last year, as against $16,896,941 similarly terminated the year before. In the company's income account for the year there are two interesting items. One is called "Cash inadventently charged to expense prior to 1905, $25,000," and the other, "Overpayments, ledger credits to individuals, $51,576.07." No explanation was forthcoming at the Mutual's offices of these two items, but it was gathered that they represented the adjustment of some personal accounts of officials who have left the service of the company.

The premium income of the company for the year was $62,978,215; this is within a few thousand dollars of the premium income for the year before. The gross admitted assets of the company increased from $440,978,371 at the end of 1904, to $471,809,901 at the end of 1905.

The Fowler Investigating Committee of New York Life Trustees will hold a meeting to-day at which it is likely that the return of Andrew Hamilton will be a topic of discussion. John G. Milburn, of counsel for the committee, said yesterday that the New York Life probers had rendered their report on the Hamilton payments, and had not heard from him in any way since his return to these shores.

SUICIDE IN SEWER SCANDAL.

Brooklyn Grocer Whose Lawyer Was Indicted Kills Himself.

Supposedly fearing that he would face charges in connection with a sewer damage case against the city, in which he was the plaintiff, Herman C. Heuer, a grocer of 75 Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn, committed suicide by inhaling gas yesterday. He was found dead in his shop.

Heuer's lawyer, William O. Miles, is now under indictment as a result of the sewer frauds investigation.

The Kings County Grand Jury, it is said, will hand down indictments to-day against several city officials, charging them with conspiracy in connection with the sewer suit frauds.

HEARST CAMPAIGN OPENS WITH APPEAL TO VOTERS

Independence League Says It Voices a Bitter Protest.

PEOPLE WEARY OF MISRULE

They Have Resolved to Overthrow Bosses and Government by Organized Monopoly.

The first gun in the State campaign of the Independence League was fired yesterday when W. R. Hearst, Judge Samuel Seabury, and ex-Judge John Palmieri, a sub-committee appointed at the Albany conference of the organization, issued an address to voters. This address embodies the sentiments which to a large extent are to serve as the platform on which the league will make its fight.

"It is clear that the Government of the Nation, and especially of our State, is no longer a Government of the people organized for their own benefit," reads the opening sentence of the address. "It has degenerated into a Government of organized monopoly, operating through corrupt political bosses, for the enrichment of a small predatory class. The voice of the corporation speaks with the authority that should belong to the people's voice."

Any railroad corporation, it is asserted, has far more influence in any department of Government than all the people who live in the territory it traverses, while the management of any monopoly dealing in the necessaries of life is a far greater power in Nation and State than all the citizens whom the monopoly affects.

"Public officials," it is charged, "in both of the great parties are chosen not by the citizenship, but by organized monopoly. They serve the power that nominates them and not the people, whose voting has become a mere travesty on popular government."

The people are wearied of these conditions, the sub-committee asserts. They find the voice of the corporation manager in every official utterance. Citizens throughout the entire State realize that their interests are identical and are determined to restore self-government.

"The Independence League seeks to give expression to the feeling of bitter protest which is in the hearts of the citizens," says the sub-committee. Thus the aim of the organization is summarized:

"It seeks to formulate policies and to establish a unity of action throughout the State that shall restore the Government to the people. The machines of both the old parties have become, to an alarming extent, the property and representatives of organized monopoly and its special interests. The voters demand an opportunity to register effectively their protest against the degradation of democracy as Jefferson enunciated it and of Republicanism as it was represented in Abraham Lincoln.

"The shameful revelations that have startled the country and crystallized public indignation during the past year have indicted the hired corporation-owned bosses of both parties. Insurance funds, the reliance of widows and children, were stolen by Democrats and Republicans alike. Bosses on both sides shared the plunder as a reward for servility. The people of the State are determined that these bosses shall be deprived of their power. The Independence League is organized to give effect to this determination."

Taxation, it is recited, puts the burden of the State upon the business man and worker, both of whom are at the mercy of the corporations, which refuse to share the burden of taxation with the citizenship they exploit. The direct charge is made that the people are "outraged by their representation in the United States Senate, where men elected to represent the people sit as spokesman for the corporations."

There is reminiscence in the statement that "the people resent the criminal contempt of their rights which openly nullifies the ballots of the electors when the results do not suit the corporations' plans." In conclusion this plea is made:

"The Independence League invites the co-operation of all citizens, irrespective of party. It invites the advice and support of all those who feel that the time has come to make the Government of the State represent the will of the voters and not the interests of organized money and tyrannical monopoly."

The Executive Committee of the league met at the Gilsey House headquarters, Mr. Hearst presiding, to consider the Brooklyn situation. It was decided to invite citizens of each Assembly district in the borough to perfect permanent organization under the name of the league in each Assembly district.

These organizations are to be formed without regard to any organization at present in existence, and the management of Brooklyn affairs will be left entirely to the Assembly district organizations or such representatives as they see fit to elect.

SO THEY'RE FOR HEARST.

Traveling Salesmen Said Other Parties Wouldn't Promise Anything.

What began last night at 8 o'clock in the Gilsey House as a meeting of traveling salesmen, apparently, gathered together to register kicks against the railroads and other oppressors of commercial travelers, ended just before midnight as an out-and-out organization for Hearst.

Three weeks ago, as one member informed the reporters, the National Commercial Travelers' Independence League organized for the purpose of getting a drummer in Congress to demand that 250 pounds of baggage be carried free, to urge a difference in rate between upper and lower berths, and to eliminate the payment of $10 additional on mileage books. He said that the organization already had 500 members, and that 100 more applications were in.

Two members arose about 10 o'clock and asked if there wasn't some other purpose behind the organization. After a deal of hammering it finally came out that the league had decided to support Hearst and the Independence League, as the two old political parties wouldn't promise it anything. The Chairman of the Executive Committee said he would withdraw from the meeting, as he had been under a misapprehension as to the purposes of the organization.

MAGISTRATES SEE BINGHAM.

Appeal for Court Squads Seems Not to Move Him.

The committee appointed at the last meeting of the Board of City Magistrates to call on Police Commissioner Bingham and "give him a piece of their mind" for declaring that he intended to take away their court officers, met the Commissioner at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and talked over things for an hour. After the conference neither the Commissioner nor the committee would discuss the subject. Gen. Bingham simply said he had had a pleasant talk with the committee and that no conclusion had been reached as to reorganizing the court squad.

The committee consisted of Magistrate Wahle, President of the Board of City Magistrates, and Magistrates Barlow, Walsh, Moss, and Whitman. They told the Commissioner that it would throw things into chaos if the policemen detailed at the courts were taken away. Commissioner Bingham suggested that others might be sent in the places of the men whom he intended to transfer. One-third the number in the police courts would be enough to look after things, he said.

When a policeman became a wart on a court, he declared, it was time the surgeon's knife was applied. This would shut off all possible chances of graft. There were 112 patrolmen, eight Sergeants and eight roundsmen, he declared, who could be spared from the courts.

The Magistrates then pleaded for bridge men. These are the policemen who stand on the bridge beside the prisoners arraigned and question them. The Magistrates said the men who had been doing bridge duty for many years could recognize old offenders. They also, in many cases, acted as interpreters, especially in Essex Market Court.

Commissioner Bingham declared that he could find men who would learn the ropes soon, just as the old bridge men had learned them.

The Magistrates then explained that they had not called for any particular purpose outside of letting Commissioner Bingham know that the present men detailed to bridge duty in the courts were of much assistance to the Magistrates in disposing of the court's business. They did not expect to tell the Commissioner his duty, they said.

Gen. Bingham said he was much pleased at receiving the information, and that it was pleasant to know that harmony existed between himself and the Magistrates. The Magistrates said they were pleased with the kindly reception accorded them, and there the interview ended.

BINGHAM VERSUS MACK.

Commissioner Shows Letter Asking Resignation—Bogus, Says ex-Deputy.

In substantiation of his statement that the resignation of James F. Mack as Third Deputy Police Commissioner had been demanded, Commissioner Bingham yesterday posted in the official minutes three letters, under date of March 5. The first, delivered, according to a notation on its margin, at 9:55 o'clock in the morning, reads:

> Hon. James F. Mack, Third Deputy Police Commissioner:
>
> Dear Sir: I have the honor of requesting your resignation as Third Deputy Police Commissioner, to take effect at the close of office hours Saturday, March 10, 1906. Regretting the necessity for this action on my part and with friendliest regards for you personally, I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant.
>
> THEODORE A. BINGHAM.

Underneath this communication was posted the resignation of Mr. Mack, which is marked: "Received between 12 and 1 P. M." The third letter, accepting the resignation, was dated the same day and delivered without delay.

When Mr. Mack was told of Gen. Bingham's action in making public the correspondence, he declared that the Police Commissioner had trumped up the letter asking for his resignation.

"I never received such a letter," he declared. "It would be easy for the Commissioner to put such a communication in his minutes, because he has absolute contral of them. When I reached Headquarters Monday morning I had no intention of resigning until I found the communication from Bingham fixing an arbitrary scale of fines. I expostulated with him to no avail, and returned to my office and wrote out my resignation voluntarily."

"BIS AUF" IS "EXCEPT."

The Court Decides That in a Suit Over a Prussian Palace.

The two German words "bis auf" formed the crux of a case begun before Supreme Court Justice McCall in 1904, and finished yesterday. Mrs. Teresa Reinach, the widow of Max Reinach, a New York lawyer, was the defendant. Hans K. Frost sued her to recover $10,500 alleged to be due on a contract for the purchase of the Prinzen Palace in the Province of Schleswig-Holstein, Prussia, for $10,656.

The contract set forth that the grantee agreed to convey the property to Reinach for 85,000 marks, and acknowledged the receipt of the purchase price "bis auf" the amount of $4,000 in American currency. The contract went on to say that Reinach was to finish paying as soon as the formalities attending the sale had been completed.

The defendant maintained that "bis auf" meant "all but" or "except" $4,000, which was subsequently paid. The plaintiff declared that the proper translation of "bis auf" is "up to." Justice McCall ruled that the defendant's translation was the correct one, and gave judgment in favor of Mrs. Reinach.

WRECK DUE TO WET RAILS.

Rain Made Them Slippery and Engineer Couldn't Stop—Three Deaths.

SARATOGA, March 8.—Two more of the passengers who were injured in the wreck of the local passenger train on the Delaware and Hudson Railroad last night by the Montreal express have died in the Saratoga Hospital, to which the more seriously injured were removed.

Frank Sindecuse, a traveling salesman of Buffalo, died last night. The others who have since died are: Mrs. Charles Esmond, 40 years old, of Gansevoort, N. Y., and Gertrude Esmond, her daughter, 10 years old. Of the others injured, all will probably recover.

It was said to-day that the engineer of the Montreal express, who had been warned by a brakeman from the local train, was, because of slippery rails due to the rain, unable to greatly slacken the speed of his locomotive before it crashed into the stalled train. Coroner George H. Fish is making an investigation.

Schwab in Fine Spirits.

KANSAS CITY, March 8.—Charles M. Schwab arrived in Kansas City from the West in his special car over the Rock Island Railroad at 3:38 this afternoon. In answer to a question he said he was only slightly indisposed, the result of three weeks of almost constant railway traveling. He was in fine spirits. The trip will be continued east to-night.

New Post for Prof. Robert F. Harper.

CHICAGO, March 8.—Robert Francis Harper, brother of the late President William R. Harper of the University of Chicago, has been appointed by the Trustees of the university as acting head of the department of Semitic languages and literature, left vacant by the death of President Harper.

NEW SPRING MODELS READY-FOR-SERVICE
At $15 to $40

You go ahead or slide backward. You must find a higher level or join the "ninety-and-nine." His method leaves the to-order tailor to slide. Ours takes us beyond him. Why? His is a one-man product. Ours has the benefit of an organization of tailormen each a specialist—each contributing to the garment the one phase which he has mastered beyond the rest.

Can you understand why this inter-dependent system insures a uniformly perfect series of garments, especially since their production is guided by an absolutely perfect model?

The style of the garments depends upon one man—the designer. Cannot we, who are big in scope, better afford to associate with us the cleverest master-designers than the to-order tailor who serves but a few?

Yet our prices are at least a third more modest than his.

PENNSYLVANIA STATION POST OFFICE OPPOSED

Plan Held Up by Cortelyou for Concessions from the Road.

CONGRESSMEN NICKNAME IT

Call It a "Building on Stilts," and the Government's Purchase a "Chunk of Air."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The Post Office Department is still considering the plan to purchase a site for a new Post Office for New York City above the Pennsylvania terminal at Eighth Avenue and Thirty-first Street. Under the law making appropriation for the purchase of the site the plans for the building must have the approval of the Postmaster General. So far that has been withheld pending the completion of certain negotiations with the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The deed was prepared and submitted to Postmaster General Cortelyou about a year ago. Since that time he has been trying to get certain modifications which have not yet been agreed to by the railroad. Mr. Cortelyou declined to-night to discuss the matter, but it was learned that some progress had been made in the negotiations.

The plan as it stands is to build the Post Office on pillars above the tracks of the terminal. It also contemplates a building with a large inner court. The law requires it to be bound by four streets. It is understood that the railroad desires to reserve certain space around the exterior of the building for light and air. Neither this plan nor the proposed reservation by the railroad company, it is understood, is acceptable to the Postmaster General. One would prevent the unimpeded floor space believed to be essential to a satisfactory building, and the other would deprive it of a proper frontage.

The Post Office Department wants to give New York adequate facilities at each of the two great terminals, and it is held to be better to submit to some delay now, if necessary, to have the plans right, rather than accept plans which might be found inadequate when put to the test of actual experience.

The whole proposal to erect the new Post Office above the tracks of the Pennsylvania terminal will meet vigorous opposition when it comes to Congress for the appropriation for the bill. A prominent member of the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, which will have charge of the bill making the appropriation, said to-day that he will not consent to the erection of "a building on stilts" for the New York City Post Office. He is utterly opposed to the erection of a building which would have no other entrances than a set of bridges across the streets bounding it, as would be the case if the proposed plan were adopted. There is a good deal of discussion among the New York Congressmen about the title, in case the building should be put up above the Pennsylvania terminal. The railroad company would certainly own the ground under the building, it is contended, and all the Government would own would be "a chunk of space in the air." Members of the Appropriations Committee said that this would be a ridiculous situation, and that they would oppose it.

The report of Postmaster Willcox as to the practicability of the proposed site had not reached the Post Office Department to-night.

Those who favored the site argued yesterday that it is much superior to any other which might be secured. It has a frontage on Eighth Avenue of 400 feet, and runs back on Thirty-first and Thirty-third Streets, Thirty-second Street being closed for a distance of 425 feet. It is proposed that the building be put directly over the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad, making it possible to transfer mail directly to and from the cars by means of elevators. Advocates of the site say that there is no real necessity for the Post Office to be over one of the subways, but that if that will be an advantage, as has been argued, the Post Office will have communication with the Seventh Avenue subway.

The Pennsylvania Road contracts to turn the site over to the Government with all the excavations made and with the retaining walls completed, so that all the Government will have to do will be to erect the columns to carry the building. The road's officers hope that the Government will build a low building, not more than two or three stories high, which will correspond with the handsome station of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company on the opposite side of Eighth Avenue.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company carries about one-half of the Western mails and practically all the Southern mails. It is also proposed that passenger and mail trains of the New Haven Railroad shall be run into this station so that all of New England would have direct connection with the Post Office on this site.

More Cars for Long Island Roads.

The Inter-State Telephone Company of New Jersey, a subsidiary company of the Great Eastern Telephone Company, has gone into the hands of a receiver. Oscar Keen of Newark was appointed receiver yesterday. The appointment was on the application of J. Thomas Reinhardt of 15 Wall Street. Joseph D. Baucus of 40 Wall Street acted as his attorney.

ELEVATED SPITTERS FINED.

Three Pay $1 Fines—Theatre Lobby Victims Go Free.

Three of the thirteen men arrested last Wednesday night by Health Commissioner Darlington's orders for spitting in public places were fined $1 each in the West Side Court yesterday. The others were released. Those who had expectorated on the platforms of elevated stations had to pay up, on the ground that the company had provided spittoons for their benefit, but those arrested in theatre lobbies were allowed to go because the management had not placed cuspidores where they would be useful.

Those who were fined were Willis Clark of the Butterick Publishing Company, De Witt Young of 151 West Thirty-eighth Street, and John Connor of 31 Amsterdam Avenue. The theatre patrons were Louis Cox of the Saranac Hotel, William Herrick of 486 Hudson Street, Frank Allen of 40 West Sixty-fourth Street, Joseph Stein of 304 East Houston Street, Sol Reinheimer of 216 West 166th Street, John Brady of 227 East Forty-first Street, Charles A. Moore of Louisville, and Otto Stemple of 1,815 First Avenue.

To-day, however, John Coney, for many years a resident of Fayetteville, recalled Ethel as one of his childhood playmates.

COCKRAN IN CONGRESS ATTACKS TOWN TOPICS

Wants to Know Whether It Is Barred from the Mails.

MENTIONS DEUEL REPEATEDLY

Col. Mann Says He Proposes to Keep on Attacking Cockran Politically—"Part of Collier's Bureau?"

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Representative Cockran to-day introduced a resolution calling on Postmaster General Cortelyou to state whether or not Town Topics is permitted to circulate through the mails, and whether the Post Office Department is facilitating its business of blackmail.

The resolution was quite obviously drawn so as to turn the knife over and over again in the wounds of Justice Deuel. There is no mention in it of Col. Mann or any one else connected with the Town Topics business, but Deuel's name is repeated at every opportunity, and over and over again Mr. Cockran repeats Collier's Weekly's phrase, "A paper of which the occupation is printing scandal about people who are not cowardly enough to pay for silence." He connects this phrase with Deuel's name wherever possible, and drags in Deuel at points where the Judge's relation to the resolution is of the slightest.

It is common knowledge that Town Topics does circulate through the mails. Mr. Cockran's resolution virtually amounts to an accusation that the Government is, to quote the language of his resolution, "facilitating, permitting, and assisting" Justice Deuel's paper in what Mr. Cockran calls "its occupation of extorting money by blackmail." The resolution reads:

"Whereas, at a Court of General Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of New York, the same being a court of record of the State of New York, one Norman Hapgood was on the 31st day of October, 1905, indicted by a Grand Jury on a charge of libel, for that he had written and published of and concerning one Joseph M. Deuel, then and now a Judge on the Court of Special Sessions in the State, City and County of New York, the following words, to wit: 'He is part owner and one of the editors of a paper of which the occupation is printing scandal about people who are not cowardly enough to pay for silence,' and

"Whereas, The said Norman Hapgood, on the 31st day of October, was arraigned upon the said indictment before the said court, and entered a plea of not guilty, and

"Whereas, The said indictment having been transferred from the said Court of General Session of the Peace, in and for the City, County of New York, to the Supreme Court of the State of New York, came on for trial on the 15th day of January, 1906, in said court before the Hon. James Fitzgerald, a Justice thereof, and a jury, and the said Hapgood having admitted that he had written and published the matter charged in said indictment to be libelous, justified it on the ground that the same was true, and the jury, after hearing evidence, rendered its verdict that he was not guilty of libel, and

"Whereas, It appears from the uncontradicted evidence given on said trial that the paper of which the said Joseph M. Deuel was part owner and one of the editors, the characterization of which as 'A paper of which the occupation is printing scandal about people who are not cowardly enough to pay for silence,' by the said Hapgood, was charged in said indictment to be a libeel, is a weekly publication entitled, called and known as Town Topics; and

"Whereas the said verdict of not guilty and the judgment of acquittal entered thereon in favor of said Hapgood is a judicial declaration by a court of competent jurisdiction that the description of Town Topics charged in said indictment to be libelous is in fact true;

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that the Postmaster General be and is hereby required to inform the House of Representatives whether said paper, periodical, or publication entitled, called and known as Town Topics, so adjudged by a competent court to be 'a paper of which the occupation is printing scandal about people who are not cowardly enough to pay for silence,' is admitted now to the use of the mails, and whether its said occupation of extorting money by blackmail is in any way facilitated, permitted or assisted by this Government through the operation of its Post Office Department."

Justice Deuel could not be seen last night with reference to the above dispatch, but Col. William D. Mann discussed it in this fashion:

"It seems that while I am not mentioned, and that Mr. Cockran had to have some basis for the reslution, he hinges his resolution on the Hapgood case, although the court found that Town Topics was an honest paper, and not, as stated, devoted to libel and scandal. I presume that Bourke Cockran selects Justice Deuel for his mark because Justice Deuel is now under criticism from Mr. Jerome and others, although the Justice, honest man that he is, continues his duties upon the bench with credit and honor.

"As a matter of fact the Hapgood case, without indulging in a criticism of how it was tried, was decided upon excuse and not upon justification. In other words the jury excused the libel, although it didn't justify it. There was no need to justify the libel, because it developed that Mr. Hapgood had consulted the District Attorney. The law requires that an editor before publishing libelous matter shall be certain of its truth, and that he has taken due precaution to find that it is true. I don't know of any better protection that any editor could get than to go to the District Attorney and consult him. I think you can imagine no jury would find an editor guilty of libel under those circumstances.

"I have been 'roasting' Mr. Cockran politically for many years. I have never said anything about him socially. I regard him as a turncoat, ready to support any theory or any party policy at any moment. He has been a Democrat, a Republican, a reformer, and a member of this, that, and the other political organization, until now he has been made a Grand Sachem of Tammany Hall. Other than that I am not aware that he should have any other grievance against Town Topics. I have 'roasted' him in the past and will certainly continue to do so in time to come. He is the most unreliable and inconsistent political factor this country has ever produced, brilliant and able man though he is.

"Town Topics has been circulating through the mails for fifteen years, or since I have been with it, and I have never heard anybody complain that it contained anything to justify its exclusion. If it is true, as Cockran says, that it is libelous, and this, and that, it might be very proper to bar it from the mails, but the courts have not found anything of the sort.

"Bob Collier said on the stand in the recent trial that he had organized a bureau to suppress Town Topics, and had a corps of stenographers, detectives, and what not, and that he would spend a great amount of money to accomplish his end. Is Bourke Cockran's resolution a part of this scheme? Well, why not?"

ANTI-MERGER BILL CHECKED.

Flood of Objections Against It Forces It to Go Over.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 8.—Objections to the Shanahan Anti-Merger bill poured in from every side to-day when it came up on the Assembly calendar. Its introducer at once moved that it be laid over for a week, which was unanimously agreed to.

This bill is aimed to prevent future mergers similar to the Ryan-Belmont traction combine, and it is also declared that it will, if enacted, strike at that merger also.

PROF. BURR'S CANAL ADVICE.

Tells Senate Committee Contractors Should Do the Work.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The examination of Prof. William H. Burr of New York, formerly a member of the Isthmian Canal Commission, and a member of the Board of Consulting Engineers appointed by President Roosevelt to report upon the most feasible type for a canal across the Isthmus of Panama, occupied all of to-day before the Senate committee, and will be resumed to-morrow.

It was suggested by Senator Morgan that Congress doubtless would have to pass upon the question of having the canal built by contractors, and he asked the witness to give his views on that subject.

"I think it will be best for the Government as a whole if contractors do the work," said Prof. Burr. He added that he would be of this opinion whether the waterway were constructed on the sea level or with locks. He expressed the opinion, however, that the Government should proceed with the work far enough to determine fairly what would be a reasonable price to pay.

"If you should let the contract on the basis of the unit fixed by the consulting board for either type of canal," said Prof. Burr, "you would get many bidders. In fact, I think I should like to get a piece of it myself." He took the view that the unit fixed by the consulting board was too high and the canal would not cost as much as estimated for either type.

STATEHOOD BILL VOTE TO-DAY

McCumber Says East Will One Day Find Protection in the West.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—To-day afforded the last opportunity for general debate in the Senate on the Statehood bill, and the entire time of the session was devoted to that order of business.

Starting with a speech by Mr. McCumber, which began a few minutes after 11 o'clock, there was no cessation in the speaking until the adjournment late in the evening. Mr. McCumber declared that the time would come when the East would find its protection in the West. He referred to the influence of the foreign immigration in Eastern communities and in this connection said that at its last election Chicago had elected a Socialist as Mayor. He added that there was serious doubt as to whether New York at the election last Fall had not elected a Socialist for Mayor. The whole time was occupied by three Senators, Mr. Beveridge supporting the bill, and Messrs. McCumber and Patterson opposing it.

COL. BUBB TO BE GENERAL.

Began His Career as a Private and Served in the Civil War.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The President has decided to promote Col. John W. Bubb, now in command of the Twelfth Infantry, with headquarters at Fort Jossman, Island of Guamarras, just across the roadstead from Iloilo, to the Brigadier Generalcy made vacant by the retirement of Gen. Camillo C. C. Carr.

This settles what has been the hardest and most interesting fight for promotion since Leonard Wood got his Major General's commission. Secretary Taft announced the selection of Col. Bubb at the War Department late this afternoon. For several days it had been persistently rumored that Capt. John J. Pershing, who performed good service in the Philippines, was to receive the promotion. The promotion of Col. Bubb is especially interesting to the army and to some of the veteran societies because it selects for a permanent appointment a man with civil war service to his credit, who began his military career as a private.

HEARING ON LOCAL OPTION.

Anti-Saloon Leaguers Cheer Supporters of Wainwright-Tully Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 8.—After a long hearing to-day by the Assembly Excise Committee and the Senate Taxation Committee on the Wainwright-Tully bill for local option in residential districts by petition of the electors it was announced that there would be another session two weeks from to-day.

The bill is the pet measure of the Anti-Saloon League, which sent a large delegation of men and women to champion the measure, and this they did at every opportunity, clapping their hands, cheering, and waving handkerchiefs in the galleries and on the floor. The liquor interests were also largely represented.

The main objection to the bill among legislators is to the provision for wiping out saloons from residential districts by petition of the electors, and it was stated to-night that the bill would be amended by Senator Tully to meet the objections along this line.

The first address was made by William Forster, representing the New York brewers.

J. P. Smith, editor of The Wine and Spirits Gazette, said the bill was useless in that local option was already fully provided for under the existing laws.

Miss Phoebe Cousins of Missouri was brought into the room in a wheel chair and made a long address, during which she said that it was impossible to make men sober by legislative enactment.

The principal speaker in favor of the bill was T. H. Reed, Legislative Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League.

Congressman Bennet of New York and others spoke in favor of the bill.

Cox of Erie said the machines had performed good service in Buffalo.

ORDER TO THE DEPARTMENTS

Suspected Cases to be Examined at Government Expense—Thorough Sanitary Inspection Required.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—A crusade against the spread of tuberculosis among the employes of the Government service in Washington was to-day directed by President Roosevelt, who issued an order to the heads of all departments, giving them explicit instructions as to their duties in combatting the disease. The following is the text of the order:

"In accordance with the report and recommendations of the committee appointed by Executive order of December, 1905, to prepare a plan for the prevention of tuberculosis in the Government offices and workshops, I hereby promulgate the following order with the object of eliminating and preventing tuberculosis among the employes of the public service:

"It shall be the duty of the head of each of the executive departments in Washington to cause to be printed and transmitted to all of the Federal buildings under his control the rules prepared by said committee to prevent the spread of tuberculosis in the buildings and to require their display by the custodian in such manner and in such number as is necessary to carry out the intent of the rules.

"It is hereby required of each department to ascertain the names of any persons in the service in said department afflicted with tuberculosis, and to present to them the printed rules prescribed by said committee for their observance.

"The non-observance of said rules shall, in the discretion of the head of the department, be considered a just cause for separation from the service.

"Whenever there is a doubt with regard to any person in the Government service as to whether said person is afflicted with pulmonary tuberculosis, an order shall be issued for said person to present himself (or herself) at one of the Government laboratories for examination, and to present the department, from the director or other authorized officer of the said laboratory, a certificate showing the result of said examination. If a Government laboratory is not accessible the laboratory investigation shall be made at Government expense.

"The Surgeon General of the army, the Surgeon General of the navy, and the Surgeon General of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, are hereby directed to cause a thorough sanitary inspection of the public buildings and workshops under their respective departments, and they are authorized to detail from their respective medical services a sanitary board, or boards, for this purpose. The inspection of the public buildings and workshops other than those under the War and Navy Departments shall be conducted under the Surgeon General of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service. The sanitary board, or boards, thus appointed shall report upon:

"First, insanitary conditions immediately remediable; second, insanitary conditions requiring structural changes.

"The said board, when entering upon its duties in any department, shall report to the executive head of said building or workshop, who shall, on the request of the board, give such assistance as may be required.

"The sanitary board, or boards, will make reports to the Surgeon General of their respective services, who shall bring these reports before the committee appointed by Executive order of Dec. 7, 1905, and said committee shall transmit a full report with recommendations to the President.

"These duties, to be additional to, and not take precedence of, the regular duties of the members of the committee.

RATE FIGHT BEGINS IN SENATE MONDAY

Bailey's Proposed Amendment Not Viewed with General Favor.

DEMOCRATS ARE CAUTIOUS

Reluctant to Take Any Chances of Violating the Constitution—A Revelation by Foraker.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The Rate bill on Monday will be made the special order of business in the Senate until finally disposed of. Monday morning the majority report will be brought in, and from that time forward, without any intermission, the rate debate will occupy the attention of the whole Senate.

The drift of discussion in private conferences and cloakroom arguments today around the Senate disclosed the fact that Senator Bailey has no considerable following in his doctrine that there should be written into the Hepburn bill a prohibition on the suspension of newly made rates pending judicial review.

Senator Bailey said yesterday that he believed it was possible to draft such an amendment, and that if it were adopted the Supreme Court might pass on its constitutionality without endangering the whole act. The amendment, if declared unconstitutional, could be cut out of the act, leaving the rest of it operative, so far as it might be held to be constitutional.

Democratic Senators express the desire to grant to the country the best attainable legislation on the subject of rate control, but they are reluctant to take any chances of violating the Constitution. The friends of the Hepburn bill on the Republican side of the chamber are stronger than ever in the declaration of their belief that there should be no court review tinkering with the bill, and that if it is attempted it will lead to difficulties and disappointments.

Perhaps the most important revelation of to-day came from Senator Foraker, who said that years ago he had taken the ground that legally Congress had the power to restrict and define the jurisdiction of the Federal courts in the manner now proposed by Senator Bailey. In this connection he also said that the late Senator Hoar held the same view, and that the greatest difficulty that stands in the way of a practical trial is to frame the amendment so that it will not open the door to a decision by the Supreme Court declaring it unconstitutional.

By this it is meant that the underlying principle is not unconstitutional, but Congress may bungle in the form of applying or describing the method of procedure so that the Constitutional rights of litigants may be trenched upon.

NO RECOUNT LIKELY.

Hearst Representative Says Assembly's Action Is Insincere.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 8.—The Hooker resolution asking the Attorney General whether the ballot boxes used in the last election in New York City may be opened and the ballots counted was adopted to-day in the Assembly by a vote of 86 to 29.

Campbell and Oliver of New York took the lead in representing the Hearst and Tammany interests respectively. The former declared:

"The real purpose of this resolution is to cause delay. Mr. Hearst was counted out by fraud and deceit. If all the boxes were opened and a fair count had Mr. Hearst would be the Mayor of New York."

Oliver jumped to his feet and shouted: "The gentleman from New York had better go slow and not make wild statements."

Campbell continued, however, claiming everything for Hearst.

The adoption of the resolution is generally regarded as indicating that none of the so-called Hearst investigation propositions as affecting the New York election will be passed.

BOWERY TRACK REMOVAL.

Oliver Bill Against Unused Line Favorably Reported.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 8.—Assemblyman Oliver to-day induced the Assembly Railroads Committee to report out his bill to compel the New York City Railway Company to remove form the Bowery two tracks that are seldom used. The company has fought this bill for a long time.

It is understood the franchise for these tracks would be seriously endangered if they were removed. It is claimed that to give up so great a portion of the Bowery to tracks, where fewer would suffice, makes that thoroughfare especially dangerous.

If you happen to be furnishing a new house or apartment you can adorn every room suitably and artistically for just about what it would usually cost to buy pictures for one or two rooms.

The detail can give only the bare outlines, such as the style of frame, the subjects treated and the price. It can't describe the pictures. See them! Some goods will be displayed on the main floor, but the picture store will have its quota.

LIBERALS TO RAZE BRITISH DEFENSES

Three Hundred Guns Along the Coast to be Swept Away.

NO GARRISON AT WEI-HAI-WEI

Ammunition Stores for the Protection of London Are to be Abolished—The Beginning of Economy.

LONDON, March 8.—In introducing the army estimates, amounting to nearly $150,000,000, in the House of Commons this afternoon War Secretary Haldane said that the Government accepted what Mr. Haldane called the "Blue-water" principle, namely, that the navy at its present strength was capable of defending Great Britain from invasion.

In pursuance of this principle, said Mr. Haldane, it had been decided that the ammunition stores constructed for the defense of London were unnecessary, and they would immediately be rooted up. Some three hundred guns mounted for defense purposes at various points along the coast would be swept away. The troops at Wei-hai-Wei (China) would be withdrawn, and some colonial garrisons would be reduced. These changes did not involve an enormous sum, but marked the beginning of economy.

The War Secretary said he thought that the northwest frontier of India was no longer endangered.

Great Britain, said Mr. Haldane, would never be able to reduce her striking force without providing some power of expansion behind it at home. He suggested as a possible device a system of dividing the period of training into two parts; one preliminary and elastic, giving the men the elements of military training, and the other, reserved for the period following an outbreak of hostilities, devoted to more severe training. But all training, he said, must be voluntary. Anything like conscription would defeat its merits, and the training should be decentralized and the work of the people themselves. Then no Government would go to war unless the people supported it.

CAN'T SELL RUSSIA'S BONDS.

Mendelssohn Has Little Success—Bankers Summoned to Capital.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 8.—The fall of the French Cabinet created much interest in Government and diplomatic circles here. The French Cabinet's attitude toward the Russian loan negotiations is specially important to Russia at the present time.

Minister of Finance Shipoff has summoned prominent Moscow and St. Petersburg bankers, who are now in conference with him on the question of a new interior loan. Herr Mendelssohn, the Berlin banker, is also here in consultation with Premier Witte and M. Shipoff.

It is explained that Herr Mendelssohn came here on his own initiative. He has been virtually acting as the Russian Government's agent in trying to place in small lots the loan of $200,000,000 authorized two months ago, but has met with little success.

The Russian bankers offer to float an interior loan of between $25,000,000 and $50,000,000 at 5 per cent. with the issue price at 93 if the Government will abandon its scheme of a new lottery.

M. Davidoff, Chief of the Department of Credit Operations of the Ministry of Finance, said to-day:

"The Government has made no secret of the necessity for raising an immense sum, but all of the $350,000,000 needed to liquidate the war and revolution expenses will not be required in 1906. With $200,000,000 to $250,000,000 in 1906 and $150,000,000 in 1907, the balance sheet could be cleared."

$10,000 MORE FOR JAPANESE.

Christian Herald Expects to Raise a Similar Sum Weekly.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—For the third time The Christian Herald, through Dr. Klopsch, its editor, has made a large contribution to the Japanese relief fund. To-day the State Department received from the Christian Herald through the Red Cross the sum of $10,000 for transmission to Japan, and it is understood that a similar sum will probably be contributed weekly for some time to come.

SYSONBY IN EXCELSIOR TO BE RUN AT JAMAICA

Delhi Also Entered as Well as E. R. Thomas's Hermis.

FORTY-NINE ON THE LIST

Trainers Put In Another Busy Day Preparing Their Horses for Benning Opening.

The great Sysonby, his stable companion, Delhi; E. R. Thomas's Hermis, Hamburg Belle, Race King, Phil Finch, Ram's Horn, and forty-two other horses are the nominations that have thus far been received for the Excelsior Handicap, which will be run on the second day of the Spring meeting of the Metropolitan Jockey Club at Jamaica, and when the late mails from the South and California arrive it is expected that the list will be increased. The race, which was won last year by Santa Catalina, with Rapid Water second and Sinister third, is this year of a guaranteed cash vale of $10,000, of which the second horse will receive $1,500 and the third horse $1,000. It is for three-year-olds and upward, at one mile and a sixteenth. Weights will be announced on March 22. The horses that have been entered in the race, with their ages, follows:

Sysonby, 4; Lord of the Vale, 6; Astronomer, 3; Hamburg Belle, 5; Dolly Spanker, 5; Jacquin, 5; Delhi, 5; Race King, 5; Red Knight, 6; Fancy Bird, 3; Barberloot, 3; Von Trump, 4; Blandy, 4; Aeronaut, 4; Aucassin, 4; Israfel, 3; Red Friar, 4; Batts, 5; Goldsmith, aged; Mount Henry, 4; Hermitage, 4; Juggler, 3; Tokalon, 5; Ben Hodder, 3; First Mason, 6; Roseben, 5; Hermis, aged; Stalwart, 5; Tradition, 4; Oxford, 4; Bad News, 6; Ormonde's Right, 5; Ram's Horn, 4; Phil Finch, 5; Master of Craft, 4; Belle of Pequest, 3; Santa Catalina, 4; Bohemia, 4; Merry Lark, 4; Bull's Eye, 3; Inquisitor, 3; Cairngorm, 4; Heaslip, 3; Glorifier, 4; Monet, 5; Grenade, 5; Ironsides, 3; Disobedient, 3; Colonial Girl, aged.

Important additional entries were received for the various Saratoga stakes yesterday through the mails. Phil Finch and Ram's Horn, two from the stable of W. S. Williams that have been racing so meritoriously at New Orleans this Winter, were both named in The Great Republic, the Saratoga Handicap, and the Saratoga Cup. Disobedient had been nominated for several of the selling stakes. First Mason has been named for the Great Republic, and Guiding Star and Ormondale have been named for the same stake. Red Leaf and Ormonde's Right have been nominated for the Saratoga Handicap, Go Between is nominated for both the Great Republic and the handicap, and Stalwart, the speedy representative of the E. R. Thomas stable, is named for all three of the big races.

Trainers were out early at Gravesend yesterday, and before the exercising hours were over much work had been done. The near approach of the racing season results in many of them hurrying their charges along, and many of the moves nearly approach the speed that will be asked in the tasks during the Summer. Fred Burlew was on hand early yesterday with his big string. Voorhees, Cinna, Edna Jackson, Waterbearer, and Marius Caius were out together, and after a long gallop they were permitted to breeze along for the last quarter in 0:26½. Demund, Waterbury, Sir Toddington, Togo, and Judge Post, a quintet of two-year-olds, were allowed to step along for three furlongs, and some of them went the route in 0:40½, while all finished up strongly in better than 0:42. First Water, Green Room, Belmere, and the other two-year-olds were only asked a light galloping exercise.

Frank Weir had Roseben under saddle, and D. C. Johnson, his owner, with Jacob Josephs, was down to look the great sprinter over. He was full of running, but was only permitted to go along for a quarter in 0:26½. Mr. Johnson expressed himself as being more than pleased with his condition. Weir also had out Jacquin, Stroller, and Keator, and after a long gallop they were indulged in a nice three furlongs in 0:41½.

William Hueston gave his charges useful work. Mazienello and Miss Ogden were breezed three furlongs in 0:41, while Kehailan, Oarsman, and Marinetta only received galloping exercise.

Charles Littlefield was over from Sheepshead Bay with seven two-year-olds among which was The Mikado, a thoroughly good one. They were all sent along smartly, and their preparation would indicate that they will surely race at Aqueduct, if not before that meeting opens.

"F[illegible]er Bill" Daly sent Radical and Proceeds three furlongs in 0:39. The two-year-olds Josephine Louise Daly, Kingston Girl, and Eileen were breezed a quarter in 0:27.

HILDEBRAND CAN RIDE AGAIN.

Reinstated by the Jockey Club and Receives a License.

The Stewards of the Jockey Club at a meeting held in the Windsor Arcade yesterday granted a license to Eugene Hildebrand to ride again. It will be remembered that Hildebrand was indefinitely suspended just about the close of the Gravesend meeting last season. There was less complaint against the jockey personally than his associates, and it has been tacitly understood for some time that he would surely be reinstated if there was assurance of new surroundings. With the granting of a license for 1906 came word of his being under contract to ride for Harry Payne Whitney during the coming season. Hildebrand is at present at Hot Springs, and his reinstatement will enable him to ride Jack Dolan in the Crescent City Derby. He was engaged for this mount by "Jack" Phillips some time ago, provided that he succeeded in securing a license from the Jockey Club.

The Stewards at the meeting were August Belmont, J. H. Bradford, H. K. Knapp, Andrew Miller, and F. K. Sturgis. Secretary and Treasurer Sturgis presided.

Samuel Ross of Washington, D. C., was elected a member of the Jockey Club to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Col. A. F. Walcott. Mr. Ross is a valuable addition to the club, and his election is a merited reward for what he has done in the interest of the sport both at Washington and Pimlico. He races under the name of the Columbia Stable, and usually has an excellent lot of runners bearing his silks.

Joseph A. Murphy was appointed judge and handicapper for the Spring meeting of the Washington Jockey Club, and S. S. Howland was appointed Steward to represent the Jockey Club.

W. A. Dervees, who had raced on outlaw tracks, was reinstated. The trainers to whom a license was denied were William Beckett, F. E. Hoey, M. C. Kelley, J. J. Mackessey, and J. H. Tabler. Many other jockeys' and trainers' licenses will be granted when fees are paid.

The following licenses were granted to trainers and jockeys:

AMERICAN'S FIRST PRACTICE.

Griffith and Men and the Birminghams Work Together at Ball Park.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 8.—Manager Clark Griffith of the Greater New Yorks and Manager Harry Vaughan of the Birminghams divided time at the ball park this afternon, the reappearance of the sun, following the visit of Jupiter Pluvius, allowing the first practice since the arrival of the Americans. This afternoon a big bunch of "fans" saw the practice of the teams. The diamond was in first-class condition, and the exercise did both aggregations a great deal of good. After the practice the visitors were taken a mile beyond the park and paced to town, the majority being fagged before the city was reached.

HOPPE IN WINNING FORM.

World's Champion Easily Defeats Peterson in Two Billiard Games.

Willie Hoppe, the world's champion, yesterday defeated C. T. Peterson in both afternoon and evening games in the special series of billiard matches at Hoppe's Academy. Hoppe played 18.1 balk line to Peterson's 18.2. Both games were one-sided. In the afternoon Hoppe won by the score of 300 to 206, and in the evening scored 400 points while Peterson gathered 154. The champion started the afternoon poorly and Peterson led at the end of the third inning by 41 points. Hoppe then put together 14 and followed with a contribution of 50, the result of careful manipulation. Peterson scored but 2 in his double effort. In the eighth inning Hoppe ran 43, and five innings later added a well-played 40. His best effort was in the fifteenth inning, when he made the high run of the game with 84. His next turn at the table netted him one point, but in the seventeenth inning he ran out with a splendid unfinished 48. Near the latter part of the game Peterson found his stroke and compiled in succession runs of 40, 22, 83, and 42, but he was too far behind his youthful opponent to be dangerous. The score by innings:

Hoppe—1 1 3 14 50 0 6 48 4 0 8 2 40 0 84 1 43. Total, 300; average, 17 11-17; high runs, 84, 50, 43, 43, 40.

Peterson—4 28 14 8 2 0 10 34 0 9 13 8 40 22 83 42. Total, 206; average, 12 2-17; high runs, 42, 40, 84, 83, 28.

Hoppe was seen to advantage in the evening game. The ivories ran kindly for him, and he played high-class billiards. His best run was 101, when he showed perfect command of the spheres and gave a splendid exhibition of bank, draw, and all-round-the-table shots. He made five consecutive runs from the sixth to the eleventh inning, the highest being 63 and the lowest 24. Peterson was unable to make any headway against Hoppe's rapid pace, and failed to make a run of over 23. The score by innings:

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

In the issuing of licenses to the cross-country riders this year, permission to ride only for the stables for which they trained was given to John Connolly, Robert T. Curran, Patsy Gallagher, and Thomas Wilson. The season will be a busy one for the steeplechasers, for with the adding of the course at Aqueduct and beginning with Benning there will be little rest until the last day of the Fall.

Jack McGinnis arrived at Gravesend yesterday from Los Angeles, Cal. During the day he had Buttling out for exercise. The horse has improved greatly, and should be better than useful this season.

The horses of R. H. McCarter Potter arrived at Sheepshead yesterday from New Orleans. They were Thistle Heather, Jetsam, and four others. They were shipped by steamer and all arrived in good condition.

J. M. Murphy, the Western turfman who has for the past few years operated in the East, returned to New York from a trip abroad yesterday. Most of his visit on the other side [illegible]

YACHTSMEN PLEDGE TO BUILD

Big Representation in 18-Foot Class Before the Season Opens.

Francis G. Stewart announced the names yesterday of fifteen members of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club, who had entered the new eighteen-foot one-design class which is being organized for racing on the Sound this season by six of the leading yacht clubs in the Racing Association. The list does not include all that will build, for some Seawanhaka members and most of the representatives of other clubs have negotiated direct with Hoyt & Clark, the designers. There will positively be three boats built in the Manhasset Bay Club, two at least at Larchmont, and probably two at Indian Harbor, while there may be more from any of these clubs.

There has been an unfortunate disposition in some quarters to regard the class as a Seawanahaka class, which would race principally at Oyster Bay on account of the preponderance of Seawanhaka-Corinthians interested in it, but Chairman Stewart says that the boats will race around the circuit from week to week, and will only appear at Seawanhaka's regattas as they appear at all the other clubs, in regulation scheduled open regattas.

The fifteen names announced by Chairman Stewart were:

Donald B. Abbott, T. Bache Bleecker, Morgan Cowperthwaite, Montgomery H. Clark, George R. Dyer, William D. Guthrie, William E. Iselin, Colgate S. Hoyt, Charles A. Lewis, Franklin M. Warner, Henry H. Landon, Winslow S. Pierce, Edward F. Whitney, Joseph M. Currier, and E. W. Spedin.

Schoenweg's Sixth Straight Victory.

H. Schoenweg scored his sixth straight victory last night in the amateur pool tournament at the Broadway Billiard Academy, defeating W. Croll by the score of 100 to 95. Schoenweg was handicapped at 100 against 125 for Croll, but the former defeated his opponent on even terms by five points. Schoenweg's high run was 24, with one scratch. Croll's best single effort was 21, with two scratches. L. Davis (125) will meet E. Knowles (100) to-night.

THE NEW YORK EDISON COMPANY

In the privacy of your dining-room, at a little dinner party, half a dozen shaded electric candles cast a soft, rosy light over the scene.

One and the same electric current supplies both. Such is the marvelous elasticity and versatility of the Edison service.

The Edison Company makes Broadway the great white way; throws light in the darkest corners of New York; reflects a glow on the heavens above that can be seen for fifty miles around; hangs great signs up and down the North River and the streets of Manhattan, and at the same time supplies in front of a clock in your bedroom a night lamp of one-fourth of one candle power. The Queer Customs of Mexico

Among the many strange customs of Mexico, perhaps the strangest to us is their manner of courting. At a certain hour of the day the devoted lover comes under his lady love's window and when she comes to the casement he may exchange glances, smiles and nods, go away and come back again the next day and do it all over again. If he is faithful and keeps it up for two or three years, he may finally be allowed to call and see her in the presence of another member of the family. If all goes smoothly the marriage is arranged.

This is but one of many strange and interesting customs to be observed on a trip through Old Mexico.

An attractive booklet "Sights and Scenes in Old Mexico," is ready for distribution. It is replete with interesting facts and fiction about the Egypt of the New World. Write for free copy.

How to go to Old Mexico

The principal highway to Old Mexico lies through St. Louis. Most roads run through trains to St. Louis, and the M. K. & T. Ry. runs through sleepers from St. Louis to the city of Mexico, without change. The route lies through the most interesting section of the United States—Indian Territory and Texas, where greatest activity and development are manifest. Most of the principal cities of Texas and Mexico, Dallas, Ft. Worth, Waco, San Antonio, Torreon, Zacatecas, Aguascalientes, Guanajuato, and etc., lie along the route, and stop-overs are allowed at pleasure. Ask your ticket agent to sell you a ticket via St. Louis and the M. K. & T. Ry. For rates and full information, write

TO STRENGTHEN TENNIS BY DEVELOPING SYSTEM

Metropolitan League Will Hold Tournament for Schoolboys.

CLUBS AT ANNUAL MEETING

Otto H. Hinck Again Elected to the Presidency—New Plan for League Championship.

Yale's old-time player, Thomas C. Trask, set the ball going for a lawn tennis championship tournament for the boys of the Public Schools of the Greater New York. His idea was enthusiastically taken up by the clubs represented in the Metropolitan Lawn Tennis League at their annual meeting, which was held at Delmonico's, Beaver Street, yesterday, and to which Trask was the delegate from the West Side Lawn Tennis Club. Each of the twelve organizations represented gave its unqualified support to the plan, which will develop younger racquet wielders for the top ranking class, and a committee was appointed to immediately arrange the details. This includes Thomas C. Trask, Chairman; Morris S. Clark, Siwanoy Lawn Tennis Club, and James Pryer Allen, New York Athletic Club and Hamilton Grange Lawn Tennis Club.

This is the most important movement that the Metropolitan League has ever undertaken since its organization for a championship series two years ago. The scope of the tournament proposed for the Public School boys is in line with the sentiment expressed at the last National executive meeting held in this city. Boston and Chicago are expected to follow the lead of this city in attracting younger players to the sport. Competitors from the various schools will meet in a preliminary series of tournaments on the courts of the clubs represented in the league. The winning boys will then meet and play off for a valuable challenge cup, so that the tournament will become an annual fixture in the Metropolitan district. From the outline of the meeting prepared yesterday it is probable that five hundred entries will be received for the series.

The delegates present at the meeting included Frederick G. Anderson, Kings County Lawn Tennis Club, Brooklyn; Rufus Davis, New York Athletic Club; Otto M. Hinck, Montclair Athletic Club; Louis J. Grant, N. Y. Lawn Tennis Club; W. D. Rising, Knickerbocker Field Club; Morris S. Clark, Siwanoy Lawn Tennis Club; Julio M. Steinacher, Hamilton Grange Lawn Tennis Club; Thomas C. Trask, West Side Lawn Tennis Club; and F. W. Course, Staten Island Cricket and Lawn Tennis Club. The Englewood Field Club was represented by proxy, and the Brooklyn Lawn Tennis Club was admitted to membership.

The regular championship series of the league, which has been twice won by the Kings County Lawn Tennis Club, will be decided in two sections during the coming season. This was decided upon after some controversy, and the winners of each section will then meet in a final series of home and home contests for the championship. This was done so as to decide the series within two months of play. The details of schedule were left to a committee of three, Frederick G. Anderson, Thomas C. Trask, and Rufus Davis. This committee will also rearrange the playing rules to conform to the new schedule. It is expected that the Crescent Athletic Club, which is a member of the league, will enter a team this year, as the new schedule will only bring each club into five matches. Each series of matches, as heretofore, will be decided in two singles and one doubles competition.

The two clubs newly admited to membership in the league, the Staten Island Cricket and Lawn Tennis Club of Livingston, S. I., and the Brooklyn Lawn Tennis Club, have finely equipped courts. A number of ex-champions of sectional tournaments are members of these organizations and their membership is regarded as a material strengthening of the league.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the re-election of Otto H. Hinck, Montclair Athletic Club, as President, and Frederick G. Anderson, Kings County Lawn Tennis Club, as Secretary and Treasurer.

WADSWORTH'S GOOD HORSE.

Diplomat's Portlight II. Second in England's Big Steeplechase.

WARWICK, England, March 8.—Craig Wadsworth, Second Secretary of the American Embassy, just missed winning the rich National Hunt Steeplechase, valued at $5,000, run here to-day. His Portlight II. made a game race, but only secured second place, being defeated by an outsider, Count Rufus.

There were twenty-eight starters, all ridden by amateurs, over difficult, natural country. The distance was four miles. The managers of the race prepared for trouble by engaging four doctors, but no serious accidents occurred.

The winner started at 25 to 1 against. Portlight II. was 100 to 8 against.

POLO CHAIRMAN THROWN.

Henry L. Herbert Lands in Mud in Lakewood Hunt.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 8.—Henry Lloyd Herbert, Chairman of the Polo Association, was thrown in a drag hunt here to-day. His horse took a five-foot fence nicely, but landing in a marsh, sank half way to its knees, throwing its rider. The soft ground saved Mr. Herbert from injury. The hunt was the best of the season. P. F. Collier came from Eatontown with the hounds of the Monmouth Hunt. A long procession of automobiles and carriages followed the riders. Among others in the hunt were Jay Gould, mounted on his black hunter Hindoo Rose, and John E. Pye.

Many Features for 23d's Games.

Twenty-four events have been scheduled for the Twenty-third Regiment's athletic carnival, which will be held in the Brooklyn armory, Bedford and Atlantic Avenues, Brooklyn, to-morrow night. In addition to the regular programme, there will be a medley relay race between teams from the Twenty-second and Thirteenth Regiments, the first man on each team to run 220 yards, the second 440 yards, the third 880 yards, and the last one mile. This has brought out the entries of such men as Harry Hillman, Harvey Cohn, Robertson, Sullivan, and Fraul. There will also be a one-mile relay for the championship of the Long Island Interscholastic League, in which teams from the Boys' High, "Poly. Prep.," and Erasmus Hall will compete. This will be the first race for the championship, which will be an annual fixture.

Another feature of the carnival will be a handicap relay for teams connected with the Sunday School Athletic League, while among the military attractions will be a rescue race, wall scaling, and a 440-yard run in heavy marching order.

FIGHT OVER SHOW EXHIBITS.

Lively Scene at Close of Sportsman's Show in Garden.

The police were called in to quell a disturbance at the close of the Sportsmen's Show in Madison Square Garden last night, when Marshal Blau proceeded to remove three exhibits of Dick Craine, a guide, on an attachment issued by Justice Sanders of the Municipal Court. John C. Smith, owner of the Eskimo Village at Coney Island, through his attorney, Abraham Oberstein, brought the attachment, claiming that Craine owes him $350.

It seems in 1904 Craine thought it would be a good idea to establish an Eskimo Village at the St. Louis Exposition. Smith says he came to him and made a written agreement to pay him the sum of $4,240 for nine natives. He also agreed to pay the cost of transportation there and back. Smith says Craine paid him the original money, but when the exposition closed refused to pay for the natives' return and maintenance.

In order to get his natives back to Coney Island Smith had to send on money for their living and their railroad fare.

Last evening Smith, Oberstein, and the Marshal appeared at the Garden. They looked over Craine's stock of exhibits and selected three that they thought would come to the value of the attachment. These were a mounted moose, a dozen robes, and a large stuffed white bear, one of the finest specimens ever caught.

When they attempted to carry them off Craine and some of his helpers tried to stop them and there was a tussle. A large crowd was in the Garden and watched the fight.

The Marshal got the robes in his arms, and although he had a lively struggle with a helper, managed to break away and get out of the Garden. To Oberstein fell the mounted moose, which he gingerly wrapped both arms around and came near jabbing one of its antlers into the helper who attempted to stop him.

But between Smith and Craine fell the final issue. Both grabbed an end of the white bear at the same time. Back and forth they tugged with the crowd laughing. Smith's grip was slipping and he thrust his hand into the bear's open mouth to get a better hold. A little girl watching them cried out: "Oh, look, the bear will bite him!"

Several policemen appeared on the scene and when the attachment was sown to them they advised Craine to submit.

Craine says that when the case comes up before Justice Sanders he will fight hard. He claims that he lived up to his contract and that the money was not due.

The attendance and amount of business transacted during the exhibition far exceeded all expectations. Over half a million dollars' worth of motor boats, marine motors, accessories, and sporting goods were sold by the different exhibitors. Eighteen motor boat companies report a total business of $306,900, and fourteen marine boat exhibitors sold $74,970 worth of boats.

In the water sports Finn and Rouse won the tilting contest and canoe races, while Trede and Sterke captured the prizes in the tug-of-war and club canoe race.

PUSHBALL EXHAUSTS GIANTS.

Manager McGraw Gives Men Long Exercise with Big Sphere.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 8.—After spending the forenoon in rest the Giants put in a busy afternoon at Red Elm Park to-day at preliminary training for the championship season. Few of the players were allowed to handle baseballs, however. The big pushball, which was relegated to the rear in face of sunny weather, was pumped up again with hot air and furnished a shoving match between sixteen of the players, one team being headed by McGraw, the other by Mathewson. The field was too muddy for baseball, but pushball, medicine ball, and Association football were introduced. When the practice, which started at 1 P. M., ended, three hours later, the most fatigued set of Giants that ever stepped from a muddy field left for their hotels with a desire to sleep.

The football as played on the soggy ground caused several players to suspend for a breathing spell. McGraw, however, kept up, and was complaining of a headache at the finish.

The batteries, consisting of Mathewson and Bresnahan, Taylor and Bowerman, Ferguson and Fitzgerald, and Ames, McGinnity, and Wiltse, were allowed to warm up. Bats were left in the clubhouse.

A telegram received by McGraw from George Browne stated that the Giants' fleet-footed outfielder was en route from California. "Sandow" Mertes is expected to come with him.

Yale Athletes for Pastime A. C. Games.

E. B. Parsons of Yale, the intercollegiate half-mile champion and record holder, has entered the 1,000-yard Amateur Athletic Union championship run which will be decided at the Pastime Athletic Club indoor games on March 17 at Madison Square Garden. Parsons established an indoor record last Saturday, running 600 yards in 1:14. Among the other entries for the event are J. P. Sullivan, Harvey Cohn, and Charles J. Bacon of the American Olympic team. Yale will be well represented in the handicap events, and will send a team for the intercollegiate two-mile relay race. One of the features of the game will be an international tug of war for teams of five men, open to all nations. Entries for the events will close on Monday with James E. Sullivan, 21 Warren Street; E. Spitzer, Ninetieth Street and Avenue A, or C. J. Dieges, 23 John Street.

The officials of the Pastime Athletic Club have tendered the members of the American Olympic team the use of their grounds at Ninetieth Street and Avenue A. The offer has been accepted by M. P. Halpin, manager of the team.

'Frisco Gets Boxing Championships.

For the first time in the history of athletics on the Pacific Coast the annual boxing championships of the Amateur Athletic Union will be held in San Francisco. The sanction has been granted to the Olympic Club of San Francisco, and the championships will be held in the Mechanics' Pavilion April 4 and 5. Special arrangements have been made for the visiting contestants, and cards will be issued which will carry training privileges at the Olympic Club. E. M. Graney will referee the contests. Special trophies will be awarded to the winners of the following classes: Bantam weight, 105 pounds and under; feather weight, 115 pounds and under; special weight, 125 pounds and under; lightweight, 135 pounds and under; welter weight, 145 pounds and under; middle weight, 158 pounds and under; light heavy weight, 168 pounds and under, and heavy weight, 168 pounds and over.

Schoolboys Tie in Hockey Game.

The hockey teams of Groff and Berkeley Schools played a tie game at St. Nicholas Rink last evening in the second of the series for the interscholastic championship. Berkeley led at the end of the first half, with a single goal scored by Sturges, but in the second half Carhart shot the puck into the net and evened up the score. The teams lined up as follows:

Groff, 1.	Position.	Berkeley, 1.
Mulligan	Goal	Ferguson
Lane	Point	Suydam
Butz	Cover point	Sturges
Dillingham	Forward	Wilson
Carhart	Forward	Purdy
Farrell	Forward	Barber
Noble	Forward	Nathan

Referee—B. Philips, Hockey Club of New York. Goal Umpires—M. Edson and B. Leake, Irving School. Goals—Sturges, Carhart.

More Money for Olympic Fund.

Major Turpin of the Military Athletic League yesterday notified James E. Sullivan, Secretary of the American Committee of the Olympic games, that the Military Athletic League had donated $100 and the Thirteenth Regiment Athletic Association $50 toward the fund to send a team of American athletes to the Olympic games at Athens.

NEW AUTO CHAIRMEN FOR A. A. A. COMMITTEES

Jefferson De Mount Thompson Head of Racing Board.

FARSON MAKES CLEAN SWEEP

Advises Uniform State Laws for Motorists and Action Against Careless Drivers—Glidden Tour Plans.

John Farson of Chicago, who was elected President of the American Automobile Association last month, gave unmistakable evidence by letter yesterday at the first meeting of the new Board of Directors that energy to obtain practical results was to be the chief characteristic of the A. A. A. this coming year. Mr. Farson started his campaign by making a clean sweep in the Chairmanships of all the important committees. The supposition is that the Chairman will adhere to this plan, and that comparatively few of the former members will be reappointed.

The meeting of the Directors was held in the rooms of the Automobile Club of America, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street. Mr. Farson was obliged to return to Chicago early in the week after attending the stockholders' meeting last Saturday, and Louis R. Speare, Third Vice President of the Bay State Automobile Club, presided. Fourteen clubs were represented.

Secretary Sidney S. Gorham announced the new Chairmen as selected by Mr. Farson. The selection of the Racing Committee Chairman attracted the chief interest, and the majority of local automobilists will experience a decided surprise in learning that the Chairman for the coming year will be Jefferson De Mount Thompson. He is an active member of the Automobile Club of America, and has witnessed nearly all of the big races abroad as well as in this country.

Paul Deming of the Detroit Automobile Club is the new Chairman of the Touring Committee, succeeding Augustus Post. This will be a very important committee this year, as it will practically have entire charge of the Glidden cup tour. W. H. Hotchkiss of the Buffalo Automobile Club and President of the New York State Automobile Association succeeds Albert R. Shattuck of this city as Chairman of the Highway Committee, and Sidney S. Gorham of the Chicago Automobile Club succeeds Judge James B. Dill of New Jersey as Chairman of the Law Committee.

The selection of Mr. Gorham, who is also the Secretary of the A. A. A., was made at the personal request of the President. Mr. Gorham is a lawyer, and has had considerable experience in the West in advising automobile legislation. Mr. Farson stated that he would like to emphasize in the administration of the year the following points:

1. The question of good roads, with National, State, and local aid, and with this in view I have asked Mr. Gorham to prepare a uniform bill to present to the various State Legislatures.
2. The question of a uniform bill to be presented to the various State Legislatures governing the use of automobiles on the highways and in the city streets. Uniform laws on this question would be very advantageous from every standpoint.
3. The American Automobile Association should set its face like a flint against reckless and insane use of automobiles by irresponsible and careless chauffeurs and operators.
4. A closer relation between the various automobile clubs of America and Europe.
5. A better understanding of the rights of automobilists.
6. Restrictions covering the question of racing, so that the matter may be hedged about with every safeguard.
7. A uniform system of signboards throughout the country, under the sanction of the American Automobile Association.

The Glidden Cup tour was informally discussed, but no decision was made regarding the route of the new conditions. The suggestion that the tour start from Cleveland, go to Buffalo, then through Canada to Montreal, and then south to Saratoga, probably ending at that point, met with considerable favor. The new Touring Committee will meet in a few days to discuss the various suggestions, and before final action is taken, further conferences will be held with the Contest Committee of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers. A meeting of the latter committee was held yesterday at the Hotel Astor, which was attended by several American Automobile Association Directors, but no definite plan was formulated.

The Directors present were: S. L. Haynes, Springfield; R. L. Lippitt, Rhode Island; A. R. Pardington, Long Island; F. H. Elliott, Syracuse; N. M. Pierce, Binghamton; A. G. Batchelder, New York; F. R. Pratt, New Jersey; G. A. Post, North Jersey; J. H. Edwards, Hudson County; H. Bartol Brazier, Philadelphia; W. T. White, Cleveland; W. S. Belding, Maryland; S. M. Butler, Automobile Club of America, and G. E. Farrington, New Jersey.

N. Y. A. C. Pool Tournament.

In the pool tournament for the championship of the New York Athletic Club last evening, E. A. Gamble defeated W. A. Tilt in the best-played game of the tourney by a score of 100 to 96. The men were very evenly matched, and at the opening of the last frame each needed two balls to win and both scratched twice in sparring for an opening. Gamble then broke the balls and scored, and running three more, won out. Gamble was behind in the middle of the match, but overtook his adversary by clearing the table, and from then on it was nip and tuck to the finish.

By virtue of the victory Gamble ties Tilt in the race for the title, each having lost one game and having one more to play, and each having won five.

Interscholastic Championship Meet.

The annual indoor field and track championships of the New York Interscholastic Athletic Association will be held on March 17, at the Eighth Regiment Armory, Ninety-fourth Street and Park Avenue. More than sixty of the largest schools in the East will send representatives, and fully 1,000 boys will take part in the various events. The events to be decided are: 60, 220, 440, and 880 yard runs, one-mile run, high jump, pole vault, putting 12-pound shot, and 60-yard hurdle. A 60 and 220 yard dash will be included for boys under 16 years of age. No entry fee will be charged, but only representatives of schools invited will be allowed to compete. Entries close to-morrow with E. E. Sturges, 270 West Seventy-second Street.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

Percy Megargel and his Reo mountaineer, the name he has given to his Reo runabout that is now on its way to New York to finish its double transcontinental journey, arrived safely in Albuquerque, N. M., a few days ago. Megargel made the run from Gallup in safety, although encountering bad roads. He lost his way two or three times, and once attempted to cross an abandoned ford where the quicksand was so treacherous that it was with difficulty he extricated his machine. Megargel is not attempting to make fast time on his way home. He has gone through so many trials that he will be glad simply to reach New York with his car in good condition.

Charles J. Glidden, who recently finished his motor car tour of India with 4,405 miles to his credit in that country, has now passed over into Lower Burmah, where he has already driven his car 245 miles. He writes that the roads in Burmah are very poor, a great contrast to the good roads encountered in India. He has now completed a total of 29,750 miles by motor car throughout the world.

W. E. Metzger has been elected to the Executive Board of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers, taking the place of R. D. Chapin, who lately resigned on account of his retirement from the Olds Motor Company. Mr. Chapin has now gone to California.

The Chicago Motorcycle Club has applied to the Federation of American Motorcyclists for the National meet, including the championship contests of the Federation. The application states that it is assumed that the annual endurance contest will be held, as formerly, in connection with the meet, and the Chicago clubmen suggest that the route from New York to Chicago be selected for the run. Secretary H. J. Wehman of this city has also received an application from the Rochester Motorcycle Club.

President Dave Hennen Morris of the Automobile Club of America will probably not return from his Southern trip before the middle of this month. He is spending several days on his stock farm near New Orleans.

The new Florida Beach track for automobile racing, near Jacksonville, will be used for its first meet from April 9 to 12. The chief automobile events will be the Southern championship for stock cars at one mile, a five-mile Florida championship, and a one-mile Florida championship. A number of motorcycle and bicycle races have been placed on the programme.

The automobilists of this city who are going to make a run to Boston to-morrow, arriving in the evening in time to witness the opening of the Boston Automobile Show, will leave the city at 6 o'clock in the morning. The party will travel in three cars, two English Daimlers and a C. G. V.

DOUBLE BALLOON ASCENSION.

American and Frenchman Will Start from Pittsfield To-morrow.

A double balloon ascension will be made to-morrow afternoon at Pittsfield, Mass., under the auspices of the Aero Club of America. The feature of the ascension will be the first flight of the Aero Club's balloon, which was recently finished by Leo Stevens, the balloon builder, who made the dirigible balloon used by Knabenshue in his flight over New York, and who is now building a larger motor-propelled ship for Major C. J. S. Miller of Franklin, Penn. Leo Stevens will go up in the first balloon, and it is probable that a member of the Aero Club will accompany him. Charles Levee, the young French aeronaut who made the ascensions at West Point and Hillburn, N. Y., will make the second ascension, using the same balloon as on the two previous occasions.

These ascensions will be made from the gas works in Pittsfield. Coal gas will be employed to inflate the balloons. The quality is said to be of a high standard, and the facilities for quick inflation are much better than at West Point.

If it is found impossible to inflate both balloons in order to get them up early in the afternoon, the Aero Club's balloon will have the preference, and Stevens, in that case, will make the only ascension. It is hoped, however, to send both balloons off almost simultaneously, and, provided the weather is satisfactory, both aeronauts will let themselves out for a long journey.

A party of New Yorkers, including several members of the Aero Club, will go to Pittsfield by train to-morrow morning, and the ascension will be made immediately after their arrival. Among those who will represent the Aero Club will be Cortlandt Field Bishop, Augustus Post, Newbold Leroy Edgar, J. C. McCoy, and Dr. Julian P. Thomas.

In preparation for more ambitious flights in the near future a Contest Committee has been appointed by the club, consisting of Cortlandt Field Bishop, Chairman; J. C. McCoy and Newbold Leroy Edgar. With the completion of the balloons that Leo Stevens is now building and with the arrival of three or four new ones from France, it is the intention of the committee to arrange for contests both for distance and also for length of time the balloons remain in the air.

Mr. Bishop stated yesterday that definite word had just been received from Comte de la Vaulx, the famous French aeronaut, saying that he would sail from Havre on March 17 on the French Line steamer La Savoie. He will bring with him a new dirigible balloon, equipped with a new screw propeller. Other appliances, invented by Comte de la Vaulx, will be seen in the balloon. Charles Levee will assist him in the tests that will be made here.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

HERBERT & COHEN.—Deputy Sheriff Murray has received an execution for $1,712 against Herbert & Cohen, dealers in poultry and meat, at 144 Orchard Street, in favor of the New York Kosher Poultry Dealers and Consumers' Association for merchandise sold to the firm and on two checks. When the Sheriff went to their place of business to make a levy he found that they had given a bill of sale on Feb. 26 to Gerson Brown. Two chattel mortgages, aggregating $2,000, were placed on the fixtures and horses on Feb. 13. They have been in business eleven years. Samuel Herbert was one of the organizers and Treasurer of the New York Kosher Poultry Dealers and Consumers' Association.

GEORGE A. KIRKHAM.—George A. Kirkham of 545 East 143d Street, a clerk in the Board of Education, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $3,694, and no assets. Of the liabilities $3,000 is on two chattel mortgages made on Oct. 21, 1896, on a trucking business, at 176th Street and Webster Avenue, which were foreclosed, the sale realizing $650. Mr. Kirkham is now sued in Rockland County for the deficiency.

H. HUENNEKES COMPANY.—At a meeting of creditors of the H. Huennekes Company, engineers and contractors, at 114 Liberty Street and Chicago, held at the office of John J. Townsend, referee in bankruptcy, at 45 Cedar Street, Lindsay Russell was elected trustee, and his bond was fixed at $15,000.

LOZIER

MAINTENANCE

❡ Does maintenance cost play much of a part in what you care to spend on your Motor Car—or do you mind?

❡ The delays and annoyances during repairs must figure somehow, even if cost does not.

❡ And it is interesting (and a flattering testimony to LOZIER high grade construction) that all owners of LOZIER MOTOR CARS report to this effect—that nothing ever gets out of order.

❡ This is worth while considering, and an opinion from any LOZIER owner is convincing, for they are all of them owners of large Motor Car experience.

❡ We are now delivering 35 H. P. and 40 H. P. Cars at $4,500 and $5,500 respectively, and booking 60 H. P. orders at $7,000 for May delivery.

GERMANY'S ISOLATION.

Our dispatches from Berlin, published yesterday, seem to recognize that the Berlinese feeling about the Algeciras Conference is that from the German point of view it is a failure. No matter with what of ill-temper, comprising dissatisfaction with the German representative at the conference, as well as with the representatives of foreign nations, and with the facts of the situation, the confession seems to be made. When it came to the "show-down," the most manifest fact was the isolation of Germany. She had the support of Austria, a support which indicates not the strength of Germany but the weakness of Austria. And she had the support of Morocco, which was plainly a source not of strength but of weakness. For the immediate question on which the "show-down" occurred was the question of the policing of Morocco. Now, Morocco notoriously does not wish to be policed at all. It is her grievance that pressure is brought upon her to compel her to behave herself in a decent and civilized manner. Consequently her adhesion to the German contention is in effect a declaration that Germany is against applying to her any effective pressure to behave herself. So that the vote of Morocco for Germany is, in the estimation of the world, a vote against and not for Germany's position, and denotes all the more strongly Germany's isolation.

"The stars in their courses fought against SISERA." The world has already judged the pretensions of Germany in the Mediterranean, and judged that they were unfounded. By the consent of mankind the Mediterranean Powers are the Powers primarily to judge of dispositions in the Mediterranean. These Powers are France, Italy, and Spain. France and Spain are outspoken against the German pretension. Italy, in spite of her membership in what may be still left of the Dreibund, is as unmistakably against that pretension. Great Britain, as the holder of Gibraltar, as the holder of the Suez Canal, as the greatest naval Power in the world, is evidently entitled to be consulted; and Great Britain is plainly opposed to the German pretension. Our own country has only commercial interests in the outcome, that is to say, the same interests as Germany. Our own country declines to vote in the conference, in accordance with its traditionary policy. But our own country can have left the German Government in no doubt about its desires and preferences, as a really neutral Power, concerned only for the commercial opportunities of its "nationals." The whole world is arrayed against the German pretension.

It is, one judges, quite impossible that such an issue should be carried by Germany to the arbitrament of war. In case of war, a case one mentions only to deprecate it, the isolation of Germany would be merely emphasized beyond the emphasis that has been put upon it in the conference. It is quite true that Germany may again invade France by land, and may inflict more grievous injuries, even, than those of a generation ago. But as to the specific cause of difference, the control of Morocco, that danger is irrelevant. It is Great Britain which holds the "Pillars of Hercules," the gate of the Inland Sea. The fleet of Great Britain would be used to prevent the entrance of a German squadron into the Mediterranean to attack the Mediterranean squadron of France. Undoubtedly, it would be used also to reinforce the French squadron in case of need. What else is the meaning of that "naval demonstration" of thirty first-rates which has been organized, during the sessions of the conference, within six miles of Algeciras? Whatever might be the event of a campaign on land between France and Germany, it is already plain that a general war, should Germany provoke it, could have no other result than the extinction of the German Navy.

These speculations, one may be sure, have already been pursued at Berlin, and the necessary result of them has already made its effect there. It is not necessary to expect war. But the main lesson of the negotiations is apart from their result. That main lesson is the disillusion and disappointment of mankind with reference to the German Emperor. He has, for now many years, imposed himself on the world as a generous, enthusiastic, philanthropic ruler. It is very difficult to retain this impression of him in view of what has happened at Algeciras and before Algeciras. It is not possible to doubt that he saw, in the collapse of the ally of France, and in France's consequent difficulty, Germany's opportunity, and that he took an advantage of that supposed opportunity quite incompatible with the notion of a generous or chivalric ruler, quite in accordance with the notion of a huckstering and bargain-driving ruler. Because Russia had been beaten by Japan, therefore, he insisted, France should submit not merely to loss, but to indignity, at the hands of Germany. Evidently the character thus suggested has nothing of magnanimity. But the very excess of the German pretensions has raised up friends for France, as we see in the records of the conference. It is evidently not safe for the German Kaiser to push France to extremities. And it is for that reason and not for any more sentimental reason that we may be fairly confident that a European war will not be the outcome of the conference at Algeciras.

THE CONTINGENCY RESERVE.

The critics of the Armstrong bills have objected to the proposed amendment to Section 87 of the insurance law prescribing limits for the contingency reserve as "dangerous and conducive to business panics." Possibly they misunderstand the intent of the contingency reserve limitation. It may have been the purpose of the authors of the bill to supply in this section an indirect but effective reinforcement of Section 96 imposing a limitation upon the amount of annual business permitted to an insurance company.

In its recommendations the Armstrong Committee said:

> The claim that the companies have needed the system of deferred dividends to protect themselves against fluctuations in values and unforeseen demands should be fairly dealt with by permitting the accumulation and retention of a reasonable contingent fund. This fund should be held for the protection of the policy holders, but available only for distribution in the event of liquidation. * * * The committee recommends that any life insurance company doing business in this State shall be entitled to accumulation of a contingency reserve out of the gains attributable to policies hereafter written to the extent of the following percentages of the net values of such policies, computed according to the legal minimum standard. *

Section 87 of the bill embodies this recommendation. The percentage of contingency reserve permitted diminishes progressively from 20 per cent. in the case of companies showing net values of less than $100,000, until, in the case of a company having $500,000,000, the contingency reserve would be limited to 2 per cent. One of the great New York insurance companies having, say, assets of $450,000,000, would be permitted to retain a contingency reserve or surplus of $11,250,000. If its assets should increase to $500,000,000 it would be permitted to maintain a reserve of only $10,000,000. Having $500,000,000 of assets and being obliged to earn 4 per cent. upon its money, an insurance company would probably wish to invest at least as much as $200,000,000 in securities quickly marketable. Under the present practice these securities would consist of bonds and stocks; if the Armstrong bills were enacted they would consist of bonds alone.

A contingency reserve of $10,000,000 is only 5 per cent. of $200,000,000. This would furnish, of course, a totally inadequate margin of safety against fluctuations in market values. Prolonged trade depression or a war would entirely wipe out the reserve. If such a thing should happen at the end of a year the New York life insurance companies might be obliged to make up an annual statement showing no reserve whatever, but an impairment. Banks exact a 20 per cent. margin on collateral to secure loans, and real estate owners borrowing upon bond and mortgage are usually limited to 60 per cent. or 65 per cent. of the market value of the property mortgaged.

The authors of the insurance bill must be supposed to know that a $10,000,000 contingency reserve is insufficient for a company having half a billion of assets, for which, according to the usual practice, $200,000,000 would be securities subject to some depreciation in value from unforeseen causes. The theory which credits them with the purpose to make this section of their bill operate as an automatic check upon inordinate growth of the companies has been suggested. They have provided that no corporation having an existing surplus fund in excess of the proposed limit shall be permitted to accumulate any further surplus until the aggregate is reduced below the percentage level of Section 87. It is doubtless true that a contingency reserve of only 5 per cent. of the amount invested in securities would be dangerously low, and would "conduce to business panics." That being the case, the insurance companies would be under powerful incentives to restrict their business within limits which would permit the retention of a larger reserve. If this is the purpose of Section 87 it is pretty drastic legislation, since the companies would be obliged practically to decline all new business for years, and to reduce their assets to much less than one-half their present volume in order to put themselves in a position of safety. If the section was not intended to be a restriction upon the volume of business and of assets it will hardly be enacted in its present form, unless the Legislature thinks that the policy and the practice of other financial institutions as to reserves may be safely ignored in the case of insurance companies.

SENATORIAL COURTESY.

A member of the New York Stock Exchange was the other day minded to write to FRED T. DUBOIS, a Democratic Senator from the State of Idaho, expressing regret that the Senator had voted in committee to kill the Philippine Tariff bill reducing the duties upon Philippine sugar and tobacco to 25 per cent. of the present Dingley rates. Thereupon Senator DUBOIS, who is a punctilious man and careful about his correspondence, promptly indited the following reply:

> Dear Sir: I have yours of the 5th, and notice that you are a member of the gambling joint in New York City, and that you have connections in foreign countries.
>
> I imagine that you know nothing, and care nothing, about the producers of this country so long as you can join in robbing them of the fruits of their toil.
>
> If I had any misgivings at all (which I did not) as to the propriety of my vote on the Philippine bill, a letter of censure coming from one of the accredited band of gamblers in New York City would have set such misgivings at rest. Respectfully,
>
> FRED T. DUBOIS.

The delicate wit and playful satire of the Idaho Senator puts his Stock Exchange correspondent in the position of being unable to make a satisfactory rejoinder. To undertake a defense of the Stock Exchange would be both difficult and useless in the case of Senator DUBOIS. To imitate the tone of pleasantry in which his own letter was written, and remind him that he has throughout his public career been a howling Populist and ranting demagogue, would be ineffective. Those things have been said to Senator DUBOIS before. It might be pointed out that a Democratic Senator enfolded in the tentacles of the beet sugar octopus and voting in Senate Committee under its direction and at its behest is not in the best possible position for assailing the New York Stock Exchange. The killing of the Philippine Tariff bill was a pretty mean piece of business. The President and Secretary TAFT have repeatedly said that we owe it to the Filipinos to remove a portion of the burdens that now rest upon their trade with us. It is a case of "plain duty," as it was with Porto Rico. But the beet sugar men and the tobacco men strangled the bill. Senator DUBOIS was one of the stranglers. His rage flames up against the "gambling joint" in Wall Street, but his heart beats warmly for OXNARD.

"BIRDS OF PASSAGE."

A thousand Slavs tried to get passage home on the Kaiser Wilhelm this week, and 780 succeeded. Others will follow, and every year lately this singular migration occurs. Just now the incident attracts attention because of its unusual proportions, which is said to be associated with anticipations of an anthracite coal strike. The incident serves to raise labor and immigration questions of more importance than novelty. It used to be thought that the ocean was such an obstacle that those who crossed it to join us stayed with us. But here is disclosed a casual and habitual migration from continent to continent. Fifty thousand Canadians, and sometimes more, come annually to pick up wages in New England each year and take their money home. But that is merely stepping across an imaginary line, without any severe clash of standards of living and wage. Here we have a race with nothing in common with ours except the color of the skin. Yet they come thousands of miles to share our prosperity, and when reverses threaten they go home with bulging pockets on a pleasure jaunt, only to return to increase the competition among wage earners who had no escape to cheaper living in the time of idleness. This is not so much offering a refuge to the oppressed as helping other nations to solve their problems at our expense.

There are no figures regarding these birds of passage previous to 1897. Since then the proportion they bear to all immigrants has varied between 8.9 per cent., in 1903, to 19.3 per cent., in 1897. Last year's percentage was 17.1. The fluctuation shown does not indicate decrease in later years, but corresponds to the state of the labor market, as above remarked. The official figures do not show how often the passage is made, but it is known that there are many cases of five, six, or seven returns, and that two, three, or four are common. Moreover, the percentage of returns is largest exactly where most objectionable, for example, among Italians. They come here in Summer, when public works are undertaken, and return for the Winter, often with a good sum of money. There are districts in Italy recognizable for what is regarded locally as wealth, derived from wages earned here and spent there.

What this means to ourselves is well illustrated by conditions in the district whence this week's "homers" come. At first the mines were worked by Irish, Welsh, and other English-speaking workmen. To them succeeded the Italians. They were followed by the Slavs, Huns, and Lithuanians. Each change was for the worse. The English speakers had families and homes and a stake in the community. They were taxpayers and voters, and members of various beneficial organizations, including the union. Their successors were mostly unmarried, content to lodge in bunks, and feed on what, by American standards, is offal. It is the inferior which is fittest to survive in such competitions, and the change in the communities affected is painful. Nor is it compensated by cheaper coal to general consumers. The unions and the employers have absorbed most of the saving in wages, and the result is a deterioration of social and labor standards. Old considerations regarding immigration fail when applied to such conditions as these.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Finding the Way to Go with the Will.

Dr. DARLINGTON seems to have revised his opinion as to the present helplessness of the Board of Health in regard to the smoke nuisance, and to have done it, curiously enough, the moment he realized that some energetic, persistent, and articulate people were not going to accept his excuses for inaction. The elaborate argument he made a few days ago to prove that he needed more law before he could do anything was apparently forgotten as soon as he saw that it would not be accepted as conclusive, and now he comes forward with a beautifully simple plan for effecting the desired reform. And the reform is both desired and desirable. New York would lose one of its not too-numerous charms of the aesthetic kind if it were to be robbed of its clear air and blue sky, and robbed it will be if things are to go on much longer as they have gone for a year or more past. Anybody who views the city daily from a point of observation whence the greater part of it can be seen at a glance gets the best of evidence that hundreds and hundreds of chimneys are pouring forth black smoke in great quantities, some of them at intervals and some almost constantly. This evil will certainly increase if those who are responsible for it are not convinced that such carelessness as theirs has serious consequences, not only to the city, but to themselves. Whether or not it is directly profitable to "consume" smoke by the aid of any of the various efficient devices made for that purpose is a question upon which opinions still differ, though the weight of the best opinion is that it is; but there is no question at all that it can be done at small expense and with little trouble, and none at all that the indirect profit from the doing is great. Cleanliness and health go together, and it is a pity to put up handsome buildings only to have them speedily covered with a layer of grime. And we doubt if it would require any enormous force of Inspectors to bring the smoke producers to a sense of their sins. A few convictions would have a wonderful effect in the way of awakening the consciences of all who are guilty, and nothing could be easier than to secure from the roof of any tall building evidence that could not be disputed. It cannot be too often repeated that there is no objection, legal or other, to the use of soft coal in properly constructed and properly managed furnaces. Only the smoke is the nuisance, and the smoke can be prevented even if soft coal is burned. The campaign is not one in the interest of dealers in anthracite.

Water Meters and Water Waste.

It troubles us to note that The New York Medical Journal is vehemently against the general use of meters as a means of conserving the city's water supply. That this would prevent an enormous amount of waste it readily admits—perhaps because denial would be so obviously ridiculous—but it sees grave objections. First among them is placed a truly curious one called "economic." It seems that "tenants of the sort that change their abode frequently for the purpose of evading payment of rent would be tempted in many instances to waste water willfully out of spite toward the landlord, who would have to pay the bill, and that, to protect themselves against the prospective loss, the landlords of tenements would raise the rents, already unconscionably high, thus putting another burden on the poor." That would be too bad, wouldn't it? And the very high probability of such a calamity, so produced, is sufficiently demonstrated by the fact that nothing of the kind happens in the closely analogous case of gas! The Journal's second argument against the water meter is that if the people of New York had to pay for their water in proportion to the amount consumed—the assumption that they do not have to do so now has a beauty nothing less than pathetic!—the number of baths taken and the amount of cleaning done would decrease to an extent highly deleterious to the public health. That, too, would be lamentable, but such statistics as we have at hand—perhaps The Medical Journal is better equipped—do not indicate that any such thing occurs in towns where water meters are used. Certainly their death rates do not show it. The private water companies, without exception, so far as we know, where the conditions are anything like what they are in New York, consider the purchase of meters a profitable investment of their capital, and, though the sins of such companies are many, they were never charged with lack of the business sense. It is very fine to say, "Oh, let the people have all the water they want!" but it is not at all fine to make them pay for two or three times as much as they want, and pay they do for every drop they waste.

Planning a New Holiday.

Despite our high regard for CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS and our firm belief that in discovering America he established a record for large achievement that is not likely to be broken for as many hundred years to come as have passed since he did it, we do not find ourselves fired with enthusiasm by Assemblyman SALOMON'S bill to make Oct. 12 a State holiday. Whether it is because Americans lack the hero-worshipping quality or for some other reason, it is a fact that they obstinately refuse to link any day at all closely with any man's name and personality, and they simply will not observe such holidays except by doing the things that please them on any Saturday, or half-Saturday, they may happen to "take off." Neither for LINCOLN nor for WASHINGTON have they consented to change their habits, and as a result the days allotted by statute to those worthies might be considered by an unknowing foreigner as proving that we care little or nothing about those great men. It would be the same—only more so—with a Columbus Day. It is doubtful if even the recently arrived Italians would pay much attention to it, and certainly nobody else would, for COLUMBUS has been a long time dead, and the sense of personal obligation to him is not strong in anybody now alive. Holidays are really popular only in countries where to a large majority of the population any excuse for a general suspension of work is good enough. We have not reached that point as yet, and it would be just as well to let the calendar alone.

Swallowed a Mouthful of Nails.

From The Genesee Democrat.

While assisting in putting on a steel ceiling at the Normal School Friday last Ira Whitney had his mouth full of ceiling nails, which are nicked and about two inches in length. Mr. Whitney was hammering away at the ceiling, when a tickling sensation in his throat caused him to cough, and down went the nails, just how many Ira doesn't know. Mr. Whitney has experienced no bad results.

A COACHMAN'S SUGGESTION.

Placing Coachmen on the Left Side of the Box Would Facilitate Traffic.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If it is worth while opening a discussion regarding traffic regulations in New York City again I would like to say that, in my opinion as a coachman of some years' experience, one way to greatly assist the traffic facilities in the city would be for the driver of any carriage with two men on the box to sit on the near side. I think where we find most blocks in the traffic and most need of regulation is just the place where the carriages of the rich are most in evidence, such as Fifth Avenue and Twenty-third Street in the daytime and the Opera House and theatres at night. I have given sitting on the near side a trial, and have found that it has many advantages, and I shall continue to sit on that side and am of opinion that if several of the coachmen on Fifth Avenue could be got to sit that way others would soon follow suit, because they would see that it is much easier and safer, and after once getting used to the near side would not drive from the off side again.

The only thing that prevents several of the men to whom I have spoken on the subject from sitting on the near side is that they are afraid to suggest such a thing to their employers, as their employers do not wish their carriages to seem conspicuous by being the only ones to be driven that way. I think most good coachmen would be only too pleased to sit on the near side if they could once get started that way, as they all fully understand that it is the safest and most convenient way of driving as long as we all have to drive and pull up on the right side of the avenue. Doubtless you have noticed in the Park during the early part of the day, when coachmen are out exercising horses, that almost three of every four men sit on the near side. This leads me to think that there are even more than I have found who think it easier and safer to drive from that side.

The only disadvantage that I have found while sitting on the near side is that perhaps the right arm is not so free to use the whip with as when sitting on the other side, but usually people who can afford two men on the box have horses that don't need the whip. Among the advantages, which are many, are that the groom is always able to step directly to the sidewalk, which saves the time and danger of getting down among the traffic and going around the carriage to get to the door, as, according to police regulations, all carriages stop with the curb on the right-hand side. The time that is lost at the opera or at the theatres, where perhaps from 300 to 500 grooms have to run around the carriage to get up, is quite considerable, whereas if they only had to close the door and step straight on to the box the traffic could be much more quickly and easily handled. Another advantage is that during snowy or slushy weather the groom steps straight on to the clean sidewalk instead of getting down into the snow or slush in the street; also the height of the curbstone helps a small man considerably in mounting the box.

Again, if it is necessary for the driver to hurry, it is much easier for him to see around the wagon or carriage in front of him from the near side than from the off, as from the near side he has a clear view up or down the street, and he also has the wheels of a carriage moving in the opposite direction to his own quite close to him, so that he can really drive closer to it with less danger than he could from the other side.

No doubt the way of sitting on the box is taken from the English style, but there all traffic keeps to the left, so that is quite correct; but here in New York all traffic keeps to the right, so that the opposite side of the box must be correct for the driver.

I believe that if the advantages of sitting on the near side were shown to the owners of carriages in the proper way they would easily see that it is the correct side to sit, as it is easier, safer, and more convenient, besides a good saving of time, and that they would ask their coachmen to sit on the near side.

GEORGE DRAKE.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—During the debate on the Indian Appropriation bill this week Mr. Currier of New Hampshire has been in the chair. To-day, when he left the chair to go to luncheon, he summoned to his place ex-Speaker Keifer, who has just returned to Congress after twenty years' absence. The ex-Speaker came up with visible trepidation. As he took the gavel he said to Currier, pleadingly:

"Please don't be gone long. I don't know a thing about these new rules, and it's a long time since I've presided. I feel a premonition that I'm going to get into trouble."

Currier had intended to eat a steak, but he changed his order to ham and eggs, went without a cigar, and dashed madly back to the rescue of the ex-Czar.

Mr. Gaines of Tennessee has deprived The Congressional Record of a literary gem. In yesterday's tariff debate on the Indian Appropriation bill Mr. Lacey of Iowa troubled him by interruptions based on insufficient attention to the remarks of Gaines. Finally the exasperated John Wesley exclaimed:

"There are none so blind as those who will not listen."

For some reason Mr. Gaines has seen fit to deprive future generations of this epigram by changing it in to-day's Record to "There are none so deaf as those who will not listen," a comparatively trite and commonplace sentiment.

Four colored cloakroom attendants are in high glee to-day and have been exciting wild astonishment on the part of members of the House by cake-walking as they bore hats and coats to them or took them away to be hung up.

By mistake several days ago Mr. Hughes (West Va.) favorably reported from the Committee on Accounts a resolution increasing their salaries from $60 to $70 a month. The resolution was agreed to at once. Just as that result was announced Mr. Hughes realized that he had been directed by the committee to report the resolution with the recommendation that it should not pass. To-day he moved to reconsider the action. But his motion was laid on the table by a vote of 96 to 41, thus affirming the increase.

With All Due Apologies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of "The Abused Housewife" in this morning's TIMES and with all due apology to Miss Laughton, I beg to submit the following:

Each morn I, too, without a change,
Must rise and build the fire—
We, also, have a new gas range
Which oft provokes my ire.

At early dawn, say 7 or past,
For milk I, too, must go;
Only to find the lift stuck fast
About two floors below.

Provisioning for day and week
Falls upon me alone;
Butcher and grocer I, too, must seek,
Alas, I have no 'phone!

And when the dreary sweeping day
Rolls round again, ah me!
No Mike lugs all my rugs away—
My "Mike" is "little me."

SUPPRESS MONTE CARLO?

Is It Really the First Peril to American Youth That Needs Attention?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I appeal to those of your readers who are of a truly philanthropic turn of mind for immediate funds to aid in the formation of a society for the improvement and betterment of the Riviera, and the complete suppression and annihilation of that European plague spot known to the world as Monte Carlo, where so many of our young men are lured to ruin

We have Gerry societies, Revolutionary societies, homes for motherless cats and fatherless kittens, drinking fountains for English sparrows, an aquarium for fish that have strayed out of their element, and a newly organized league to liberate all caged animals in public menageries. Why should not a society be formed to safeguard our young men with fortunes and Monte Carlo "systems"? Those of your readers who have the moral and financial welfare of the American youth at heart and lay claim to a twentieth century civilization and humanitarianism should be prompt in sending in their subscriptions to put this hell out of business, and enable me and my co-workers to make a perfectly pure paradise of the spot.

Give the "Old Fellows" a Chance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an editorial in a recent edition of your valued paper you "go for" the "venerable" Joseph Medill Patterson on his becoming a pronounced Socialist. You should not be too hard on the old fellow. You must remember that our old friend Alexander the Great had arrived at the mature age of about 27 when he sighed for more worlds to conquer. The old fellows Napoleon Bonaparte and William Pitt and Alexander Hamilton and Patrick Henry and Thomas Jefferson and J. E. B. Stuart and "Joe" Wheeler and "Phil" Sheridan and some other venerable youths made their début at the ripe old age of 27. Then why not Joseph Medill Patterson? It is never too late to mend. He will have a longer time in which to correct the indiscretions of youth, when he shall have discovered his said indiscretions.

The young man in the White House has Socialistic ideas, too, with his rate regulations interfering with private business of common carriers. Suppose we let them try Socialism, so as to see how the idea will work, and if it don't work and accomplish what they claim for it we can all go back. I judge from your editorial referred to above that your idea is that we would all get back to where we started from, anyhow. Let us make the experiment, prove the foolishness of the theory, and get the whole crowd disgusted with themselves.

J. P. TAYLOR.

Winston Salem, N. C., March 2, 1906.

For 1908, Gray and Folk.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with great interest your able and conservative editorials for the past ten years, and desire to call your attention to one printed during the month of April, 1904. This editorial reviewed the probable Democratic possibilities of that year and referred particularly to Judge George Gray of Delaware.

It stated that Judge Gray was no doubt the strongest man of his party. Now, I think the Democratic Party made a grave mistake in not honoring him with the nomination at their convention at St. Louis in July, 1904, and I trust it will be sane enough to take up this able son of Delaware at their convention in 1908. If there is any man in the country that could unite the Democratic Party and carry it to victory it is Judge Gray. Few, if citizens of the United States, have made more rapid progress in public esteem and public confidence than has George Gray since he was chosen to succeed Thomas F. Bayard in the Federal Senate.

In my mind the strongest ticket for the Democrats would be Gray of Delaware for President and Folk of Missouri for Vice President.

Municipal Court Conditions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Edward J. Maxwell's letter in yesterday's issue of your paper contains some very good suggestions looking to an improvement in the calendar practice in the municipal courts, and if they were adopted they would greatly facilitate matters both for attorneys and litigants. I would supplement his plans by an amendment to the court rules fixing the same days each week in all districts for non-jury and jury trials. Each district now has trial days fluctuating monthly as the Judges rotate, and as a necessary consequence cases are frequently inadvertently set for trial on non-trial days, resulting in an unnecessary and vexatious attendance of counsel, client, and witnesses, and the loss of much valuable time. If these matters and suggestions were properly presented to the Board of Justices I have no doubt that they would gladly amend their rules so as to bring about these needed changes.

A Bill That Should Be Scrutinized.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A bill has been introduced in the Assembly at Albany calling for the licensing of electricians, to which there is little objection; but the bill goes further and says that the licensed electrician shall be employed only by a licensed employer or contractor, which is the objectionable feature of the bill. Some of the advocates of this measure are so grasping after the almighty dollar that they fail to see or care what hardships it will entail on some of their fellow-men. This bill, if it is allowed to become a law, will drive two-thirds of the electrical contractors in this city out of business (practically all of the small contractors) and thus create an electrical contractors' trust, which is exactly what the advocates of this bill are aiming at. I don't believe the citizens of New York will approve of any more trusts for some time to come.

An Eulogy a Barbarism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent, Mr. Edward Astrom, asks whether we should say a eulogy or an eulogy. The reply to this question covers many others. English grammars require an before any word beginning with a vowel or a silent 'h,' and a before all others. But some words begin with a vowel, though they have the sound of a consonant. So where this is the case a must be used and not an, for the rule is made for the sake of euphony.

Never mind what the learned professors say or write; common people, who make the language and who know better, never make this mistake. Their ear or feeling guides them rightly. An European, an one, or an eulogy is barbarous English, for this practice violates the spirit of the rule while following the letter.

ROBERT WATERS.

West Hoboken, N. J., March 4, 1906.

To Restrain Feminine Extravagance.

From The London Chronicle.

The report from Sweden that a league has been formed there for the purpose of restraining extravagance in woman's dress has a good rich Elizabethan ring about it. In 1650, "The principal citizens of London were become so extravagant in their dress that it was thought necessary to restrain the same"; and the result was a proclamation issued by her Majesty "against excess of apparel, gold chains, and cloaks, the latter of which were made so long that they reached down to the heels." Where is that proclamation now? Still more arbitrary was a proclamation of 1465, announcing that "a ridiculous custom having long prevailed of wearing shoes with toes of enormous length, for the future the beaks or toes of shoes should not exceed two inches in length, on the penalty of the wearer being excommunicated and paying a fine of 20 shillings, to be equally divided between the King, the Chamberlain, and the Company of Cordwainers." If ridiculous fashions were fined now, somebody would be rich.

CONRIED AND SPECULATORS.

Opera House Manager Offers $500 for Proof of Collusion.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of certain letters which have appeared in the New York papers, affirming that the public which desires cheap seats is not treated fairly at the Metropolitan Opera House box office, and insinuating that the management has an understanding with the ticket speculators, I beg to make the following offer:

To any one who can produce evidence that the management of the Metropolitan Opera House, or any employe, official, or agent connected with that theatre, is in collusion with the speculators, I will cheerfully pay $500.

Corporations and the Law.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Several taxpayers and property owners on the middle west side desire me to thank you for the excellent editorial in your issue of March 3, 1906, entitled "Eleventh Avenue."

The attorney for the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad sets up a claim that the road is being operated under a grant from the Board of Aldermen of this city, and consequently the franchise has not expired, as claimed by Mr. Saxe and others.

I am writing in the interest of my neighbors and others who think and believe that something should be done about this matter—not hastily or illegally, but with consideration.

As a principle of law all railroads are creatures of the State, are regulated by the State, and subject to the control of it.

They have vested rights when they compensate the people represented by the State, but must use their utmost care and skill to protect life and property, consequently all franchises are subject to control and regulation.

We all know that in theory these statements are correct, but we also know that corporations do as they please and care not a farthing who suffers and how.

We want to get at the legal aspect of this matter, for mistakes may mean much to us all.

London, New York, and Crime.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read the two letters appearing in your edition of this morning on the above matter, and quite agree with the views expressed that London is much safter than New York for pedestrians.

I am an Englishman, and have lived in London for over fifty years. I have lived in New York for one year, and am astonished at the crime that is "committed" and "permitted" in this great city. It means that the police of London must be miles in front of the police of New York in their duties, and I may add that it is a most unusual sight in London to see a policeman with a staff or, as it is called here, a night stick. This of itself shows that it must be much safer for the citizens there than here.

The remedy to my mind is very easy. Why not get one or two of the London Commissioners over here to show New York what to do. Some years ago Paris did this in regard to the street traffic, which it could not control, and since Paris adopted London methods the traffic has been perfect.

New York is such a large and fine city that it should adopt without hesitation the world's best methods, no matter which part of the world they are to be found in.

Strap-Hanging Habit Hereditary.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am delighted to be able to inform you that "P. Harlem" in the communication printed in Thursday's paper apropos of the little Harlemites standing in a car despite the fact that there were many seats vacant is mistaken. Those were my boys. He may have spanked his progeny that morning, but I am sure that those boys were mine. I have been a strap-hanger ever since the street car lines reached the New York territory of "reasonable rents." Those boys inherit their prehensility, and my only regret is that they were not born with long enough arms to let them reach the straps earlier in life.

New York, March 8, 1906. R. WILFER.

Another Moroccan Imbroglio.

From The London Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—M. B., teacher of foreign languages in a public school at Algiers, married Mme. B. before the Kaiser went to Tangier. The lady is a German, though not a Prussian, being from Baden. She has, of course, become French by marriage, but her feelings remain true to the Fatherland. M. B., on the other hand, is a vigorously patriotic Frenchman. They agreed not to mix up politics with matrimony, and all went well until the German Emperor's visit to Tangier. Then the lady's feelings got the better of her resolutions. She removed a non-committal statuette of Psyche from the mantelpiece and set up in its stead a bust of Bismarck. The next morning pictures of Napoleon I. and Sadi Carnot had disappeared from the drawing room, and portraits of German officers in full dress glared down at M. B. This was too much for M. B., and he instantly commenced proceedings for a divorce "on the ground of outraged patriotism."

He pointed out that Mme. B.'s behavior in the present state of European politics was unbearable, more especially as Algeria adjoins Morocco, which had provided the occasion or the excuse for the prevailing tension. Mme. B. had, accordingly, done petitioner a "grave injury" within the meaning of the act, and he was entitled to a decree. But the courts have unpatriotically decided otherwise, and seemed, in fact, inclined not to take Monsieur's grievances seriously. The First Tribunal rejected his petition, because an injury done to petitioner's patriotic feelings, though regrettable, was not tantamount to injuries of another kind such as could constitute a sufficient ground for divorce, and the Court of Appeals of Algiers has just dismissed his second suit for the same reason. He will have to go on looking at Bismarck over his fireplace, unless he has the spirit to defy Mme. B. and remove the obnoxious Iron Chancellor himself.

Anachronistic.

"I can't imagine," answered Senator Sorghum. "The Congressional Record wasn't published then."

"In Philadelphia when a water meter was twenty-one years old they used to let it vote."

THE EDITOR EDITS.

I.

The Editor sat in his high-backed chair,
And his words were few but strong,
For his pipe was out and his love was false,
And his last mince pie went wrong.

So with pencil blue he worked havoc dire,
As he frowned, in contempt irate—
"Ere I use such blame fool stuff," quoth he,
"I will fill up my page with plate!"

II.

But the sun shone out and his pipe drew clear,
And love set all doubts at rest,
While a grain of pepsin moved the weight
Which had settled on his—chest.

"After all, 'tis a brave, good world," quoth he,
"I have hopes for my fellow-men!"
Then a criss-cross he marked on my humble MS.,
Which I later cashed in for X.

NO OPERA PRIMA DONNA SIGNED FOR NEXT YEAR

Only Tentative Agreement with Eames; Sembrich Dissatisfied.

RIVAL MAY GET NORDICA

Hammerstein's Negotiations Advancing—Conried Trying to Make Part-Season Contracts.

Persons who are familiar with affairs at the Metropolitan Opera House are talking now of the tangle into which the management has got in engaging prima donnas for next season. Not only Mme. Nordica, who entered into negotiations with Oscar Hammerstein recently, but Mme. Eames and Mme. Sembrich have raised objections to conditions offered, and the director has not yet made a contract with any one of the prima donnas in the first flight.

It was announced by the Metropolitan management recently that Mme. Eames has been engaged, but inquiry shows that the negotiations have not come to the stage where anything has been put in writing. Terms for a season's engagement have been discussed, and an agreement reached as to what they would be, but friends of Mme. Eames say that there are certain conditions yet to be met before she will bind herself.

Mme. Eames has taken an independent attitude as far as next season's engagement is concerned. When she was engaged this year it was as a guest, for a limited number of performances. The management had a contract with Mme. Sembrich for the season, and with Mme. Nordica for twenty performances, thus feeling secure, and did not come to the terms of Mme. Eames for an entire season.

Under these conditions the singer demonstrated that she could fare well without the opera. For the first time since she began her career in opera she undertook a concert tour of the United States. She demonstrated her independence so conclusively that when she came to New York to give her special series the Metropolitan management was ready to meet her terms if she would only consent to remain the season out and go on the tour, which she did, at a sacrifice of concert performances in the South.

When approached recently about the arrangements for next season, Mme. Eames informed the director that she was prepared to be with the opera or to go out again on tour, but that the engagements would not be mixed this time. She did not care to make contracts a few weeks at a time either. "It was a question of a full season or nothing. Under those circumstances a tentative agreement was reached for the full season.

If the management was to follow its policy of the season before this arrangement made it necessary to cut the time of the other two prima donnas. In the case of Mme. Nordica the proposition for a limited number of performances was rejected and she opened negotiations with Mr. Hammerstein. It can be said that these have advanced so far that it is exceedingly probable that Mme. Nordica will sing in the Thirty-fourth Street Opera House next season.

Mme. Sembrich in turn was approached, her friends say, with the proposal that she should undertake next season to do concert work in addition to her opera work and should give a limited number of performances in the way Mme. Eames started out this season. Mme. Sembrich, while she has had success in whatever concert work she has done, did not care to make such a contract. At present the situation between her and the director is said to be one of waiting. She is waiting for an offer of a full season's engagement, which, in view of the activities of Mr. Hammerstein, her friends believe will come to her, and the director for an acceptance of his plan.

TWAIN'S WANING CONSCIENCE.

No More Left Than a Millionaire, He Says at Putzel Dinner.

Four hundred members of the Freundschaft Club met at their quarters, Park Avenue and Seventy-second Street, last night, to do honor to their late President, Charles Putzel, on his appointment as Tax Commissioner. Among those who were asked to meet him all were afficers or ex-officers except Mark Twain. The Chairman, Julius J. Frank, explained that the humorist was King of all Hearts and all Affection. Mayor McClellan sent a letter of regret.

Mr. Putzel remarked that when Mayor McClellan appointed him to office the members of the Freundschaft evidently assumed that he was selected to reduce the assessments on the club. The dinner was set three weeks before the close of swearing-off time. Then the club could sing:

What is it to us if taxes rise and fall!
Thanks to our Putzel, we pay none at all!

After Signor Campanari had sung the Toreador's song Attorney General Mayer was introduced. Then ex-Controller Grout assured the new Tax Commissioner that if he needed criticism he had only to assess The Journal, The World, The Sun, The Herald, and The Eagle at their true value.

Mark Twain, who received an ovation, said:

"Mr. Putzel is related to me in a very tender way through taxes. They are a sore subject to me and I was glad to hear there was any foreign product untaxable in America except the answer to prayer.

"When I went to his office and saw Putzel in the receipt of perjury, I recognized him right away. Years ago I met him in a bookstore. I asked him the discount of a book for a publisher. He said 40 per cent. I asked him the discount to an author. He jotted down another 40 per cent. What was it to clergy? Forty per cent. again.

"Well, I said, I was only on my way there, kind of studying. So he put down 20 per cent. without a smile. I was in despair and asked him for 10 off, as a member of the human race. He never moved a muscle, but as I left the store called me back for the book and the 40 cents that was coming to me.

"I hoped I might get something from him now as Tax Commissioner. I put up my hand and made a statement. It was pain and grief to me, for I was brought up in the pious circles of Missouri. But a year in New York had left me with no more conscience than a millionaire. I would like to compliment him, anyway, for I may get relief next year.

"Attorney General Mayer suggested I might be a Supreme Court Judge. I can't be that, for I know nothing of the administration of justice. But, I understand from his speech he is the propagator of crime for the whole State, and, as I am reasonably familiar with crime, I might have his job."

A BABY GIVEN AWAY.

But Not in the Way the Salvation Army Audience Had Expected.

In a window of the Salvation Army barracks, at 512 East 138th Street, this notice has been posted since the beginning of the week:

A BABY WILL BE GIVEN AWAY
HERE!
on Thursday Evening with the Consent of Its Parents.
Thursday. 8 P. M.

This placard attracted attention in the neighborhood, especially among the women who really couldn't see how any mother—no matter what the father might do—could consent to part with her baby.

The matter was discussed over the air-shafts, on the stoops, and in the delicatessen stores. Was it a boy or girl? The placard gave no hint. Finally there was a whisper that the baby to be given away was two-year-old Hilda Emily Blackmann, daughter of Albert Blackmann, who is a soldier in the Salvation Army ranks.

Last night the Salvation Army hall was packed with the curious. The Army band played hymns. Between hymns the audience wondered and whispered. How would the baby be given away? Would somebody come out and give it to the most motherly looking woman or the most properous looking man? Or would they ask for bids? Oh, no. That would be against the law. Expectation was running riot when at last Major Shephard of the Salvation Army Headquarters walked on to the platform with the baby in his arms and said:

"Friends. We have come here to-night to give this baby away. But we will give it to no human. We have decided to give it to Christ."

Then the band played, a collection was taken up and Hilda Emily Blackmann was christened. The audience, in parts, expressed various degrees of dissatisfaction.

'SIEGFRIED' SPLENDIDLY SUNG

Miss Fremstad and Mr. Knote Please a Large Audience.

Whatever shortcomings may be finally set down against the opera management, it cannot be charged that the best foot was put forward at the beginning of the season and the end left to take care of itself. As the season has drawn to a close there has been constant improvement manifested in nearly every performance. Most of all, perhaps, has this been true in the case of the Wagner operas, and especially the Niebelungen Cycle.

In the case of "Das Rheingold" last week and "Die Walküre" on Tuesday many deficiencies were overcome, and again last night, when "Siegfried" was sung, earlier crudities were eliminated. Scenic and lighting effects were well managed, and the orchestra was most judiciously handled by Mr. Hertz, and made to float the singers, as it were, on a sea of harmony, instead of overwhelming them.

For the third time in the week Miss Fremstad achieved a triumph, adding to her Carmen of Monday and her Sieglinde of Tuesday a notable impersonation of Brünnhilde. Both vocally and dramatically she added laurels to her growing reputation, singing with an opulence of voice that surprised her admirers, and holding the large audience, almost without exception, until the very fall of the curtain. Only nine people distinguished themselves and annoyed their fellows by leaving the auditorium before the close of the last act.

Mr. Knote was a familiar and most satisfactory Siegfried. Mr. Van Rooy sang the part of the Wanderer with his usual breadth and sonority. Mr. Goritz was Alberich as of yore; Mr. Reiss was Mime, and Mr. Blass, Tafner. Miss Alten sang the bird music and Mme. Homer was Erda.

There was a large and appreciative audience present, which greeted Mr. Hertz at the beginning of the third act with cordial handclapping.

WAR AT THE HIPPODROME.

The Speculators Are the Foe and Fred Thompson Leads the Home Forces.

Fred Thompson of Thompson & Dundy waged war on the Hippodrome speculators last evening. He did the fighting himself. Taking up his station at the main entrance, with a huge megaphone, he proclaimed in clarion tones that there were plenty of seats inside to be had at regular prices, and if the $1 seats gave out the $1.50 seats would be reduced for the occasion.

Mr. Thompson had been stirred up over the obnoxious way in which the speculators have treated patrons in the last two weeks. Those who would not buy on the sidewalk were jeered at as "Cremos."

"It's got to stop," said Mr. Thompson, "And I'll be out here every night till it does."

"LUTTI."

A Von Seyffertitz Comedy Pleases at the Irving Place.

Marie Reisenhofer, assisted by Harry Walden, appeared last evening at the Irving Place Theatre in the title rôle of Gustav von Seyffertitz's comedy "Lutti." The audience was large and followed the star with friendly approval.

The story of the piece has to do with Lutti, a young and frivolous woman, who at the opening of the play is on terms of intimacy with M. Dupont. Dupont, however, is interested in another young woman, and during Lutti's absence on a visit marries the other girl. The discovery of this marriage, on Lutti's return, gives rise to the comedy complications which, of course, in the end are straightened out to everybody's satisfaction.

Harry Walden appeared as Dupont, and the members of the stock company were seen in the other rôles.

Gerardy in Montreal Express Crash.

It came out yesterday that Jean Gerardy, the 'cellist, was in the wreck of the Montreal express on the Delaware and Hudson Railway at Saratoga Springs on Wednesday. He was seated in the drawing room of the express when the collision occurred, and was thrown from his seat. Yesterday he went to Philadelphia to rest before his concert at the Hippodrome on Sunday.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Henry B. Harris signed contracts yesterday with Robert Edeson by which the actor will continue under the Harris management for five years.

"Panhandle Pete," a musical farce, by Edward Laska and Samuel Lehman, will be produced early next Fall in Atlantic City under the management of J. E. Plunkett.

Marie Dressler was out of the casts of "Twiddle Twaddle" and "The Squaw Man's Girl of the Golden West" at the Weber Music Hall, last evening. Her parts were played by Edythe Moyer. Miss Dressler is suffering from a slight attack of tonsilitis.

A dozen Indians fresh from the plains were in New York yesterday on their way to see "the Great White Father" at Washington. They spent the afternoon at the Hippodrome and the audience divided attention between them and the stage performance.

FOR AMELIA RELIEF SOCIETY.

An Entertainment Will Be Given at the Waldorf-Astoria.

An entertainment out of the usual order, the entire proceeds of which will be donated to charity, will be given to-morrow evening at the Waldorf-Astoria under the auspices of the Amelia Relief Society.

The object of the society is to provide comforts and necessities for the worthy poor, embracing food, fuel, clothing, and in many cases medical attendance.

Mrs. Samuel Elkeles has arranged the programme. Among others the Grace Gardner Company, Charles F. Seamon, Melville & Stetson, and John Hyams and Leila McIntyre will appear. Ameliagraph pictures will also be presented. A feature of the entertainment will be the rendering of several new ballads by Mrs. Joseph W. Stern.

WOMEN HISS DR. PETERS AND DENY DRINKING

Pastor's Talk Raises a Storm in the West End Association.

HE'S AGAINST THEIR VOTING

Tells His Audience to Stay at Home and Wield Greater Power Than the President.

The West End Women's Republican Association hissed the Rev. Madison C. Peters yesterday afternoon when in a talk on "Would It Be Wise and Best to Invest Woman with the Ballot," he demanded: "Would the ballot enable woman to close up the saloons when as many women as men drink to-day?"

Cries of "That's not true!" mingled with the hisses that came from the indignant women.

"You don't believe me?" continued the clergyman. "Then come with me after 12 o'clock some night into the cafés and I'll show you. Any one knows who has been around. I've been around."

Dr. Peters was invited some time ago to speak on the ballot before the association. Later he was requested to limit his remarks to the ballot as it touches men because it is against the rules of the organization to discuss woman suffrage at its meetings.

When he stepped to the platform yesterday Dr. Peters said that the second request had come after his speech was prepared, so he would give the address, although he knew what he would say would not please some of his listeners.

"I never speak for applause or approval, but according to my convictions," he told the women, "and I'm just as likely as anybody to be mistaken."

In a silence extraordinary for a woman's club the association listened while he defined the sphere of the sexes, assigning a public career to man.

"God has put into the hands of women at their own hearthstones," he said, "power greater than that President Roosevelt wields to-day. The question is not, 'Is woman's right to the ballot equal with man's,' but, 'Is it best to give it to her?' I do not deny the right of women to smoke cigarettes or use rough language, but most of us men are inclined to believe that the women who do these things are 'no gentlemen.' I would rather the sexes were equalized by the refining of men than by the vulgarizing of women.

"The ballot is not the panacea for woman's wrongs. Man has had it, yet how demoralized are our cities, how reeking with rottenness all the departments of Government—National, municipal, county, and township.

"Few good women would avail themselves of the privilege of the ballot, but all bad women would. Besides, if you give woman the ballot she must turn policeman and serve on the jury. To exercise the full functions of citizenship would make such a change in her life as to make her more a man than a woman. A female man, an affected, driveling little doodle, a weak sister dressed up in men's clothing is bad enough, but concerning a mannish woman, good Lord, deliver me from expressing my opinion lest I should say something not in the Prayer Book.

"I challenge you to find in the Encyclopedia of Biography one great man who was the son of a fashion-pampered mother. I do not, however, wish to be understood as saying that a woman should be a prisoner in her home, and when I have spoken of the whist that is debauching women and the drink among them that is disgusting men, I have done it not to criticise women, but because we might as well close up our churches if they are not to be backed by woman's influence."

When Dr. Peters sat down the customary discussion did not follow. Mrs. Harriet Ostrom ventured to say that she would like to ask Dr. Peters "if as many fine women live to-day as in Napoleon's time." She was promptly stopped by the President, Mrs. Helena Secor Tonjes, who replied, before Dr. Peters had a chance, that the club could consult encyclopedias and settle the matter without troubling distinguished guests.

Miss Alice Henry told what equal suffrage had accomplished in Australia, and Mrs. Clarence Burns made an earnest plea for help in furthering the project of a Mills Hotel for women.

40,000 MILES, PENNILESS.

Superior of Carmelite Order Here on a Tour of Inspection.

The Rev. Pio Mayer, Superior General of the Carmelite Order, who is on a 40,000-mile tour of inspection, which will take him through the United States, Canada, all of South America, Spain, and Holland, arrived here on the Italian liner Sicilia yesterday morning. Father Mayer is traveling without money, according to the strict rule of the order, and his baggage consists of a small handbag, containing a few necessaries.

Until a few years ago Father Mayer, who is an American citizen, lived in Pittsburg. He is a big man about 60 years old. One of the Sicilia's passengers said "he looks more like a Crusader than a Monk." It took the Customs Inspectors just about thirty seconds to pass Father Mayer's baggage.

"I expect that it will be after Christmas before I get back to Rome," he said. "This tour has to be made by the Superior General of the Carmelite Order once every three years. I will remain in the United States and Canada until July and then will sail for South America."

The British Museum Compilation Has 393 Folio Parts.

The sale of Part II. of the library of Wilberforce Eames of the New York Public Library was begun yesterday by the Anderson Auction Company in West Twenty-ninth Street. A special feature was a number of bibliographical books. The most important of these was the British Museum Catalogue of Printed Books, described by the catalogue as "a library in itself and the cornerstone, if not the entire edifice of English bibliographical history." It is a complete set of the 393 folio parts, printed by order of the library's Trustees in London 1881-1900. Each of the 393 parts averages 800 columns. It sold for $550 to "Union." Other rarities sold as follows:

The "first printed catalogue of English books," by Andrew Maunsell, finely bound by F. Bedford in full mottled calf, gilt edges, printed in 1595, $49.

First edition of the "History of Geoffrey of Monmouth," printed by the Paris scholar, Josse B. Ascensius, $50.

PRINCETON GETS $245,577.

Also Named for $300,000 Legacy—Blair Hall to be Finished.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 8.—The sum of $245,577 was announced by the Trustees of Princeton to-day as the amount of gifts to the university since the last meeting of the board. In addition to the gifts officially announced, it became known that the university has been made residuary legatee of the estate of Mrs. J. Thompson Swan, which is said to be worth about $300,000. The legacy will be used by the graduate school.

The Passage property, adjoining the Guyot property on Nassau Street, valued at about $25,000, has been purchased by a group of alumni and turned over to Princeton.

The Trustees announced that De Witt C. Blair of New York, a Trustee of the class of 1856, has agreed to complete Blair Hall to the Halsted observatory, a distance of nearly 100 feet. This will make a series of buildings completely inclosing the western side of the campus for a quarter of a mile.

The resignations of Trustees Charles B. Alexander of New York and Col. John J. McCook of New York were presented and accepted, and it was decided to name the new alumni dormitory now being constructed Patton Hall in honor of ex-President Francis L. Patton.

LENTEN ENTERTAINMENT.

Catherine Lewis's Old Testament Word Scenes at Carnegie Lyceum.

Catherine Lewis gave the first of a series of what she terms "Old Testament Word Scenes" at Carnegie Lyceum yesterday afternoon.

The entertainment, which is to be repeated with changes of programme six afternoons during Lent, consists of tableaux-vivants, with words from the Old Testament, and music appropriate to the text. The subjects yesterday included scenes representing Abraham's Banishment of Hagar, Hagar and Ishmael in the Wilderness, The Sacrifice of Isaac, Rebekah at the Well, and various incidents in the life of Joseph.

Persons inclined to indulge in captious criticism might easily have discovered anachronisms, but for those approaching the entertainment in the proper reverential attitude it was probably satisfying.

Miss Lewis is assisted by Madge and Catherine Robertson, Crissy Joss, Constance F. Arfwedson, and several others. Arthur Wedel officiated at the piano.

CHINESE PRINCE COMING.

Heavily Protected While on His Trip Here from Buffalo.

All of the Chinese secretaries of the Imperial Chinese High Commissioners went to bed at the Fifth Avenue Hotel early last night that they might be up on time to-day to meet Prince Tsai Tse, Watchman of the Graveyard, who is expected to arrive this morning at the Grand Central Station. They received a message from Buffalo last night saying that the Prince had started for New York.

Capt. Chen Ngen-Tao of his Imperial Chinese Majesty's navy, who is also a Secretary to the Imperial Commission, walked down Broadway yesterday afternoon in his silk gown and attracted much attention. He was accompanied by Major Liu En Yuan of the Manchurian Army, and Poo Chun, who is the wit of the Chinese party.

Mr. Poo told Yung Shen, an associate, that the reporters were short card men in disguise, and if they attempted to talk to him to call a policeman. Consequently when one of the newspaper men approached Yung the Chinaman beckoned to a policeman and pointed to the reporter. The policeman asked what was wanted, and Mr. Poo explained his little Chinese joke, then translating it to Yung, who laughed heartily.

Managing Secretary Kee said that the most interesting men in the party that would arrive with the Prince to-day were two bodyguards who are armed to the teeth. They are constantly with the Prince, and watch over him night and day.

THE MUSICAL ART SOCIETY'S CONCERT

A Programme Making Severe Demands Upon the Listeners.

MUCH MODERN MUSIC SUNG

Palestrina, Lasso, and Bach, Followed by Reger, Koessler, Strauss, Loeffler, and Cornelius.

The Musical Art Society gave its second concert of the season last evening before an audience as large and as brilliant as any that have listened to its performances. Its programme made the severest demands upon the tolerance and appreciation of its listeners in the sections devoted to the works of modern composers. Indeed, the event proved that the proportion of the new works of a sort to exact the closest attention to an unfamiliar style was somewhat too great. There was nothing that was not worth a hearing, but there was a good deal that might better have been divided among other programmes.

The concert opened, as has been Mr. Damrosch's custom, with works by the old ecclesiastical masters; one of Palestrina's "Lamentations," a chorus by Orlando Lasso; two spiritual songs by Bach, and a sixteenth century Easter song. The new works were a composition by Max Reger, a setting of the chorale "O Sacred Head Now Wounded"; Hans Koessler's "Hymn to the Night," Richard Strauss's sixteen-part chorus "Jakob, dein Verlorner Sohn," Charles Martin Loeffler's chorus "By the Waters of Babylon," and Cornelius's "Ich will dich lieben." The old music was contrasted in spirit and was beautifully sung.

The figured chorale by Max Reger, whose trio was played Wednesday evening by Prof. Hess, was of special interest as being the work of one of the most violently debated of the younger German composers, one who is going a way quite his own, leading him into little contact with such men as Strauss and Mahler. Reger is a professor of counterpoint by trade and in his music. One of his addictions is to a modern treatment of some of the eighteenth century themes, and some of his partisans have called him the "Bach of Bavaria."

This composition of a figured chorale is an imitation of a form much cultivated by Bach, and the chorale "O Haupt Voll Blut und Wunden" was much beloved by the great cantor. Reger's work is too long for full enjoyment in a concert such as last evening's. He has taken all the stanzas of the hymn and composed contrapuntal figuration around them with remarkable resourcefulness and skill, employing a solo, alto, tenor, violin and oboe, a solo quartet and the organ, while the mixed choir sings.

The melody is given now to one, now to another, or is buried beneath the embroidery of added melody in the most varied manner. He has done this with a remarkable polyphonic art that is old in its form, yet new in its poignant effects. These effects, almost exclusively chromatic, lose something of their point through the extreme length of the work; but they are throughout singularly in keeping with its penetential spirit, and completely renounce all the sensuous glow and color to which modern composers are helped by chromatic harmony. Yet Reger's harmony here is almost altogether diatonic, and indeed falls frequently into that of the ecclesiastical modes. The performance of this difficult work was excellent, the subdued charms producing the right effect for the background of the composer's fancy. Mr. Mannes, Mr. Addimando, and Mr. Dethier played the instrumental obligati skillfully.

The turly stupendous sixteen-part chorus by Strauss offers difficulties that are formidable even to such an accomplished and thoroughly drilled choir as that of the Musical Art Society. It is written for two choirs, one of four, the other of twelve parts, but the writing is entirely independent, the parts are real parts, and they move against each other with entire freedom. The difficulties of intonation and in the maintenance of the pitch are most serious, and the chorus did not at all points overcome them last evening.

There are undoubtedly passages of unmitigated harshness in the work, passages of absolutely unvocal writing in impossible intervals, and of these the most glaring is the subject of the fugato that comes midway in the composition. There is much that is splendidly impressive; but there is much more that was last evening an unmitigated pain. But it was plain that so complex a work could not count for all it is worth on a single hearing.

Mr. Loeffler has traveled far from his accustomed haunts in music in his setting of extracts from the Psalms, but he has brought to this religious subject the same originality and the same finished and fastidious workmanship that he has put into his other music. The chorus is written to give a felicitous expression to the mood of the Psalmist, and the instrumental accompaniment, including the long passage that follows the close of the chorus for two flutes, 'cello, harp, and organ, is an enhancement of it. Messrs. Barreère, Roodenburg, and Schultz, Mme. Rossini, and Mr. Déthier played it.

MARCELLE THE MAD

By SETH COOK COMSTOCK

This is the story of a girl who played at Robin Hood, and pilfered Duke and plundered Earl deep in the leafy wood. She robbed the rich and fed the poor, and scared Sir Charles the Bold, and led her bandits o'er the moor close by the castle's fold. Her only foe he louted low, and yet the maid o'ercame. She swiftly to his side did go, for "lover" was his name.

The business world is measured by months, but the domestic world is measured by weeks. The manufacturer begins anew every month. He pays his bills monthly; he renders bills monthly; he takes his trial balance monthly; he measures his business by the calendar month. The home life, the life of the consumer, is measured by weeks. There is wash-day, ironing day, baking day and shopping day, and the regular weekly rest on Sunday.

The manufacturer who sells goods should cater to the calendar of the consumer who buys them. The weekly announcement fits in logically with the weekly shopping day. This is just as true of the shopping of men as it is of women. A man buys cigars for over Sunday, books to read over Sunday; he is apt to have time about once a week, and always once a week, to write letters to advertisers. Therefore, a week is often enough to reach him, and is not too often.

A weekly publication like THE SATURDAY EVENING POST reaches its readers with arguments for your goods just as often as the reader conceives a natural impulse to buy. When it comes to circulation, that of THE SATURDAY EVENING POST is larger than that of any of the regular monthly magazines.

BOOKS

Miss Primrose

The freshness and tender simplicity of Roy Rolfe Gilson's works have won for him a large circle of readers. Readers of "In the Morning Glow" and "When Love is Young" know the potent charm of this perennially refreshing fiction. Mr. Gilson's portrayal of little Bertram has the same simplicity and charm that have made his former books so popular. The pictures of village life are exquisitely shaded, and Miss Primrose's romance adds a touch of sentiment and humor to a story of delightful originality.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Rise; Call Money Rates, 3½@6 Per Cent.

Break in Foreign Exchange Helps Markets—Hill Stocks Up.

On the financial markets yesterday there occurred an abrupt and rather noteworthy change in sentiment, the pessimism induced by the spectacle of declining prices and by contemplation of the possibilities involved in the Algeciras conference, the negotiations between the mine owners and mine workers, and the unwonted firmness in money rates vanishing almost completely before a wave of optimism, the moving causes of which seem for the most part substantial. Foremost in importance was the sharp break in the foreign exchange market, which followed advices from abroad reporting the Moroccan difficulty as practically settled, and the drawing of security bills incident to the heavy sales abroad of our recent bond creations, the decline bringing demand sterling only half a cent in the pound from the point at which gold can be profitably brought in. Another matter of prime importance was the exceptional weakness of the wheat markets, Wall Street accepting this movement as indicating a highly satisfactory position in the Spring wheat crop, while other developments of cheerful import were the publication of additional favorable railroad earnings statements and the sharp upturn in the Hill shares on the report of a resumption of the negotiations for the lease of the Great Northern's ore lands, this being from a speculative point of view a favorable augury, since the interruption of these negotiations marked the beginning of the declines of recent markets. As a result of all these matters prices, after brief irregularity near the opening, grew strong and rose with much vigor through the day, hesitating only at the close under profit taking and a monetary advance in call money rates to 6 per cent., a rate, however, which was not maintained.

In addition to the Hill stocks, conspicuous features of the trading were the copper shares, which were heavily bought, Union Pacific, St. Paul, Louisville & Nashville, and Atchison, whose advance of 4¾ points was attributed to the reported intention of the Directors to place the stock upon a 5 per cent. basis at the next dividend meeting. Not more than a half dozen issues of any note failed to share in the day's advance, but among these laggards was Reading, which closed at a loss of a full point. The question of the outcome of the negotiations over the anthracite differences accounts in large measure for Reading's recent course in the market, while in the broader sense the matter is still one not to be overlooked in an estimate of the situation, although it must be admitted that, owing to the sounder position of securities as a result of the liquidation and the brighter money outlook, it constitutes almost the sole obstacle to a better market, and even here it may prove that the evil effects of a disturbance have been largely discounted.

As a result of the break in the demand sterling rate yesterday at least one large international banking house was figuring on an importation of gold. A further decline equaling that which has taken place in the last two days would permit such a movement, which might be undertaken by those with special facilities even earlier. A happy conclusion of the negotiations at Algeciras, which was indicated yesterday in private dispatches received by international houses in Wall Street, would, of course, promote such an outcome. So also would any duration of the 6 per cent. rate which was touched by call money yesterday, although it is improbable that such a rate will be maintained in the face of the funds now coming to our banks from the Government and those which within a short time must flow this way from the interior. Time money rates were a shade easier. The markets of Paris, Berlin, and London were all firm, a development to be expected in view of the better Moroccan news.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 8.—The local market, ragged and desultory at first, improved in the afternoon and closed firm. There was heaviness with the early dullness, and some stocks in the later buoyancy did not recover all the morning declines. Reading again led the trading, fluctuating between 64 and 62 9-16, and closing at 63⅝.

The purely local issues did not provide much business, none of the public utility stocks being dealt in until the last hour, when sharp advances were made on small transactions. The close, though firm, was without especial feature.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 8.—Money was in good demand in the market to-day, and supplies were easily obtained. Discounts had an easy tendency.

On the Stock Exchange yesterday's improved tone was maintained and prices closed steady. There was some hesitation at the opening owing to the fall of the French Ministry, but this soon disappeared on the receipt of buying orders from Paris. Consols recovered a slight initial loss on the gold arrivals and cheap money. Home rails hardened on investment purchases prompted by the Board of Trade returns.

Americans opened a shade below parity on the disappointing New York market yesterday, but developed moderate strength and closed quietly steady after some irregularity in the afternoon. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé was the feature.

Foreigners were quiet and firm in sympathy with the tone of the Continental Bourses.

Kaffirs improved in the forenoon on bear covering. Paris buying and public investment purchases declined but slightly in the afternoon owing to fears that the Royal Commission appointed to proceed to South Africa with reference to granting a constitution to the Transvaal is likely to delay the establishment of a new Government there. At the close there was a slight gain for the day.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 103⅞.

Bar silver was steady at 29 11-16d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 17.82; Lisbon, 4.50.

Bullion amounting to £191,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day, and £54,000 was withdrawn for shipment to South America.

LUDLAM, CONTROLLER; HIS FIRM THE AUDITOR

Sees No Harm in His Dual Relation to New York City Railway.

FIGURES OF STOCK DEPOSIT

Account for Less Than Two-thirds of Metropolitan Shares—Why Merger Is Effective.

Charles S. Ludlam, it was pointed out yesterday, besides being controller of the New York City Railway Company, is a member of the firm of Haskins & Sells, the certified public accountants who for years have audited the accounts of the Metropolitan Street Railway system, including those of the New York City Railway Company. This amounts to Mr. Ludlam's being both compiler and auditor of the accounts of the New York City Railway Company.

Mr. Ludlam, at his office, with Haskins & Sells, admitted yesterday afternoon that he was occupying this dual responsibility, but said he saw nothing improper in such an arrangement. Mr. Ludlam became Controller of the New York City Railway Company shortly after he had audited that company's accounts for 1904. He said that a partner of his had similarly become auditor for the Central Railway of Georgia, whose accounts were still audited by Haskins & Sells.

At the close of business on Wednesday there had been issued by the Morton Trust Company certificates of deposit for 274,376 shares of Metropolitan Street Railway stock out of the total issue of 520,000 shares. Of the Metropolitan Securities stock certificates had been issued for 238,806 shares, leaving unconverted 61,194 shares.

Much surprise was caused in Wall Street by the news that the amount of Metropolitan Street Railway stock for which certificates had been issued up to Wednesday represented only about 53 per cent. of the company's stock, whereas the plan for consolidation of the several traction companies already declared operative called for the deposit of at least two-thirds of the street railway company's stock.

The matter was officially explained in two ways. The first was that, while it had been publicly announced that two-thirds of the stock would be required for the success of the plan, the committee in charge had the right, under the terms of the agreement between the committee and Belmont & Co., to lessen the percentage of the stock required to make the plan effective. The other explanation was that the figures given above, which are those reported to the Stock Exchange, represented only the stock for which certificates of deposit had actually been issued, and not necessarily the amount of stock deposited.

As a matter of fact, it was said, the actual deposits exceeded by thousands of shares the certificates issued. Certain deposits of stock had been made with the stipulation that it should not be put into certificates of any deposit until the last day allowed, March 16.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

E. T. Bedford has resigned from the Directorate of the American Ice Company.

Christopher D. Smithers has been elected a Director of the United Railways Company of St. Louis.

Felix Rosen and Max H. Schultze of Otto Heinze & Co. and George B. Halleck were elected yesterday to membership in the Stock Exchange.

The members of the New York Cotton Exchange voted yesterday to suspend business on Good Friday, April 13, and on the following Saturday.

The Directors of the American Agricultural Chemical Company declared yesterday the fourteenth regular semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent. on the company's preferred stock.

Vernon H. Brown, at a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday, was re-elected Commissioner of Pilots. His new term will expire March 8, 1908.

The Grain Committee of the Trunk Line Association at a conference held yesterday with representatives of the grain trade, considered the schedule of railroad grain rates to be put in effect upon the opening of navigation. The result of the conference will probably not be announced for several days.

Poor's Directory of Railway Officials for 1906, its twenty-first year, is off the press. It contains, as usual, the names of the officials of steam, electric, and other roads in operation in the United States, Canada, and Mexico.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 8.—The trading today was fairly broad and active. Cotton Duck 5s continued the feature, and the advance of ¾ over yesterday's rise toned up other favorite issues. United Railways pooled incomes added practically to the advantage gained yesterday, opening ¼ up. Virginia Century 2-3s were inclined to weaken. Trading in the stock list was dull. Maryland Trust warrants rose ½ point. Maryland Trust common opened off ¾, to 120½. Baltimore Trust lost 7½ points. Northern Central eased off ½. Carolina Central 4s declined 1 point.

Private capitalists and corporations not regularly engaged in the business of lending money have appeared in financial circles as competitors with banks and trust companies which have raised their rates to 5½ and 6 per cent. Considerable sums were offered to brokers and stock operators to-day as low as 5 per cent., while on the Exchange money was offered at 5½ per cent.

It is said that out-of-town funds have been attracted to Baltimore by the prevailing high rates, and knowledge of this fact has caused some institutions that were disposed to mark up rates to change their minds. Arrangements are being made by several banks to receive a portion of the $1,000,000 to be deposited here by Secretary Shaw.

The market closed firm. Sales: Bonds, $119,000; shares of stock, 1,015.

STILL TALKING OF RECEIVER.

But C., H. & D. Noteholders May Decide to Postpone All Action.

The Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Noteholders' Protective Committee, of which J. N. Wallace, President of the Central Trust Company, is Chairman, met yesterday, but took no formal steps to protect the interests of the noteholders. The purpose of one or more members to bring forward the question of asking for a joint receiver for the company was again admitted yesterday, after the meeting of the committee had adjourned.

All that was done in the joint receivership matter, it was said, was to submit the question informally to the committee's counsel. It was learned that the advisability of taking any action before the termination of the sixty-day period from March 1, allowed to the company to make good the default on the bonds was discussed. The counsel to the committee is also said to have expressed the opinion that the appointment of a joint receiver at present would be an act of courtesy on the part of the court, and that the bondholders, at present at least, could not ask for it as a matter of right.

The Morgan interests, in addition to supplying funds for the purchase of receiver's certificates which were used to pay the interest on the company's bonds which fell due in January, have since the property was taken back from the Erie Railroad, advanced about $2,000,000 for carrying on improvements previously planned, including payments for a number of new bridges. One argument used with the noteholders at the time the offer was made by J. P. Morgan & Co. to exchange the notes for the 4½ per cent. consolidated mortgage bonds of the road was that the position of those bonds would be greatly strengthened by the $3,000,000 already expended upon the property by the Morgan interests and the $2,000,000 additional which they expected to put into it for further improvements.

The cash bonus offered in this plan for an exchange of the notes for the bonds amounted to 5 per cent. As the notes were placed on the market at 97½, this cash bonus would have reduced the price of the 4½ per cent. bonds to 92½. It was again said yesterday that this offer would have been accepted had the majority of the holders of the notes been private investors instead of institutions. The latter refused the offer, principally for the reason that they did not wish to exchange a short-time note for a long-time bond.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Japanese Hand Warmers Pay High Duty—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Marion De Vries, the Board of United States General Appraisers denied yesterday claims made by W. A. Montzer of Chicago regarding the customs classification of so-called Japanese hand warmers and slippers. Duty was assessed on the hand warmers at the rate of 45 per cent. ad valorem under the provision in the Dingley tariff law for "manufactures of metal." The slippers were returned for duty at 50 per cent., and were alleged to be dutiable at lower rates.

Judge Somerville wrote a decision for the board, overruling a claim filed by John Wanamaker of Philadelphia. Mr. Wanamaker objected to the high rate of duty levied on importations of rhinestone buttons, but, as he failed to make the correct claim, the protest was overruled.

Other importers' claims denied were filed by R. F. Downing & Co., James G. Johnson & Co., M. Doob, Sons & Co. and others, Jules & Hugo Rosenberg, George Riggs & Co., the R. Hoehn Company and others of New York, A. B. Fiedler & Sons and the Chicago Mercantile Company of Chicago.

The board sustained protests filed by A. Steinhardt & Brother, Mills & Gibb, Overton & Co., George Riggs & Co. of New York, and Marshall Field & Co. of Chicago.

Claims by Adolph Strauss & Co., Bamberger, Stern & Co., and Goldberg & Co. of New York were partially sustained.

SHOWS STEEL TRUST'S GRIP.

Dr. Mussey of Bryn Mawr Says It Controls the Ore Supply.

Dr. Henry Raymond Mussey of Bryn Mawr, in an address on "The Steel Corporation and Lake Superior Mines" before the students of the New York University School of Commerce, Accounts, and Finance on Thursday night, predicted that the Steel Corporation within a few years would control absolutely the steel and pig iron output of the country. The result is to be achieved, according to Dr. Mussey, not through buying up competitive plants, but by utilizing its firm grasp on all the known sources of ore supply.

"The Steel Trust at present," said the speaker, "lays down its Old Range iron ore in Pittsburg at a cost of about $2.65 a ton, and its Mesaba iron ore at about $2.30, as against a cost of probably $3.70 and $3.30, respectively, to its ablest competitor, the Jones & Laughlin Company. With such an advantage, added to economical processes of manufacture, the Steel Corporation could make prices, if it chose, that would wipe out most rivals. In fact, the only thing that saves the smaller companies now is the necessity resting on the trust to maintain dividend rates, which prevents its cutting prices even temporarily."

The speaker intimated that a more thorough study of its ownership of ore lands would convince persons of the stable basis on which the Steel Corporation was founded.

BUYING IN ORE LANDS.

U. S. Steel Has Got Many Small Tracts with Enormous Reserves.

The purchase of ore lands made by the United States Steel Corporation in the last year in various small tracts have, it was officially learned yesterday, added very largely to the ore reserves of the company. E. H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of Directors, said yesterday that the ore added in this way and by the further development of the lands previously held by the company, amounts to several hundred million tons. The ore reserves held by the Steel Corporation a year ago amounted to about 800,000,000 tons, so that the additions during the past year brings the total ore reserves of the company close to 1,200,000,000 tons.

The Steel Corporation has pursued the policy of adding constantly to its ore land holdings.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 8.—Call funds are a trifle easier, but otherwise the local money market is unchanged. The usual table of rates, &c., follows:

Clearing House loans, 6 per cent.; New York funds, 16 2-3c discount; clearings, $29,964,399; balances, $2,284,566; Sub-Treasury debit, $415,673.

Opening prices in the copper shares today showed but slight changes from Wednesday's closing figures. After the opening a few realizing orders came in and some reaction was seen, but toward noon commission houses appeared as buyers and advances were seen throughout the list. Nevada Granby and Bingham were particular features of strength, each recording a substantial gain. There was considerably activity in Washington Mining, the price advancing to 1½ on orders apparently emanating from New York. Closing was strong, with stocks in good demand and but few offerings in sight.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

For several months the Standard Oil building at 26 Broadway has been haunted by process servers. They are still there, sitting on the stairways, lounging in the corridors, or lurking at the main entrances, and the attendants have come to know them personally. At first they were an insuferable nuisance, but they could not be shaken off, and now they are to the Standard Oil institution as an affliction to the body which after long suffering the victim learns to endure cheerfully, and for which in the end he conceives a certain attachment. Life would be empty and vapid without it. Each process server is identified with the object of his patient search. This one wants Mr. So-and-So, and that one Mr. So-and-So, and a third is supposed to be watching for two Messrs. So-and-So, etc. Since this vigil began officials of the company have absented themselves from business as never before in its history. The assistant heads of departments have had their hands full performing the functions of their chiefs. There are only a few high Standard Oil officials in evidence. Mr. Rogers is the most prominent of those remaining, and he was served. The process servers really have very little to show for their industry, more than to have incommoded the official machinery.

***

It is reported that the Northern Pacific's earnings for this fiscal year promise to run $10,000,000 beyond those for the preceding twelve months.

***

"The most significant thing that I can tell you about the market," said the active head of a large Western wire house yesterday, "is that while I was away the stocks in which our people had been trading furiously declined anywhere from 10 to 40 points, and when I got back I found that our loans had been cut in two. The business of this house is a fair indication of what is going on generally. We have clients all over the country. I have made inquiries, however, and I find that our experience is duplicated from one end of the Street to the other. They tell me that some of the so-called pool houses are loaded up with stocks, but the houses whose business is largely of outside origin have scaled down their lines 30 to 40 per cent., and their loans have been reduced accordingly. I believe from this that the market is pretty well sold out. I believe, also, that there is a large short interest, especially in a few stocks, like Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific. I forgot to say that when I went away everybody you talked to was bullish; now, with prices down, everybody seems to be bearish. I think now, after this shake-out, that the market only needs some one thing, like the Great Northern's ore deal, to turn it completely around. The announcement that Mr. Hill had signed the papers in the ore deal could easily turn the market, in my opinion. It would give people something tangible to talk about on the bull side."

***

The strength of the Hill stocks was a very prominent feature of yesterday's market.

***

Operators have become much more discriminating in their choice of stocks, going so far in some cases as to hold positions on both sides of the market in different securities, and the result is a greater confusion of ideas respecting the market as a whole than has existed for a long time. Thus yesterday a house which was very active on the long side of Union Pacific and Atchison was reported to be pounding Reading besides disseminating bearish information on one or two other issues, notably American Smelting. There is nothing really inconsistent in this, but it leads to highly conflicting stories as to the attitude of this operator or that on the general situation. It is not uncommon to find an active speculator who is very bullish on a few stocks, like Union Pacific, say, or Pennsylvania, and extremely bearish on others. Then, in many cases, men who are hung up with stocks which they can't sell, either because they are bound by pool agreements or because the market has flattened out under them, have been selling other stocks short as a hedge against their commitments on the long side. There are instances in almost every large office of clients having straddled the market in this manner. Hedging by going short of one thing against a long interest in another thing is generally a poor form of insurance. The man who does it may be whipsawed in many different ways. The thing that he is long of may go down more than the thing he has sold short; or both may decline together and the thing he is short of may rally sharply while the other stays down, and, in any case, he is afraid to take his profits on the short side lest he lose his insurance. In the bear market of 1903 men sacrificed good stocks, for which there was a market, to protect worse stuff which they could hardly sell at all. A good deal of this, however, was done out of sheer necessity. In a bad market it is always possible to sell good securities, while there may be no demand whatever for the things that one would prefer to sell.

***

There is probably no broker of much experience who has not encountered the man who thinks he can beat the market by buying and selling the same stock at one time and at one price. It is useless to explain to this man that he is not in the market at all when he simultaneously buys and sells a stock at one price. He is simply mad, and cannot be reasoned with. He does not turn up often, but he has been turning up at long intervals ever since the oldest broker can remember, and he will doubtless continue to be heard from so long as Wall Street endures. He made his latest appearance only this week, and the broker who patiently spent an hour trying to convince him that he was crazy, thought the incident would make a readable paragraph.

***

Beyond the fact that it has recently been altogether too high, there would seem to be no reason why Reading should be made the butt of all the bearish sentiment created by the probability of a coal strike and the clamor for an investigation of coaler railroads. While Reading was advancing in accordance with the whims and humors of those who controlled the speculative supply of stock, reasoning persons inquired why other coaler stocks, notably Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio, did not rise in sympathy with its enormous appreciation in value. It might now be asked why Reading alone of the coaler stocks is made the object of a bear campaign based ostensibly on fears of a coal strike and the possibility of adverse legislation. Some other coalers, notably Norfolk and Western, were very strong yesterday.

***

The attack upon Reading was renewed immediately after the opening yesterday, and before midday the stock had been depressed to 125, the lowest price at which it has yet sold on this decline from 164. Some persons believed that speculators were hammering Reading in order to facilitate purchases of other stocks, especially Union Pacific and Atchison. The buying of Reading on the way to 125 was as good as the selling, if not better. A house that did some of the heaviest selling is remembered to have been bearish on the stock at 95. It closed yesterday at a recovery of 2 points from the lowest, showing a net decline of 1 per cent. The general market was disposed to disregard its weakness. Its initial break in the first hour caused the other market to sell off perhaps ½ per cent. all around, but after that Reading's movements were totally ignored. The stock has been under pressure for some time. Traders have been very bearish on it. Brokers declare that there has accumulated a large short interest, which is doubtless true.

***

Consolidated Gas was unaffected by the news from Albany, probably because it had already had its decline. It had a maximum advance yesterday of more than 2 points, and closed at a gain of 1¼ per cent.

***

Bull tips on Union Pacific were widely circulated. The stock gave a satisfactory account of itself, advancing 1½ per cent., to 152¼, but there seemed to be a good supply of it around 152. In the last ten minutes the transactions at 151⅞ became very heavy. The closing quotation, however, was 152.

***

The sensational rise in Atchison common, amounting to 5 points, was preceded by free tips and accompanied by rumors of an increase of the dividend rate to 5 per cent. The rumors have been heard many times before. Unless there is something definite to support the advance it may be feared that the movement was carried a little too far. An advance of 5 points in a stock like Atchison, which recently has been rather ponderous in its movements, makes it somewhat too conspicuous, unless, of course, there is a good reason for it. No convincing reason for its abrupt rise was given during the hours of Stock Exchange business. The advance was accomplished on less than 60,000 shares of trading, which was rather surprising. There was an active speculation in the stock last January, on the advance to 96⅞. It flattened out rather abruptly, even before the general market turned.

MORE TREASURY DEPOSITS.

New York Banks Now Have $2,600,000 of $3,000,000 Allotted.

Further sums were paid out by the Sub-Treasury yesterday on account of special deposits of Government funds now being made in National banks. Yesterday's payments brought the total distributed to New York banks up to about $2,600,000, or within $400,000 of the total amount allotted to New York City banks out of the special deposits of $10,000,000. Another transfer of funds amounting to $150,000 was made yesterday from San Francisco to New York, increasing the local supply of funds by that amount.

There was discussion in Wall Street yesterday about the possibility of the supply of funds in this market being increased by imports of gold from Europe. Foreign exchange rates broke sharply, the price of demand sterling declining to 4.8315, a decline of about 30 points from the previous day's price. It was reported that the downward movement in exchange was due to heavy selling of finance bills, and foreshadowed a movement of gold in this direction. Most of the sterling exchange, however, it was learned after the close of the market, represented bills drawn against securities which are being shipped to Europe. One of the leading international banking houses said that very few finance bills had been drawn that day, and that it was improbable that the downward movement in exchange would be carried to a point making possible an import of gold.

It was pointed out that demand sterling would have to decline at least 50 points more before any gold could be brought to New York from Europe, and then it could only be done under the condition that the price of bar gold in London remained at or below the present price of 77s. 10d. It is more than likely, it is said, that the near approach of an export movement of gold to New York would lead to an advance in the London price of bar gold.

The shipments of American securities now being made to Europe, it was said, represented partly fresh purchases of bonds by Europe, and partly securities which were purchased some time ago but which had been held here for a period agreed on.

Trolley experts representing J. P. Morgan & Co. began an investigation yesterday of the physical condition of the trolley interests of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey preparatory to the taking over of a one-third interest in the concern. It is probable that the transfer will be accomplished within two weeks.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Coppers Only Active Feature of the Curb.

United Copper Back to 64—Nevada Consolidated Heavily Traded in.

The mining shares practically monopolized what little activity developed on the curb yesterday, industrials selling less than 12,000 shares. United Copper closed ½ point over Wednesday's last, at 64, and was steadier during the trading than has been its accustomed practice. Twelve thousand four hundred shares sold between 62¾ and 64⅜. Gains were made generally throughout the mining list. Nevada Consolidated was markedly active, though the gain on the day's trading of 21,000 shares was only ¼ point at the close, 17⅛. Mackay Companies lost ½ point on sales of 800. International Mercantile Marine preferred closed ⅛ point up, at 32½, after sales of 1,000.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 8.—A feature of the local trading to-day was the sale of some odd lots of Calumet and Chicago Canal and Dock shares. Ever since the land deal with the Iroquois Iron Company the stock has been dull. The last previous sale was at 64. There was an early sale to-day at 61½, but the stock at once rallied to 63. It has been assumed that dividends will be paid on the stock, but there are no developments as yet in sight this side of the annual meeting in April.

Other stocks were rather dull. Swift's changed hands around recently prevailing levels. Carbon sold at 95. Can was steady. Ogden Gas bonds went again at 99. In the afternoon Diamond Match sold up to 140 on odd lot trades. Can preferred was firm. Brick improved fractionally. Biscuit held easy.

Money, 5@6 per cent.; New York exchange, 20@15c discount. The list:

American Radiator Co's Second Year.

The annual report of the American Radiator Company for 1905 shows total net profits more than double the dividends on common and preferred stock. The profits are the largest in the company's history. The balance sheet shows quick assets of $4,166,447, compared with $3,403,294 for 1904, and net profits of $833,917, compared with $703,930. Frank M. Peters of Chicago was elected to the Directorate.

President for Clean Paper Money.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Clean paper money was the subject of a hearing before the House Committee on Banking and Currency to-day. Representative Gaines said the high charges of express companies for shipping paper money prevented banks from sending dirty money to the United States Treasury for reissuance. He urged that his bill for the shipment of dirty money by mail, without cost to the shipper, be passed. Mr. Gaines said President Roosevelt was anxious to have a measure passed to keep the Government's paper money clean.

MORE GOLD-SILVER STOCK.

Stockholders Will Meet to Discuss an Issue of Preferred.

The stockholders of the Greene Gold-Silver Company have been called to a special meeting for March 26 to pass on an issue of preferred stock the amount of which has not yet been determined. The increased capitalization will go into the treasury to furnish funds for the acquisition of additional properties and plants. In his circular to the stockholders Col. Greene makes this explanation of the necessity for the issuance of preferred stock.

"A large amount of stock, which was paid for different mining property at the incorporation of the company, has been coming into the market with the effect of depressing the curb price, and it may therefore be necessary to make a small issue of 8 per cent. cumulative preferred stock which can be sold for treasury purposes at par without coming into competition with the stock now outstanding."

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—Although the wheat market declined to a new low record yesterday, there was so much short stuff covered on the break that prices after midday reflected a considerably betteer tone, and at the close were partly ¼c net higher. Export business reported by the trade here at the close was 18 loads, all points. The foreign markets were all lower, Liverpool closing ⅜@½d down and Paris 5@10 points down. At Berlin the market broke ¾@1 mark and at Budapest 2 points. Statistics favored the bears again, seaboard clearances being light and interior movement fairly liberal, especially at the Northwest. The cash market in New York closed steady, as follows: No. 2 red, 84¼c, elevator, and 86c, free on board afloat, nominal; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 86½c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—From the start corn displayed a very firm undertone and at the close in New York was ¼@⅜c net higher. There was little to explain the upturn aside from the fact that receipts continued light, shorts were nervous, clearances reached 614,000 bushels, and the outlook was for only 160,000 bushels from the Argentine on Friday, compared with 260,000 bushels the week previous. Liverpool was ⅛@¼d net lower. Only 510,000 bushels were received at Western points, compared with 744,000 bushels last year, the roads being in such condition that farmers are unable to market their grain. Export sales amounted to 5 loads. No. 2 corn closed 50c. elevator, and 48¼c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 49¼c, and No. 2 yellow, 48¼c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market was quiet but showed a steadier tone, and recovered the most of the loss of the previous day. Sales for the day were estimated at only 125,000 bales, and closing prices were 1@6 points net higher. The opening was steady at a decline of 3@6 points, and the loss was soon increased to a matter of 7 points on the active months under liquidation and some bear pressure, which was encouraged by lower Liverpool cables. The market rallied to about the closing prices of the previous day in the late forenoon, and held steady to firm later, with the close at the best point of the day, and about 11@12 points up from the lowest on the active months. Southern spot markets were ⅛c lower to 1-16c higher, generally unchanged. Late advices from New Orleans reported a good spot demand there, and spot sales were officially reported locally of 1,000 bales for consumption, with talk of more business privately, and not to be officially reported until taken from the local stock.

"TEN DAYS' PAY; BANG," RULES WALDO AT TRIALS

Severity and Celerity Impress Delinquent Policemen.

EXPLANATIONS CUT SHORT

Sixty-seven Cases Are Disposed Of, Clearing the Docket, and Few Escape Penalties.

First Deputy Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo made his first appearance as a trial judge at Police Headquarters yesterday morning, and caused consternation by the heavy penalties he imposed on offenders brought before him. Even the complaining superior officers, who swore to the charges against the men, seemed startled, and, as the trials were hurried through, were prone to say that they "thought," instead of "knew." Mr. Waldo rushed things, ruling promptly and listening to no expostulations or belated explanations, but shutting off further talk with a rap of his gavel.

Sixty-seven cases were disposed of in two hours and a half, the docket being cleared. Rarely have there been as many big policemen gathered in the trial room waiting their turn. Their apprehension grew with the rulings and penalties rapidly following ingenious explanations that failed. The six-footers bit at their fingernails, or mopped their foreheads. One brawny fellow, who seemed to have a chill, remarked that there would be no chance of promotion for him, as he already had a sentence of five days' pay. The additional ten, which was the rule of the day, would make him ineligible for advancement, and he might as well resign and go to work as a 'longshoreman.

Sergt. John L. Maher of the Twentieth Precinct was charged with unduly detaining a man giving the name of Singer, and with failure to return a diamond ring belonging to him. The first charge was dismissed, and the Sergeant's explanation that the ring had been lost from a tray was disregarded. He was held guilty of allowing property in his custody to be stolen. Sentence was reserved.

"I desire to—"

Bang! sounded the gavel.

Patrolman John F. Ryan of the Twelfth Precinct was charged with being absent from duty one hour and ten minutes. He said that he was guilty, with an explanation. This was that he had been taken ill and went home to get some medicine. When he got there he found an order for him to report at midnight to Police Surgeon Brown. When he had done so the hour and ten minutes had elapsed. Ryan was fined ten days' pay for being off post and another day for failure to report to the doctor on time. He looked appealingly at his judge and started to speak when the gavel fell and Ryan left. By this time the others waiting for trial were beginning to show signs of nervousness which increased as the trials went on.

One of the few explanations that saved the accused was that of Patrolman Edward Galvin of the Thirty-third Precinct, charged by Capt. Cottrell with being off post for seventeen minutes. He said that it took him forty minutes to patrol his beat, a part of it being at the Viaduct and Central Bridge, where there is a stationary car. He must have been on the other side of the car when the Captain rode by and so did not see him.

"What do you think of that, Captain?" asked the Deputy Commissioner.

"Possible, but not probable."

"I have my suspicions of your story, but will give you the benefit of the doubt. Discharged," said Mr. Waldo, and there was a sigh of relief from the others in the trial room.

"Making sarcastic, vulgar, and insulting remarks" to his fellows was the charge against Patrolman Elsworth Doty of the Thirty-eighth Precinct. To one of these he was alleged to have said: "I'll make a Sergeant of you, you dog!" and also: "I'll take the hide off you!" Doty denied the first and acknowledged that he had made the second remark. He was fined five days' day.

Because he turned over in bed for an extra nap and arrived at the station house forty minutes late, John Pryor of the Twenty-ninth Precinct was fined ten days' pay.

"Costliest sleep I ever had," muttered Pryor as he left the room.

It continued to be "ten days" and a bang of the gavel for most of the two hours and a half.

TO STOP FERRY LINES IF CITY DOESN'T BUY

Union Company Says It Will Cease Operation in May.

SIX BUSY ROUTES AFFECTED

Mayor and Controller Think Municipality May Take Property at a Fair Price—$3,250,000 Wanted.

As a further move to compel the city to take over more ferry lines, the Union Ferry Company served notice on the Sinking Fund Commission yesterday that the ferry service at Wall, Hamilton, South, Fulton, and Catharine Streets would be discontinued when the present franchise extensions expire, in May, or as soon afterward as the rapid transit tunnel is completed under the East River.

While no price is set, it was said by one of the attorneys for the interests affected that the company expects the city to pay approximately $3,250,000 for the property. At the present time the company is paying the interest on its bonds and 2 per cent. on its stock. When the subway under the river is completed, it is expected that the ferries will no longer return dividends. The city officials realize that the ferry service would be costly to the city, just as the Staten Island ferry has proved, but both Mayor McClellan and Controller Metz are of the opinion that the ferries are needed for connecting links between Manhattan and Brooklyn. Therefore it is likely that some action will be taken by the city toward taking over the lines at a fair price.

President Julian D. Fairchild of the ferry company, accompanied by ex-Controller Edward M. Grout as counsel, presented his letter in person to the commission, which received it and ordered it placed on file. As Controller, Mr. Grout sent a bill to Albany to permit the city to acquire ferry properties. It was lost on the last day of the last session of the Legislature.

In his communication to the commission yesterday, President Fairchild admits that the ferries no longer are profitable, and, in order that the city may suffer no inconvenience, it is suggested that the city go to the Legislature for authority to take over the systems if so desired. The last franchise from the city expired a year ago, since which time the company has been operating on an agreement for a year only, and this expires in May.

President Fairchild says that if no arrangement is made by the city to take over the lines the company "may be obliged to dispose of its property, including its real estate at Atlantic and Hamilton Avenues, Brooklyn, and go into voluntary liquidation." Last year the company carried a daily average of 85,930 passengers, excluding Sundays and holidays, besides about 5,700 trucks, for which the new tunnel will not be available.

"Aside from the questions of public convenience," says Mr. Fairchild in his letter, "the discontinuance of these ferries would undoubtedly have a substantial and depreciating effect on the values of the water front and neighboring property of both Manhattan and Brooklyn. Tunnels will not accommodate vehicular traffic. The first bridge is already carrying all that it can, and neither it nor the new bridges under construction can accommodate the sections accommodated by the ferries.

"There is no question of buying up the franchise since the franchise or lease of the Union Ferry Company will have expired, but even to buy the tangible property used in and necessary for the operation of such ferries will require an enabling act from the Legislature, and if such is not obtained at the present session of the Legislature there will be no alternative presented and no result possible except the closing of the ferries when their operation becomes impossible by the present corporation."

Mayor McClellan, when questioned about the proposal, took the view that the city might be compelled to take over the properties in order to keep the service going.

"I am opposed to anything of the sort except as a last resort," he said.

"Does it look as though this is the city's 'last resort'?" was asked.

"It looks that way," he replied. The Mayor also said that, under the Cooper bill, now pending in the Legislature, the city would have ample power to take over ferry lines.

Controller Metz said yesterday the city would have to face the problem squarely.

"We must have ferries," he said, "there is no doubt about that. We have got to get goods from one part of the city to another, and you cannot make a man drive a truck five miles out of his way to get to a bridge. It does not follow that the city will have to take over the Union lines, but it must have some ferry communication between boroughs."

HE WAS TOO SICK TO WORK.

Shoveler, Whose Family Needed Money, Kept on Until He Died.

"Man, you're too sick to work; go home," said the foreman in charge of the excavating at Depew Place and Forty-fourth Street to Mathew McDermott, a shoveler, yesterday morning.

"Yes, I'm sick," replied McDermott, "but my wife's sicker than I, and we've got a new baby, and I must earn the bread and butter for the family, sick or well."

An hour later McDermott dropped his shovel and fell dead. The body was removed to the East Fifty-first Street Police Station, and the police started out to find where McDermott lived.

Meningitis, Not Candy Poisoning.

Coroner's Phyisican Schultz announced yesterday that ten-year-old Christina Klewin of 330 East Thirty-second Street, who died on Tuesday of what was supposed to be candy poisoning, was a victim of spinal meningitis. Lena Spiegel of 322 East Twenty-second Street, a friend of Christina Klewin, is recovering from the disease.

MYER FOSTER ENDS HIS LIFE.

Ill-Health Supposed to Have Caused Realty Owner's Suicide.

Myer Foster, a cigar manufacturer and real estate owner, and also a Director of the Mechanics and Traders' Bank, was found dead on Wednesday afternoon in one of the many Summer cottages owned by him at Far Rockaway. Death was due to asphyxiation and circumstances made it apparent that it was a case of suicide.

Mr. Foster, who was head of the firm of M. Foster & Co., of 1,061 Third Avenue, Manhattan, left the Ashton Hotel, 1,312 Madison Avenue, where he lived, on Tuesday. He went to Far Rockaway and asked his real estate agent, Andrew McTigue, for the keys of Deer Hill Cottage. Later he asked the gas company to turn on the gas, and purchased a rubber tube which he said he intended to use for a heating stove. On Tuesday evening he dined with some friends and played cards with them till early Wednesday morning. On Wednesday, when he did not return to Manhattan, one of his sons telephoned McTigue, who sent William F. Chave, an employe, to Deer Hill Cottage. Chave found Mr. Foster dead with the rubber tube in his mouth and the gas full on. A piece of paper inside the case of a heavy gold watch bore the name "Hallett," from which it was judged that he wished that article to go to his youngest son. There was also a memorandum showing that Foster was worth about $500,000.

Foster was 61 years old. He leaves a widow, four sons and six daughters. Failing health and [illegible] are believed to have caused the suicide.

SUED FOR A WOMAN'S GOWNS.

G. B. Hulme Called Her Wife, Paquin Says—Bill Is $1,327.

George B. Hulme, President of the Insurers' Agency Company, at 76 William Street, who is on a Mediterranean trip, according to his lawyer, is being sued in the City Court by Paquin, the Paris dressmaker, for $1,327.23. The bill is for gowns delivered to "a certain person known as Margaret L. Carter, who is now said to be known as Margaret Scherer, but at the time of the sale of the goods represented herself to be the wife of the defendant, and that the defendant represented her to the plaintiff as his wife."

The plaintiff's attorney, Arthur L. Fullman, seeks to examine the defendant to find out where the woman is, and whether or not she is Hulme's wife. Lynch & Lynch, counsel for the defendant, opposed the application, and declared that the woman never was Hulme's wife. Justice Green reserved decision.

15 AMERICANS, 600 MOROS SLAIN IN 2 DAYS' FIGHT

Mountain Is Stormed—Artillery Lifted Up Cliffs.

REBEL FORCE IS WIPED OUT

Six American Officers and 63 Men Wounded—Native Constabulary Also Suffers Severely.

MANILA, March 9.—Fifteen Americans, three members of the native constabulary, and 600 Moros were killed in a battle near the City of Jolo, which lasted from Tuesday afternoon until yesterday morning. Four American army officers, one naval officer, one officer of constabulary, thirty-two enlisted men of the army, thirty-one members of the naval contingent, and thirteen members of the native constabulary were wounded.

The battle was fought on a high mountain near Jolo, capital of the Sulu Islands. The mountain is called Dajo. It is a lava cone 2,100 feet high, with a crater at its summit. The Moros occupied the crater and the approaches to it. The latter, which are extremely steep, were well fortified. The American troops stormed these approaches, the artillery being lifted by block and tackle to the lip of the crater.

The attack on Mount Dajo was a notable one. Major Gen. Wood directed Col. Joseph W. Duncan to attack the Moros in the crater and capture or kill them. This was accomplished after repeated demands to surrender. It is believed that no prisoners were taken.

The attack was made under the most hazardous circumstances. Starting early in the afternoon of March 6, the assailants climbed for a distance of 2,100 feet up a lava cone, the thickly wooded ridges of which furnished the only foothold. The last 500 feet of the ascent was at an average angle of sixty degrees, and the last fifty feet were almost perpendicular.

At the top were 600 fanatical Moros armed with rifles and knives and supported by native artillery. The fortified crater was almost invisible and seemingly inaccessible. At the word of command the troops rushed into the crater, and a hand-to-hand encounter followed.

Major Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the Division of the Philippines, reports as follows from Jolo:

"A severe action between troops, a naval detachment, and constabulary and hostile Moros has taken place at Mount Dajo, near Jolo. The engagement opened during the afternoon of March 6 and ended in the morning of March 8.

"The action involved the capture of Mount Dajo, a lava cone 2,100 feet high, with a crater at its summit and extremely steep. The last 400 feet were at an angle of 60 degrees, and there were fifty perpendicular ridges covered with a growth of timber and strongly fortified and defended by an invisible force of Moros.

"The army casualties were fifteen enlisted men killed, four commissioned officers wounded, and thirty-two enlisted men wounded.

"The naval casualties numbered thirty-two. Ensign H. D. Cooke, Jr., commanding the Pampanga, was severely wounded, and Coxswain Gilmore was severely wounded in the elbow.

"The constabulary casualties were Capt. John R. White, wounded in the thigh severely; three enlisted men killed, and thirteen wounded.

"Capt. Tyree R. Rivers sustained a slight flesh wound in the thigh; Lieut. Gordon was slightly wounded in the right hand; Lieut. Wylie T. Conway of the Sixth Infantry was slightly wounded in the left eye. All the wounded are doing well.

"Col. Joseph W. Duncan of the Sixth Infantry directed the operations. All the defenders of the Moro stronghold were killed. Six hundred bodies were found on the field.

"The action resulted in the extinction of a band of outlaws who, recognizing no chief, had been raiding friendly Moros and who, owing to their defiance of the American authorities, had stirred up a dangerous condition of affairs.

"The artillery was lifted by block and tackle a distance of 300 feet into a position on the lip of the crater.

"Brig. Gen. Bliss and myself were present throughout the action.

"The attacking columns were commanded by Major Omar Bundy, Capt. K. P. Lawton, Capt. Rivers, Capt. L. M. Koehler, Capt. McGlachern, and Lieut. Johnston.

"The officers and men engaged highly commend the Moro constabulary, who did excellent work, their casualties numbering seventeen out of the force of forty-four engaged.

"It is impossible to conceive a stronger natural position than that attacked."

Another account of the fight states that 600 outlaw Moros were killed in the crater of the precipitous volcano five miles from Jolo. The Americans lost eighteen killed and fifty-two men mounded, including Capt. Rivers of the Fourth Cavalry, Lieut. Agnew of the Sixth Infantry, Lieut. Gordon Johnston of the Signal Corps, Ensign Cooke, commanding the Pampanga, and Capt. White of the constabulary.

The attack was under the immediate command of Col. Duncan. The fighting lasted two days among the lava ridges, which had been strongly fortified by the Moros. Artillery had to be hoisted by means of ropes up the last 500 feet at an angle of sixty degrees.

Gen. Wood highly commends the work of the troops.

A complete list of casualties has not yet been made up, but the company commanders are working on it.

KILLED IN FLYING AUTO.

Police Sergeant's Wife Dead, Three Children Hurt.

While racing in Jerome Avenue yesterday afternoon an automobile, in which were Police Sergt. Craig of the West 100th Street Station, his wife, three children, and a chauffeur, struck an iron trolley wire pole. The machine was wrecked, throwing the occupants out against the curb.

Mrs. Craig was fatally injured and died in Fordham Hospital last night. The children, the Sergeant, and the chauffeur were badly cut and bruised. Craig collapsed when informed of his wife's death and had to be kept at the hospital.

Sergt. Craig, who lives at 6 West 102d Street, having an afternoon off yesterday, planned to surprise his wife by inviting her and their three children, Lloyd, 11 years old; Harold, 8, and Jeanette, 6, to take an automobile trip to the Bronx Zoölogical Gardens. The automobile was hired from a garage in West 100th Street, with Alexander Cummings as chauffeur.

According to several witnesses, Cummings, when on Jerome Avenue, picked out a large touring car, said to be a Welsh machine, in which there were four men, and began to race. Sergt. Craig, thinking the pace a little too fast for safety, had just cautioned the chauffeur and advised him to slow up a bit, when a vendor's wagon started to cross Jerome Avenue at 172d Street directly in front of them.

The trolley poles are in the middle of the avenue, with the tracks on either side. Cummings, to avoid running down the wagon, swerved suddenly toward the tracks. The automobile with which it is alleged he was racing was only a few feet behind him. Before this much larger machine could turn out its front wheels hit the rear of Cummings's machine, swinging it so that it crashed full speed into one of the poles.

The force of the collision threw the Craig party headlong, while the other machine continued on its way as though nothing had happened.

Policeman McHenry of the Tremont Station and several citizens who were near rushed to the aid of the injured, while others started after the Welsh machine, shouting for it to stop. Their cries were unheeded.

Mrs. Craig was picked up unconscious and carried into the Belmont Hotel. Hurry calls were sent to Fordham and Lebanon Hospitals. The children were soon revived, but Mrs. Craig failed to show the slightest signs of life, and it was thought she had expired.

Dr. Taft of Fordham Hospital found the woman suffering from a bad fracture of the skull and internal injuries. He gave little hope for her, and, placing her in the ambulance, made a record-breaking trip to the hospital.

At the station Cummings denied that he was racing with anybody. The accident, he said, was caused by the second automobile striking his rear wheels.

BEDFORD OUT OF ICE TRUST.

Doesn't Believe in Raising Prices Because of a Crop Shortage.

E. T. Bedford, a Director of the Standard Oil Company, who has been active in the affairs of the American Ice Company for several years, gave his reasons yesterday for retirement from the Directorate of the ice company. He said he found his time so fully occupied by other business, especially by the affairs of the reorganized "glucose trust," the Corn Products Refining Company, that he had none left over for the "ice trust." It has been reported in Wall Street that Mr. Bedford's resignation had followed a serious disagreement with his fellow-Directors over the company's intention to raise the price of ice this season.

Mr. Bedford, at his office in the Standard Oil Building, 26 Broadway, wouldn't say anything about the reported disagreement in the ice company Directorate. He was told that he had been credited with championing the cause of humanity in the ice trust.

"We all work on those principles down here," said Mr. Bedford. "Some people think that because there is an ice famine there ought to be a money plenty. I think that an ice famine ought to be as much of a calamity to the company as to the public. I don't think that the shortage of ice ought to be made the excuse for increasing dividends. The company can not, will not, and should not rightly increase its earnings by selling less ice. Prosperity ought to depend on deserts and not on accidents of nature."

Mr. Bedford was largely responsible, as a Director of the American Ice Company, for the change in policy and management consequent on the retirement of the Morse-Van Wyck interests.

INSPECTOR STRANGELY HURT.

Traveled with Concussion of the Brain—Says Some One Hit Him.

Suffering from concussion of the brain, William Bennett, an Inspector of the Metropolitan Street Railway, managed last night to get into a Subway train at Times Square, leave it at Fiftieth Street, reach the surface, and collapse at the corner of Fiftieth Street and Seventh Avenue. How he was hurt no one knows. A detective of the West Forty-seventh Street Station is at work on the case.

Bennett had two intervals of consciousness last night. In one of these he cried: "Cab going west; cab going north!" Then he relapsed into unconsciousness. After a while he said that some one had hit him on the back of the head.

He was taken to Roosevelt Hospital. His condition is serious. He is married, and lives at 970 East 138th Street.

PINOCHLE FATIGUED SCHWAB.

His Car Entered and Left St. Louis While He Slumbered.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, March 9.—The private car Loretto, owned by Charles M. Schwab, rolled into Union Station at 7 o'clock this morning. It started off again an hour and five minutes later. Mr. Schwab, however, was so fatigued from pinochle playing with his friends last night that he did not wake up to discuss his reported serious illness in the West.

As eloquent proof of the fact that Mr. Schwab and the other pinochle players were really slumbering, the attendants opened the door half way. Through the opening came a chorus that sounded very much like snoring. On a table in the sitting room in the rear of the car were scattered cards.

SENATE CUTS AWAY HALF OF THE STATEHOOD BILL

Oklahoma Let In; Arizona and New Mexico Barred.

DEFEAT FOR THE PRESIDENT

Foraker Questions the Source of Beveridge's Telegrams — House Likely to Accept the Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Senator Foraker's insurgent movement against the Statehood bill was crowned with success to-day. His victory was overwhelming. The Senate voted to admit Oklahoma and Indian Territory as one State and struck out from the bill all reference to New Mexico and Arizona.

The original bill, advocated by the Administration, jammed through the House by Speaker Cannon, and engineered in the Senate by Mr. Beveridge, not only admitted Oklahoma and Indian Territory as one State, but compelled the union of Arizona and New Mexico as one State, despite the violent protests of the American-born population of Arizona.

It was against this forced union that Foraker made his fight. His victory is a defeat for the Administration. The outlook to-night is that it certainly insures a further defeat in the House. The House has been canvassed, and it is stated by the canvassers that the vote there to concur in the bill as amended by the Senate will be overwhelming.

The so-called referendum amendment proposed by Senator Foraker, requiring the consent of a majority of the citizens in both Territories to the union of New Mexico and Arizona, was adopted by 42 to 29. This was a test vote in the fight, which was the fiercest that has occurred this session in the Senate.

The most exciting aspect of the struggle came with the vote on what is known as the second Foraker amendment, which was offered by Senator Burrows. This struck from the bill all that part which dealt with New Mexico and Arizona and restricted it to Indian Territory and Oklahoma alone. In Committee of the Whole, where the amendments were first informally considered, this amendment was lost by 35 to 36.

Senator Scott, who had grown weary of voting and thought the battle was over when the referendum amendment was passed, came in from the cloakroom with his overcoat on and hat in hand as if to go home. He stood in the rear of the Republican side in doubt as to what the vote was, when some Senator said to him, "Vote nay." He did so unquestioningly. This happened to be the deciding vote. When Senator Burrows explained the situation to Scott, he was furious enough to take off his coat and stay by the fight to the end.

When the bill came into the Senate from Committee of the Whole Scott changed his vote, which alone would have been enough. Overman of North Carolina, however, had prepared to accomplish the same result. Up to that time he had refrained from voting, having a pair with Senator Clarke of Arkansas, who had deserted his party on the Statehood question and would have voted with Beveridge to the end. Overman transferred his pair to Carmack of Tennessee, who was absent, and then voted with the Foraker men, which made the vote 37 to 35.

The dramatic interest of the day centred in Beveridge and Foraker, who were pitted against each other as leaders of the two sides on the question of bringing New Mexico and Arizona in as one State and against the wishes of the people of the latter Territory. The most sensational incident of this duel was the crushing of Beveridge when he attempted to introduce some telegrams in favor of the bill sent to him by people in Arizona. Early in the day Beveridge had arisen in his place and announced impressively:

"I hold in my hand telegrams sent by scores of the best citizens of Arizona principally, and also by New Mexicans, demanding the passage of the bill, and I ask that they may be read."

Whereupon Foraker had sprung to his feet and said:

"I have hundreds of telegrams and letters, but I did not think of intruding them upon the Senate. Among them is one saying that a telegram has been received in Arizona signed by the Senator from Indiana asking that 500 telegrams be sent here in favor of Statehood for use in this debate."

Beveridge was plainly disconcerted. "Mr. President," he said weakly, "I know nothing about that."

Foraker had determined to make Beveridge ridiculous. He read a telegram sent by the firm of Brown, Smith & Belcher of Prescott, Arizona, to Delegate Mark Smith of that Territory. This telegram informed Smith that Tom Shultz, a joint Statehood boomer, had received telegraphic instructions to send to Beveridge telegrams favoring that scheme "by anybody that will sign them."

There was a roar of laughter at this, and then Foraker proceeded to read the following, sent to Smith by Mayor Manning of Tucson:

Tucson, March 7, 1906.

To the Hon. Marcus A. Smith, Washington:

John B. Wright on streets last evening declaring he had telegram from Beveridge saying he intended making speech of his life Friday, and saying 500 telegrams could be used to good effect. Our friends in Senate ought to know this.

L. H. MANNING, Mayor.

This telegram produced a cyclone of merriment. Beveridge sprang to his feet in the midst of it, with his face white and his eyes flashing. He had to wait for the uproar to subside so that he could be heard, and then he shouted at the top of his voice that the statement was untrue.

"That is a sample of the kind of information the Senator from Ohio is producing in this debate," he cried.

"I just wanted to show," retorted Foraker, "how it is that the Senator has telegrams from people in Arizona. We are not going to settle this matter by telegrams received by the Senator, whether in response to requests from him or not. We are going to settle it on its merits."

"That is all we ask," retorted Beveridge at the top of his voice, and pounding his desk.

"Except a few votes," supplemented Foraker.

"That's an admission that we have the

MISS ANTHONY WOULD FIGHT.

Hopes Not to Die Without More Woman Suffrage Victories.

ROCHESTER, March 9.—Miss Susan B. Anthony's condition is improved to-night. She is stronger than she was yesterday and has taken much nourishment. Her friends feel much more hopeful of her recovery.

Miss Anthony was much cheered yesterday by a visit from the Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, who, learning of her friend's illness, hurried to Rochester. Miss Shaw is a physician, and when she entered the patient's room Miss Anthony said:

"Tell me, do you think I am going to get well?"

"You have no disease," answered the doctor. "There is nothing to prevent recovery excepting your great weakness. I know of no reason why you should not get well."

"I should like to see more victories," said the suffragist. "How are things going on out in Oregon?"

The women had a chat about the Oregon campaign, which will be at its height soon, after Dr. Shaw reaches that State. Miss Anthony was delighted when Dr. Shaw told her the Republican nominee for Governor there had declared himself in favor of woman suffrage.

When Dr. Shaw came out of the sick-room she said:

"She doesn't lose her interest; it goes out to all the world."

STORM NEW YORK MISSED.

Takes the Outside Route from the South and Smothers Boston in Snow.

With New Yorkers all grunting because overcoats were unpleasantly heavy yesterday, Boston was hit by a cold wave and a heavy snowfall. Dispatches from Boston last night said that the storm reached there "from the South." It skipped New York. When the weather wizard on top of 100 Broadway was asked for an explanation of Father Knickerbocker's escape his answer was illuminating:

"That's easy," he said. "It went up outside the coast."

"Do storms skip New York often that way?" was asked. It really seemed unprecedented.

"I refuse to make any statement for publication," replied the Weather Man.

Which may be interpreted in any way that anybody chooses. Whatever happened, Boston reported that one of the heaviest snows of the Winter was expected there. A gale of sixty miles an hour was reported from Nantucket.

NO STRIKE ON LACKAWANNA.

Trainmen Get an Increase and New System Adopted.

Special to The New York Times.

SCRANTON, Penn., March 9.—The joint Grievance Committee of the Railway Men's Brotherhood made a settlement to-day with Supt. T. E. Clarke of the Lackawanna Railroad on the question of wages. The constructive mileage system has been abandoned in computing the earnings of the men, and the flat mileage system adopted, by which the conductors and brakemen will be paid for each mile traveled.

Conductors now receiving $3.25 a day will hereafter get $3.30. Brakemen now paid $2.16 a day will receive $2.30. Conductors now paid $2.10 for a twelve-hour day will be paid $2.30 for eleven hours. West of Elmira the conductors now receiving $2.97 will be advanced to $3, and brakemen $2 instead of $1.98. At one time the situation seemed so strained that a strike was feared.

Waldorf Astor left London on Thursday for the Continent.

BOY BEATS WESTERN UNION.

Messenger Wins Suit for $1.55, Lunch and Overtime Money.

Special to The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., March 9.—Hyman Sandman, the thirteen-year-old messenger boy who instituted a suit for $1.55 for lunches and overtime against the Western Union, was to-day awarded judgment in full by Judge Samuel Utley. Now the corporation, which was so confident of winning that it forced the little fellow to serve papers on the Commissioner of Corporations at Boston, will have to pay the expense of such service and all other expenses, aggregating over $14, with more to come.

The suit was brought months ago, and was only heard Feb. 24. Sandman claimed he ate two lunches at the expense of the company and worked overtime, for which pay was refused. The Western Union's plea was that the boy was employed and paid by the American District Telegraph.

COMSTOCK HIT THRICE; TOLD, 'SERVES YOU RIGHT'

He Gave the Lie to Lawyer Hugh G. Miller in Court.

AND GOT A VIRGINIA RETORT

Commissioner Shields, Marshal Henkel and District Attorney All Unsympathetic About It.

Anthony Comstock, head of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, was a witness at a hearing before United States Commissioner Shields yesterday. When he emerged from the Commissioner's office his left eye was in mourning, his hat badly battered, and there was a red spot on his lower jaw, midway between his ample side whiskers. Mr. Comstock said he had been insulted.

It all came about because Mr. Comstock called Hugh Gordon Miller of the law firm of Marx & Miller a liar. Mr. Miller comes from Virginia. He did what he had been taught, in his home State, was the right thing to do. For two hours afterward Mr. Comstock sought to obtain a warrant for Mr. Miller's arrest on charges of assault and contempt of court, but he found no sympathy. Mr. Comstock is much bigger than Mr. Miller.

Mr. Comstock, who is a United States Post Office Inspector with a salary of $1 per annum, was present at the hearing as a witness against Ernest Richards of 236 West Thirty-fourth Street, who was accused of using the mails for improper purposes. Mr. Miller appeared as counsel for the defendant. In arguing for an adjournment he declared that Mr. Comstock had made his client the victim of a conspiracy and allowed two other defendants to escape.

"That's a lie," exclaimed Mr. Comstock, interrupting the argument.

An electric shock seemed to run through the frame of the young lawyer. He sprang at Mr. Comstock with the agility of a toreador. Some of the history that was made in the next two seconds was made more rapidly than it can be recorded. Mr. Miller's right arm shot out and there were three resounding whacks. One caught Mr. Comstock in the eye. The second was stopped by his chin. The third smashed his hat and sent it flying across the room.

Mr. Miller by that time had retired to his corner. He pulled out his handkerchief, but there was a gleam in his eye that made it plain to those in the room that the handkerchief was not meant to be a flag of truce. Marshal Henkel was doing his best to calm the lawyer. Two court attendants stood by to seize Mr. Comstock the moment he should try to attack his antagonist, but their services were not needed.

Mr. Comstock, after he had flicked the dust from his trousers, turned to Commissioner Shields and demanded that a warrant be issued forthwith for Mr. Miller's arrest. The Commissioner refused to exercise any power he might have under the law to place the lawyer under arrest and referred Mr. Comstock to the United States District Attorney, Stimson, who had departed for the day.

Mr. Comstock, who was getting angrier every moment, then went over to Assistant United States District Attorney Carmody, who was prosecuting the case in which he had appeared as a witness.

"I want a warrant for the arrest of this man on a charge of assault in court, Mr. Carmody," roared Mr. Comstock.

Mr. Carmody is absent-minded. He was talking to Commissioner Shields and did not seem to notice that Mr. Comstock was there. Comstock stood directly behind him and shouted his request, but Mr. Carmody did not even turn around.

When Mr. Comstock saw that he could do nothing with Mr. Carmody he ran over to Marshal Henkel, who was in another part of the room, and told him to take the lawyer into custody without further loss of time. Mr. Henkel refused to do anything without a warrant.

"But you saw what he did to me!" cried Mr. Comstock.

"Yes, and if you should ask me I'd say that you got just what was coming to you," said the Marshal. "No warrant, no arrest."

A new request was made to Commissioner Shields, but to no purpose. The Commissioner told him he would have to make his complaint to the United States District Attorney before he could get a warrant.

Mr. Comstock turned and left the room. There was a group of reporters in the corridor. Mr. Comstock shouted that he had been insulted and assaulted, and could not get justice. One of them who knew Comstock told him that it was not the first time, and said other things so forcibly that Mr. Comstock rushed up to Commissioner Shields and asked for the reporter's arrest. His request in this case, too, fell on deaf ears.

Finally Mr. Comstock sat down in the Commissioner's office and wrote out a complaint. As he left the room he raised his two hands to the ceiling and said solemnly:

"I will see about this."

He went to the United States District Attorney's office. There Mr. Houghton received him, and Mr. Comstock outlined his complaint and told of his desire to place himself under the broad aegis of the United States Government. Mr. Houghton replied:

"Let me say, Mr. Comstock, that when you come here in your capacity of a Government official, and so far forget yourself as to call an officer of the United States Court a liar, that very moment yo place yourself beyond the pale of the law. Anybody who knows enough to behave like a gentleman can have the whole machinery of the Federal law set in motion for his protection, but—"

Mr. Comstock remained about an hour in Mr. Houghton's office, but he came away without a warrant.

In the meantime Mr. Miller was receiving congratulations in the Commissioner's office. Acquaintances came up and wrung his hand while he was waiting to be arrested.

Stearns Edick, Secretary of the Federal Union Surety Company, who had witnessed the encounter, but did not know Mr. Miller, introduced himself and offered to give a bond for him in case Comstock should get a warrant. Mr. Edick expressed himself as pleased with Mr. Miller's performance. He sent to his office, where he obtained from the Vice President a blank bond which he was empowered to fill out for any amount up to $100,000.

BUTLER SAVES 3 CHILDREN.

Narrow Escapes When J. R. Livermores' Westchester Home Burned.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., March 9.—The country house occupied by John R. Livermore, a New York lawyer, at Bedford, in the northern section of Westchester County, was destroyed by fire early this morning, entailing a loss of about $50,000. The fire was discovered in the west wing of the house, and through the pluck of J. Graham, a butler employed in the house, three children were saved from being burned to death.

When the fire was at its height Graham dashed up the front stairway and carried the children out, assisted by the governess. He was badly burned about the face and hands. Mr. and Mrs. Livermore were in New York, and the big house was in charge of three servants.

The fire was caused by the upsetting of a lamp.

SAVED OVER THE DASHBOARD.

Motorman Leaned Over and Lifted an Old Woman Out of the Way.

A Third Avenue trolley car, in charge of Motorman Henry Aiken of 440 West Sixty-third Street, was going south at a fair rate of speed late yesterday afternoon, when just as it was in the middle of the block between Sixty-first and Sixty-second Streets an old woman suddenly stepped from behind a northbound truck on the other track on to the south track.

It was too late for Aiken to stop his car. But he applied the brakes with his left hand, and then, leaning as far out as he could, he grabbed the woman by the shoulder and threw her off of the track.

Twenty yards further on the car came to a stop, and the motorman ran back. When he found that the woman, who was Mrs. Mary Arthur of 1,114 Second Avenue, was not much hurt he collapsed and had to be taken into a drug store to be revived.

INSURANCE MEN ASK CHANGES IN BILLS

Great Gathering of Companies' Officers at Albany.

DON'T WANT EXPENSES CUT

Seemingly Abandon Deferred Dividends—One Actuary Would Limit New Business—Long Session.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 9.—Representatives of the great insurance interests of the country—the Presidents of all the companies having their home offices in New York City, the active heads of a dozen out-of-the-State concerns, and officers of many others—made personal appeal to the joint committee on insurance of the Legislature to-day for modification of the recommendations of the Armstrong Investigating Committee.

It was in many ways one of the most notable hearings ever held before a committee of the New York Legislature. The insurance chiefs were reinforced by a small army of agents, who came here under the auspices of the Life Underwriters' Association of America, and the agents themselves had their day in court to plead that the companies might have an expense allowance that would enable the agency forces to live.

There was a notable absence of lawyers. Save for William B. Hornblower, who made a general summing-up argument on behalf of all the companies, and Richard V. Lindabury, counsel for the Prudential Life of Newark, legal talent was practically eliminated from the proceedings. This was in accordance with the expressed intention of the life insurance companies as outlined in THE TIMES last week. The insurance men came to Albany to-day, as they themselves declared, not in a spirit of unreasonable opposition or of captious criticism, but with the desire to co-operate with the Legislature in the great reforms which are to be the outcome of the Armstrong Committee's work and of the year of insurance disclosures.

Change in Bills Possible.

On several of the most important points there was, as had been expected, a substantial agreement among the insurance men. On one of them, a proposed restriction of the expenses of new business, much light was thrown, in the opinion of those here who had followed the Armstrong Committee's work. It was predicted that modifications of the laws as laid down in the committee's report might very possibly result, if the contention of the speakers that in this particular the committee had acted upon data that did not actually cover the situation, should prove well founded.

In other matters, a considerable difference of opinion was expressed. Notable in this class was the question of deferred dividends. Their only general defender was Actuary Joel C. Van Cise of the Equitable Life Assurance Society. Even he, in arguing against the abolition of deferred dividends as proposed by the Armstrong Committee, was disposed to concede a modification providing for an initial period of five years before the first accounting, and an annual accounting thereafter. That so great a modification of the ten-fifteen-twenty-year deferred dividend plan upon which the companies have been writing the vast majority of their business should be openly agreed to by the actuary of the company in which the whole scheme originated was taken as recognition that the death knell of the deferred dividend had been sounded.

McClintock and Orr Differ.

Actuary Emory McClintock of the Mutual Life came out flatly, as far as his personal opinion went, in favor of the annual accounting proposed by the Armstrong Committee. Mr. McClintock also surprised many of his hearers by saying he had long believed that limits must be placed upon the amount of business to be written annually by the great companies. This was after President Alexander E. Orr of the New York Life had reminded the committee that the annual business of his company would be cut in half if the limit of $150,000,000 was put upon the statute books and had asked that time be allowed the company to make this important readjustment of its affairs in case the bills should become law.

President George E. Ide of the Home Life of New York and other speakers made a strong argument against the restriction of contingent reserve which the Armstrong Committee would impose. He declared that the committee's idea that a limitation must be based, through a sliding scale of percentages, upon the net value of the insurance in force was fundamentally at variance with the theory on which the reserves should be accumulated. Practically all of Mr. Ide's remarks, made on behalf of the smaller companies in general, were devoted to this matter, and he found many supporters among the other speakers.

Outside Companies Object.

By Mr. Lindabury and several others who represented the "foreign" companies the attention of the committee was called to features of its report, which, it was declared, would either prevent companies chartered in other States from doing business in this State, or would excite retaliatory legislation against the State of New York throughout the country. A speaker representing the State Mutual of Worcester, Mass., went so far, indeed, as to declare that if the proposed four standard forms of policies were adopted all Massachusetts companies would have to withdraw from the State of New York, because the laws of their home State specified that surrender values which the Armstrong Committee proposed to eliminate must be included in all the policies they wrote.

Many of the speakers objected strongly to the application of the Penal Code to the insurance law, declaring particularly that they and their colleagues did not relish the possibility of committing an unconscious misdemeanor should they be so unfortunate as to fail to keep the expenses of new business in any given year within the bounds prescribed by the Armstrong investigation.

"I have been an actuary for a great many years," said Mr. McClintock of the Mutual at one point of his speech. "I have lived in a corner. I have spoken when I have been spoken to. Now suddenly I have been made a Trustee and Vice President and put in charge of the agency force, and what bothers me is how I am going to run this and keep out of jail if the business doesn't happen to come up to my anticipations and therefore cannot be made to pay for itself."

The members of the committee and the legislators present joined with the insurance heads and the agents in the laugh that followed.

Many Legislators at the Hearing.

A good many of the legislators had stayed in town over the day to attend the hearing, and most of the prominent members of the Senate and Assembly were in the chamber when the joint committee began its session at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. Senator Raines and Senator Grady, the majority and minority leaders of the upper house, sat side by side and followed closely the day's developments. Assemblyman Wainwright was another member who asked a great many questions and got into the side talks that the members of the Armstrong committee held with the insurance men at interesting points in their testimony. Assemblyman Merritt also followed things closely, and most of the legislators who have made it a point to attend remained even through the long evening session.

One State official who was conspicuous by his absence was Supt. Francis Hendricks of the Insurance Department. His deputy, Mr. Appleton, came to the hearing in his stead and occupied a seat in the front row between Assemblymen Cox and Rogers of the Armstrong Committee.

A pathetic figure in the day's proceedings was Vice President George W. Eldridge of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company, who was indicted along with President Burnham and Second Vice President Burnham of that company in New York on Thursday.

Eldridge hung around the outskirts of the crowd of insurance men that packed the big Assembly Chamber and listened to the references made by some of the speakers, notably Actuary Van Cise of the Equitable, to the fact that the only insurance men yet indicted were the officers of the Mutual Reserve.

Senator Armstrong called the meeting to order promptly at 10:30 o'clock, and by way of introduction said:

"If there is any impression abroad that we are not quite as anxious to hear you as you are to be heard, it ought to be dissipated at the outset. We are glad that the day has come that the recommendations of the committee and its proposed legislation can be freely discussed, criticism freely made, and suggestions offered with just as much freedom. We want every sane suggestion that can be made. We will be influenced and guided by every rational suggestion. I may say to you as a matter of caution that mere weight of numbers or noise will hardly be of influence in arriving at a just conclusion. What we want are facts, and argument based upon facts. We would be well pleased in the conclusion of the work we are engaged in if these pieces of legislation can be based upon judgment and reason and as little as possible influenced by force or interest.

"No one present needs to spare the recommendations in his criticism. Any criticism will be welcome that is based upon facts or argument deducible from facts presented. The time occupied other than that will probably be time wasted. We are here in a serious business, and we must address ourselves seriously to it. We want the aid and assistance of every right-minded man of experience or possessing information which will lead to an appropriate result; and we hope that with your assistance we will be able to arrive at a result which will be equally satisfactory to you and to us."

Armstrong Presents Woodruff.

Mr. Armstrong introduced ex-Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff, President of the Provident Savings Life, who acted as the chief marshal of the insurance officers. Mr. Armstrong said that Mr. Woodruff was there in the guise of a "guide, philosopher, and friend." Mr. Woodruff said that there was interested in the day's developments practically every legal reserve insurance company in the United States, representing 21,500,000 policies in ninety different institutions and a volume of assets equal to three times the aggregate capital of the 5,300 National banks in the United States. He presented as the first speaker for the companies President Paul Morton of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, who paid particular attention to the question of limiting life insurance investments. Mr. Morton submitted a carefully prepared letter to the committee. Part of it he read. He asserted that if the companies now owning large amounts of the stock of banks and trust companies were compelled to divest themselves of these holdings the result must necessarily be a loss to the companies themselves and a readjustment of the control of these subsidiary institutions in the hands of a very few persons. These, he said, were even now making ready for this new addition to their resources. Mr. Morton also argued for less stringent restrictions on participation in syndicates.

[Mr. Morton's letter is printed elsewhere in THE TIMES this morning.]

President Orr Speaks.

President Alexander E. Orr of the New York Life followed Mr. Morton. He said he had been in an administrative position in an insurance company for only a very few weeks, and had not expected to be called upon for that reason.

"The company I represent," said Mr. Orr, "is not here in a feeling of captious criticism to the work of the Armstrong Committee or to the bills that it has proposed. I have been desired to say that the company has appreciated the drastic character of the inquiry and that the investigation has been, in the judgment of the Trustees of the New York Life, exceedingly serviceable to the community. Many of the recommendations of the committee meet with the cordial approbation of our board, but at the same time others do not. But our objections will be voiced by others besides myself, and whatever they may be, I wish to record my appreciation of the statement of the Chairman of the Armstrong Committee during the investigation that the purposes of the committee were not to tear down, but to build up, the insurance interests of the State and of the companies. And it is because we believe it to be the desire of the committee to seek aid in formulating wise laws that we are here to-day.

"There is one matter particularly which I desire to mention as affecting the New York Life. If the bills as they now stand should become law, the business of the company that I represent would be absolutely cut in half. Last year the company wrote some $300,000,000 of life insurance, and if these bills pass, it would be limited to $150,000,000. My proposition is that the laws, if they are to be enacted, should not take effect immediately, but should give the companies the opportunity to bring themselves into a position where they may comply; and we claim that we ought to have a period of time to adjust our interests and those of our great number of employes to this change.

"Last year our company paid out $57,000,000 to beneficiaries, and a large part of it went to widows and orphans, while a part went to persons in advancing years who had been protecting themselves by endowments, and some to people who had temporarily sought our help. Now, if we add to these payments the amount paid by other like corporations we wil lderive some idea of the scope of the benefits involved in American life insurance, and while it may be possible that the agents who made these people make provision for the future, over which they had no control, were themselves personally interested in so doing, I believe that it cannot be disputed that the outcome was a very great philanthropic work, and I ask that the conditions of readjustment be not made so severe as seriously to imperil this vast philanthropic enterprise."

President Peabody's Speech.

The next speaker was President Charles A. Peabody of the Mutual Life Insurance Company. Mr. Peabody said:

"I appear here as a representative of the Mutual Life Insurance Company. In behalf of the officers and Trustees of the company, I am very glad to bear testimony to their high appreciation of the great value of the results that are likely to flow from your labors.

"We well recognize the fact that this legislation which is now pending before you, if wisely perfected, cannot fail to be of vast and lasting benefit to the policy holders of all of the companies, to the people of this State, and, indeed, of the whole Nation. But we also cannot help recognizing the fact that in this pending legislation, as in all works of human construction, mistakes may be made. We think that in a few respects, perhaps not more than three or four, but buried through error in a mass of very valuable provisions, there are three or four subjects which, as they now stand, cannot fail to do great and indeed permanent harm to the life insurance companies, and to all those policy holders and others who are interested in their welfare.

"To point out these possible mistakes, which are mainly of a technical nature, is not my province. Like the last speaker who addressed you, I am a new man in this field. I should not venture to attempt to explain to you gentlemen, who have spent months of long and patient labor, where it seems to the insurance men you have made mistakes. The officers and the actuaries of many of the companies are coming before you for that purpose. They are going to point out from the standpoint of experts, they are going to point out from the standpoint of men who have spent their lives in this work, where they think serious errors are in danger of being committed. For these men who are to follow me I respectfully ask your earnest and patient attention."

Ide Speaks for Small Companies.

After Mr. Peabody, President George E. Ide of the Home Life, on behalf of a committee representing the Manhattan Life, the Germania Life, the Washington Life, the United States Life, the Provident Savings Life, and the Home Life, spoke for the smaller companies. He called attention to the fact that after six months of investigation and sixty days of deliberation the Armstrong Committee was proposing new bills which were deemed revolutionary in the insurance business.

"We are in sympathy with your purposes," continued Mr. Ide, "but if some of the bills which you propose are passed, your very purposes will be defeated. We have heard that your object is to curtail the large companies and to help the smaller ones. I may say that you will accomplish the first, but in the cataclysm that follows I hate to think of what will happen to the smaller companies, for I cannot see how certain of your bills help the smaller companies as it has been your intention to help them."

Mr. Ide then took up Section 87 of the proposed new insurance law relating to the contingency reserve. He said that this new arrangement in differentiating between the contingency reserves already held and those which may be accumulated in the future had the effect of dividing each company into two classes, one composed of the "unfortunate persons" or members prior to 1907, and the other of the policy holders who might come in under the reform laws. This separation, he held, would work a gross injustice to the old policy holders.

"If it is your intention," he continued, "to compel the distribution of all the gains to policy holders that should be distributed, your intent is admirable; but, gentlemen, this bill restricting the contingency reserve is a bill putting a limit on conservatives. Most laws are aimed in the opposite direction, and it is fair to ask who shall be the judge as to how much surplus funds we should keep against the times of stress. Shall the Legislature say to the Directors of companies, 'Gentlemen, we will leave you free of that responsibility and determine it ourselves'? I do not believe that you will take that position, and I would remind you also that there are different conditions in different companies governing the amount of reserve that should be held. I don't think that any limit is necessary in this matter, but if you are going to make a limit you should place it so ridiculously high that no one will ever reach it."

Fluctuation of Securities.

Mr. Ide mentioned as an example the fluctuation of security from year to year and called attention to the fact that in companies in which large amounts of securities were held, a great reduction of contingent reserve was brought about in 1903 through the general depression of market values.

In other companies which featured mortgage loans among their investments it was possible to quote these at par, although they might be even more difficult to liquidate than the securities with all their depreciation. Mr. Ide said that the Home Life in 1901, feeling that security prices were then very high, created a special contingency reserve fund against just such fluctuations as came in 1903.

"And now," said Mr. Ide, "if we had then been operating under the new law, and up to the limit of contingency reserve, it would have been a misdemeanor for us thus to protect our policy holders, and I have been told by officers of the New York Life that if they had been operating in 1903 under the 2 per cent. contingent reserve contemplated in this bill the company would have been technically insolvent in that same market depression."

Mr. Ide also argued against the proposed limitation of contingent reserve on the ground that the compulsory distribution of all sums in excess to policy holders would produce fluctuation in dividends from year to year that would be seriously disturbing to the peace of mind of the policy holders, who might not understand—and probably would not in most instances—the operation of the factors that swell the dividends in one year and reduce them the next.

Actuary Van Cise Speaks.

Then Joel C. Van Cise, Actuary of the Equitable Life, was introduced to speak on the subject of deferred dividends. He recalled the fact that he had entered the Equitable in 1867 and that in the following year the Equitable had introduced the deferred dividend system. This was to show his qualifications to speak on the subject.

"I plead first," said Mr. Van Cise, "for the right of freedom of contract, for the policy holders of the State and Nation. A few years ago despotic Russia forbade the issuance of deferred dividend policies, but to-day they are issued in Japan and freely in England, where even the old Equitable of London until recently was issuing them on a ten-year basis and even now is doing so on a five-year basis. The question for you to decide is whether your legislation will be patterned after that of despotic Russia, or whether you are to give to the policy holders the freedom that they have at least in Great Britain and Japan.

"And what are the objections? Some people say that they are gambling contracts, but if uncertainty of payment is the criterion of a gambling contract that applies equally to annual dividends, which will fluctuate every year, and thus cause a fluctuation of the amount which the insured must pay, whereas under the deferred dividend system his premium payment is fixed.

"They say also that estimates are not realized. The same is true of annual dividend policies, and the same factors have caused the reduction in both."

Mr. Van Cise enumerated as the factors which have prevented the returns from coming to the estimate as the general reduction of earnings on invested assets, the increased cost of getting new business, and the liberalization of policies. He denied that there had been any intention to deceive in making the original estimates, and noted the fact that many companies have long since abandoned using them and have been going on the basis of actual results.

Defends Deferred Dividends.

Mr. Van Cise argued as a further reason for the deferred dividend that it was a better surplus reducer than any other form of policy, and then declared that he had no sympathy with the claim that the surpluses so produced have been the temptation to mismanagement.

"I declare to-day without fear of contradiction," he said, "that the mismanagement in the big companies has been paralleled in some of the smaller companies where there are not such surplus accumulations and no deferred dividends. It is the weakness of human nature and not the deferred dividends that is the cause, and I call attention to the fact that the men who are under indictment to-day in New York for insurance mismanagement are officers of a small company."

Senator Armstrong asked why a policy holder who has contributed for a given number of years and then through some fault not his own is unable to keep up his insurance, should be obliged, as he is under the deferred dividend plan, to forfeit his surplus accumulations to those who stayed in.

"The policy holder is entitled," said Mr. Van Cise, "only to what he contracts for, and the compensation should be for those who persist by reason of superior longevity and other reasons. God's law of compensation runs through everything, and I believe that we should make our earthly laws correspond to God's law."

"But suppose," suggested Assemblyman Cox, "that a man is unable to keep up through no fault of his own. Is it God's law for him to forfeit his surplus accumulations then?"

"We ought to reward policy holders for persistence and not for dropping out," was Mr. Van Cise's only reply.

Senator Armstrong, however, stuck to the theory that the deferred dividend penalized the unfortunate in favor of the fortunate, and that the life insurance dividend was mainly the return of an overcharge. Then he wanted to know why it would not be returned to the man who paid it instead of to others, who did not. Mr. Van Cise said that the companies needed to retain the surplus earnings for the purposes of safety, and then he made his suggestion of a first distribution five years after taking out a policy, and annual distributions thereafter.

Actuary Henry Moyer of the Providence Savings Life spoke in support of the views of President Ide of the Home Life regarding the proposed compulsory distribution of surplus earnings. Actuary John K. Gove of the Prudential told how the four options allowed policy holders in taking dividends would produce endless complications in an industrial company that issued, as the Prudential, 900,000 policies a year. He wanted an amendment of the proposed law so that the policy holder might be obliged to specify when he took out his policy whether he would accept his dividends in paid-up insurance or in cash.

McClintock for a Limit.

Then Mr. Woodruff introduced Actuary McClintock of the Mutual Life, who, he said, would speak on the proposed limitation of new business and upon the limitation of expenses. Mr. McClintock began by startling the New York Life contingent a bit.

"I am not qualified," he said, "to oppose the section limiting the amount of new business. I doubt if there is any one who wants to oppose that except to delay its operation. Personally I have believed in limiting business for years. It is my idea that the limit is about reached, when the companies have to think of splitting themselves up and making themselves into federations. I am on record and am curiously incompetent to speak in opposition to those two sections.

"In regard to Section 98, which provides for a limitation of the expenses of getting new business, it is obviously intended to reduce the cost of insurance to the policy holders. I may say that any artificial limitation of the amount that may be spent in new business to that extent will cramp the company and increase the cost of its business.

"The committee has arranged for a system of reserves that relieves the need of putting up an unnecessary reserve in the first five years. I agree with them heartily, and I think that most Actuaries will do the same.

"I agree, personally, with the recommendation for an annual accounting."

In the matter of loading on premiums Mr. McClintock said that fixing the loading on a whole-life policy of a general standard would not materially change existing conditions. He commended the committee's position that agents should not get more for writing one kind of a policy than for another. In the matter of limiting expenses for getting new business Mr. McClintock said:

"I do not say that the companies could not prosper under a limitation, but if you are going to limit the cost of getting new business you must do it in a way so that the people can understand what you mean, and that is not done in this bill."

Varying statistics, he said, were furnished by the companies to the committee upon which it has based its recommendations. In other words, the expenses were not charged up in the same way by all the companies. Any method that might be devised to define the expense of new business would, he said, require a long line of decisions in the courts to settle questions that would arose. Mr. McClintock emphasized the fact that it was impossible to lay out a year's business in advance, estimating expenses on a percentage basis, and be sure of coming within the limit at the end of the year.

Senator Armstrong asked if there were any reason why existing policy holders should be taxed for spreading the cause of life insurance.

"That should not be," said Mr. McClintock; "that proposition had appealed to some minds, but not to mine."

William C. Johnson, Chairman of the Legislative Committees of the various life underwriters' associations, made an argument which was directed solely at the proposed new Section 98 of the insurance law, restricting the expense of procuring new business. Mr. Johnson urged that this section be stricken from the bill. He argued that the proposed restrictions were contrary to public policy.

Richard V. Lindabury, who represented the Prudential, spoke next for the outside companies, saying that there was a general belief among them that with the proposed limitation of expenses they could not pay their agents living salaries. He said:

"Abolish the agent if you wish, but if you are going to keep him, don't starve him."

There was a laugh at this. Mr. Lindabury then explained some of the provisions of the bills that the outside companies objected to. Particularly he took issue with the recommendation that no foreign companies that issued participating and non-participating policies should be allowed to do business in New York. Senator Armstrong said that the committee wanted that law because the issuance of participating and non-participating policies together meant either that the man buying the participating policy would get it at the expense of those who bought the non-participating policy, or vice versa.

Mr. Lindabury also asked for similar relief in regard to the compulsory distribution of surplus. He suggested that retaliatory measures might result from the proposed legislation here, and these would be the surest means for bringing about Federal regulation of insurance. This statement was received with interest in view of the fact that President Dryden of the Prudential is the principal advocate of Federal regulation among insurance men.

Actuary E. E. Artell of the State Mutual of Worcester argued against the limitation of expenses of new business and against the standard forms of policies. President John L. Holcombe of the Phoenix Mutual of Hartford spoke on the same lines.

The Evening Session.

At the evening session the principal speaker was Actuary Rufus W. Weeks of the New York Life. Mr. Weeks said that it was a great pity that the committee had attacked deferred dividend policies, and that if it passed the proposed law abolishing them a reaction would set in that would bring about an appeal next year. Mr. Weeks held that there was nothing in the deferred dividend system that was against morals or public policy, but that in reality it was against public policy to stop it.

"We are not philanthropists," he said, "We are all working for what we can get out of it, and the perfection of our plans like any others leads us to wish the right to reinvest our savings for ourselves."

"But," said Senator Armstrong, "in this case the reinvestments go to the benefit of others."

"Well, there is nothing wrong about that," said Mr. Weeks.

"There was nothing wrong in the Louisiana Lottery, according to some people who wanted to play it," retorted the Chairman.

"I admit," said Mr. Weeks, at last, "that there has been some objection to deferred dividends. The officials haven't felt the responsibility for them in the past as they should have, but I don't think there will be any trouble on that line in the future."

Mr. Weeks also argued against the abolition of sub-standard risks, saying that 25 per cent. of the business of the New York Life was of this character, and afforded protection to thousands of families that could not be protected otherwise.

E. E. Rhodes of the Mutual Benefit of Newark, Actuary Gove of the Provident Savings Life, Vice President James L. English of the Aetna of Hartford, and one or two officials of the smaller companies spoke. Then A. A. Welsh of the Phoenix Life filed a long brief on behalf of the committee of seven actuaries appointed by out-of-the-State companies, and at 10:30 o'clock William B. Hornblower began a summing-up argument on behalf of all of the companies, covering the entire ground that had been traversed by the speakers in the day. It was after 11 when Mr. Hornblower got through, and the hearing on the Armstrong Committee's bills came to an end.

There will be another hearing on the insurance bills next Thursday, and necessary additional hearings will be held next Friday until all have been heard who care to appear on the bills.

The opposition to the plan to retire all Trustees on Nov. 15 is headed, it was learned to-night, by the Mutual Life, in behalf of which Henry W. Taft, the brother of the Secretary of War, will argue here next Thursday. Paul D. Cravath will appear at that time on behalf of the Equitable in connection with the proposed plans of optional mutualization of stock companies.

LIMITING INVESTMENTS DISCUSSED BY MORTON

Would Permit the Companies to Keep Their Present Holdings.

SALE WOULD MEAN BIG LOSS

Movement on Foot Now to Depress Price of Bonds, the Equitable's Head Tells Legislators.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 9.—A feature of the hearing on the Armstrong Insurance bills was the reading of a letter from President Paul Morton of the Equitable Life Assurance Society. Mr. Morton began by calling his communication a few suggestions, in behalf of the Equitable, offered, "not by way of criticism, but in the hope that they will aid your committee."

"Any fair-minded man," Mr. Morton wrote, "must recognize that serious evils have crept into the insurance business, and that important remedial legislation is called for."

At the same time, Mr. Morton wrote, frank suggestion from those who must do business under the laws to be passed would be of assistance. He continued:

"With the general purposes which you have in view I am in entire accord, and in the main your recommendations seem to me well adapted to accomplish those purposes. Your recommendations upon the subjects of political contributions, lobbying, publicity and State supervision, the preventing of rebating and deception, the prohibition of personal profit by officers, and, indeed, most of your other recommendations, are admirable. There are, however, certain of your recommendations which seem to my associates and myself likely to seriously injure the insurance business and to defeat the very results you seek to accomplish. I shall leave to the actuaries and others who are more familiar than I with the details of the insurance business to discuss the technical questions presented, and shall confine myself to a few general suggestions, which seem to me to be of controlling importance."

Unanimous for Changes.

Mr. Morton added that conferences of insurance men and actuaries which he had attended had expressed the unanimous opinion that some changes would have to be made in the Armstrong bills. Unless these changes were made, he said, the interests of the insurance companies and policy holders of this State would suffer serious injury.

Other States, Mr. Morton wrote, would pass insurance laws like New York's, and New York therefore ought to have her laws as nearly perfect as possible. He then prefaced the body of his letter with the remark that he would suggest "certain changes which I understand to be essential." The rest of his letter is:

My experience and observation in the Equitable have led me to believe that on the whole it is wise that, with certain qualifications, insurance companies should have substantially the same freedom as heretofore with respect to the scope of their investments.

In contrast with the requirements of the Prussian law with respect to stock investments it is well to bear in mind that in Great Britain insurance companies are not only allowed by law the utmost liberty in investments, but have actually invested largely in railroad shares.

Accepting, however, your judgment that there should be a radical restriction in the scope of investments, and that in the future investments of life insurance companies should be practically limited to loans secured by mortgage, and to corporate bonds, I offer the following suggestions, the adoption of which, in my judgment, will save policy holders a great deal of money without violating the spirit of the restriction which you recommend.

I.—Existing Investments.

The important existing investments of life insurance companies which come within the prohibition of the law which you propose may conveniently be considered under three heads, viz., (a) Collateral Trust Bonds, (b) Railroad Stocks, and (c) Stocks in Banks and Trust Companies.

The investments of the life insurance companies of this State in securities of this character are substantially as follows:

Collat. trust bonds (Schedule A)..		$107,107,000.00
Railroad stock (Schedule B)......		26,628,510.00
Bank and trust company stocks:
Mutual $33,374,782.60
Equitable 42,175,155.00
		75,549,937.60
Grand total..................		$209,285,447.60

These investments have been made under the authority of the law heretofore existing, and it has taken many years to accumulate them. It seems to me that the companies should be allowed to retain such of these investments as are sound and do not tend to create any of the evils which the committee is seeking to remedy.

The prohibition against investments in the collateral trust bonds and stocks of railroad companies is certainly not upon the theory that all investments of that class are unsound, but rather upon the theory that it would be unwise to place the Directors of life insurance companies under the responsibility of choosing the particular stocks and collateral trust bonds which are safe and proper investments. The list of these securities now held by insurance companies of this State is so short that your committee can see for itself that almost without exception they are sound and safe investments.

(a) Collateral Trust Bonds.

In schedule (a) I submit a statement of the present rate of return upon the collateral trust bonds held by the Equitable and a brief description of each issue. Any expert in investments will recognize that whatever may be said of collateral trust bonds generally, these particular issues of collateral trust bonds are well secured and furnish safe investments for trust funds. If the life insurance companies were compelled to market this very large amount of collateral trust bonds this could only be done at a serious loss, and the society would be unable to invest the proceeds in other bonds equally well secured which would yield as high a rate of interest. The reason why these bonds could not be marketed without a loss is that the insurance companies have heretofore been among the most important purchasers of collateral trust bonds, (which are not legal investments for savings banks,) and the fact that insurance companies could purchase this class of bonds has had an influence in fixing their price. If the insurance companies should be compelled to market their holdings they would have to be sold very largely to private investors, and the knowledge that this large amount of bonds had to be marketed within five years would materially depress the price.

In Schedule (d) hereto annexed I submit a statement of the average return upon the railroad stocks held by the Equitable. In almost every case these stocks are so well known that argument to show that they are sound investments seems unnecessary. The dividend records of these stocks are such that they may be looked upon as almost as stable investments as bonds. While, unlike the case of collateral trust bonds, these stocks, having a wide market, could probably be sold without any serious loss, the companies would have difficulty in investing the proceeds in other securities of equal stability yielding as high a rate of interest. Furthermore, there is an advantage in having a certain proportion of an insurance company's funds invested in stocks of this character, as they are very salable—as a rule much more readily salable than bonds—and are therefore readily converted into cash in case of an emergency.

Stocks of Banks and Trust Companies.

I accept the conclusion of your committee that experience has shown that insurance companies should not be permitted to control or dominate financial institutions. I therefore agree that the insurance companies which now control or dominate banks or trust companies should not be permitted to continue such control or domination. On the other hand, with unimportant exceptions, the investments of life insurance companies in banks and trust companies are sound and profitable investments, and yield an excellent return upon the values at which they are now being carried. The holdings of the Mutual and the Equitable of such stocks could not be marketed within five years except at a very serious reduction of the present prices. The reason for this is that the market for stocks of this character is necessarily very narrow, especially as the value of the shares of a particular bank or trust company depends, to a great extent, upon the financial strength of the interests which control its stock. The result is that the large holdings of the life insurance companies in banks and trust companies could only be sold to important financial interests, of which there are comparatively few of sufficient strength to acquire such large holdings.

If the Legislature enacts a law compelling the sale of these holdings, it would place the life insurance companies at the mercy of a comparatively small number of men who, within certain limits, could, by acting together, fix the price at which these stocks could be marketed. Indeed, there are indications that movements of this character are already on foot. While this result, to some extent, would follow in case even a part of these stocks were sold, the loss would be increased in proportion to the amount sold. I accordingly urge that while the life insurance companies should not be allowed to retain controlling or dominating interests in banks or trust companies, they should be permitted to hold as investments their present holdings, provided they shall not exceed 20 per cent. of the stock of any one bank or trust company. It is, of course, assumed that further investments of this character are to be prohibited.

[Mr. Morton underlined all of the following paragraph:]

My recommendation with reference to existing investments, therefore, is that life insurance companies be permitted to retain their present investments in collateral trust bonds and railroad stocks, and also their present investments in banks and trust companies, provided that in no case shall an insurance company hold over 20 per cent. of the stock of a bank or trust company.

Accepting generally your conclusion that insurance companies should not invest in stocks of corporations and in collateral trust bonds, I submit that your restrictions might be liberalized in the following respects without danger to life insurance companies, and with the result of very substantially widening the scope of investments.

(a) Permit investments in collateral trust bonds issued by companies operating railroads. If thought wise, there could be the additional restriction that the railroad company by which the bonds are issued should not have defaulted for a period of ten years in any of its interest payments. Under such a provision collateral trust bonds issued by holding companies having no independent credit would be excluded. There is no reason why bonds issued by solvent railroad companies simply because they happen to be secured by stock as collateral. As a matter of fact, some of the strongest bonds upon the market are bonds of that class, and the only reason why they do not command almost as high prices as first mortgage railroad bonds is that they are not legal investments for savings banks.

(b) Permit investments in preferred or guaranteed stocks of railroad companies, provided the stocks have regularly paid dividends for five years at an average rate of not less than 4 per cent. per annum. Provide, however, that no insurance company should thus acquire over 5 per cent. of any of such stock issue.

Standard Forms of Policy.

My information is that the forms of policies which you have proposed, while in many respects excellent, present certain objections which it is unnecessary for me to discuss, even if I were qualified to do so.

While I heartily commend your various recommendations tending to make life insurance contracts plain and to prevent deceit or mistakes, I am firmly convinced that it is unwise to prescribe standard forms of policies. Experience suggests improvements in policies and the requirements of the public with respect to insurance undergo radical changes. I believe that in the long run both the companies and the insured will be better off if the companies are free to adopt their own forms of policies under fair supervision.

If, however, your committee finally determine to recommend standard forms of policies, I strongly advise that you do not adopt the forms now proposed which have not received, and cannot receive within the limited time at your disposal, the careful consideration by practical insurance men which they require, and that you either postpone the adoption of standard forms of policies until the next session of the Legislature, or, better still, that you empower the Superintendent of Insurance to approve standard forms of policies, so that after some date to be fixed by law no forms of policies shall be used in this State which shall not have been approved by the Superintendent of Insurance.

Under this latter arrangement the companies will have an opportunity of improving their policy forms from year to year and varying their policies to meet the requirements of the public, while the Superintendent of Insurance will be in a position to protect the public against deceit or mistake by seeing to it that the forms of policies are fair and plain.

Limitation Upon New Business.

While it seems to me that theoretically any limitation upon the amount of business which an insurance company may take is unwise, nevertheless, subject to one qualification stated below, I offer no objection to the limitation you propose as the policy which has been adopted by the present management of the Equitable Society will in all probability keep the new business within that limit. I do not recommend, however, that you modify your restrictions so that an insurance company in any year may take enough new business to make good the reduction suffered during the previous year by terminations, even though that amount exceed the arbitrary limit which you propose. In other words, I think the three large life insurance companies should be free to maintain the present aggregate amount of life insurance outstanding.

I think that a requirement that the contingency reserve of large companies should be but 2 per cent. of the legal reserve would be a serious menace to the safety of policy holders, and that any law fixing a maximum limit upon the contingency reserve is unwise. Indeed, it would be much safer for the interests of the policy holders to establish a minimum limit which must be reached before any dividends can be paid. There is a general agreement among actuaries that a contingency reserve of 2 per cent. is entirely inadequate, and that a company with such a reserve would furnish no adequate provision against the inevitable fluctuations in the market value of the securities. If such a law had been in force in 1893 and 1903 many important companies would have become insolvent with a contingency reserve of only 2 per cent.

I am clearly of the opinion, however, that it is unwise to fix any maximum for the contingency reserve. Upon this proposition officers and actuaries are, as I am informed, a unit. Competition and the natural desire of insurance companies to make favorable returns upon their policies will certainly insure as liberal a distribution of surplus as is consistent with safety.

I think it will be a serious injury to the insurance business if the large mutual companies are not permitted to issue non-participating policies. Almost all of the strong life insurance companies of the country are doing the major part of their business upon the participating plan. Yet there is a demand for non-participating policies, and if they cannot be issued by the strong companies those desiring them will be forced to go to the weaker companies. Furthermore, experience has shown that the non-participating business of the important life insurance companies has been conducted upon a safe basis, and has indeed resulted in substantial profits which have inured to the benefits of the holders of participating policies. Such profits have resulted in no injustice to the holders of non-participating policies because they paid a stipulated price for their insurance, and received what their money called for.

I entirely agree with the recommendation of your committee that the total expenses of insurance companies should be limited to the total loadings upon the premiums, and that some limitation should be placed upon the cost of securing new business. It seems to me, however, that in a number of respects the precise scheme of limitation which you propose is unworkable.

The absolute requirement that the cost of securing new business each year shall be kept within the limit that you propose at the risk of the officers of the company being subject to a misdemeanor in case of failure to do so, makes it almost impossible to allow for the inevitable uncertainties of this business.

It is generally agreed among insurance men that if your plan of limiting the expenses of securing new business is adopted insurance business will be paralyzed so long as the law is in force. It seems to me that the purposes you have in view will be accomplished if after requiring that the aggregate expense of a company must be kept within the aggregate loading, you then prescribe the maximum percentage of premium which may be paid to agents by way of commission, salary, or other compensation for securing new business. I refrain from discussing this subject more fully because it will be presented in greater detail by the actuaries.

Deferred Dividend Insurance.

While the more I study the life insurance business the stronger is my conviction that deferred dividend insurance presents many advantages that there is a real demand for it, and that it should be permitted, I feel that the subject has been already so fully presented that its further discussion should be left to the actuaries.

I think that a life insurance company should be permitted to take a participation in a syndicate holding securities which it is authorized to purchase. In such a case a syndicate participation would ordinarily simply be a means of purchasing the securities at the lowest price. To prevent an insurance company from participating in such a syndicate would be to compel it to pay a higher price for its bonds than is paid by the participants in the syndicate. If your committee deem such a restriction necessary it might restrict the participation of insurance companies in syndicates to syndicates holding securities which the insurance companies are authorized by law to purchase, and under which the insurance companies would be permitted by the terms of the syndicate agreement to withdraw the bonds for investment.

While the officers and members of financial committees of life insurance companies should be prohibited from participating in a syndicate selling securities to their company, I question your proposal that Directors of life insurance companies who are not officers or members of financial committees should be prohibited from having an interest in such syndicates. Life insurance companies require upon their Boards of Directors a certain number of men of standing who have experience in investments. Such men, as a rule, are interested in large syndicates by which issues of securities are marketed. They could not be expected to serve upon insurance boards if by so doing they would be compelled to forego those legitimate sources of profit which are entirely independent of insurance companies with which they are connected.

The importance of the subject is my apology for trespassing upon your time with so long a letter. Very truly yours,

PAUL MORTON, President.

HOW THEY REGARD THE BILLS.

Opinions of Some Legislators After the Insurance Hearing.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 9.—Here are some of the opinions expressed by legislators on the insurance bills:

STEFFENS, Assemblyman, New York—I am in favor of legislation which will conserve the interests of the policy holders. I also desire to have the interests of the small underwriters protected.

CHARLES, Assemblyman, Montgomery—The people of the State want insurance legislation that will protect the interests of all the companies, the underwriters, great and small, and the policy holders. But to the interests of the people who put their hard-earned dollars into a life insurance policy must we, after all, especially look.

MURPHY, Assemblyman, Kings—The two issues most vital, in my opinion, as these bills now read, are those relating to expense accounts and the limitation of business. Plenty of time should be given to learning the merits of those sections. But, above all things, the interests of the policy holders must be conserved.

SMITH, Assemblyman, New York—I am not satisfied with that section which limits the amount of business. But, above all, protect the interests of the policy holders and the small agents.

COX, Assemblyman, Erie—As near as I can determine the bills in the main have the support of the legislators. Of course, there will have to be some amendments.

WHITLEY, Assemblyman, Monroe—Legislation that will protect the policy holders is the great desideratum. These bills are designed to protect them so far as the wisdom of the committee extended, and if by amendments they can be further perfected, let that be done.

RIORDAN, Senator—So far as I am able to judge at this time, I have heard nothing in the addresses that would convince me that any changes in the bills as drawn should be made.

COGGESHALL, Senator—While I am for the bills as reported in general, I am against any provision that seeks to deprive the agents of their livelihood.

GRADY, Senator—It would not do for me to make any statement at this time, but I may say that I was much impressed with the address made by the Actuary of the Equitable.

WILL SUE HAMILTON.

New York Life Would Recover on Payments Authorized by McCall.

The Fowler Investigating Committee of the New York Life Insurance Company held a long executive session yesterday afternoon in the building of the Hanover Bank. The committee decided that the company should bring suit against Andrew Hamilton for the recovery of money paid to him on the authority of the late President, John A. McCall. At the end of the meeting this official statement was issued:

In view of the fact that the special committee has reported upon the Hamilton matter and the Board of Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company has directed a suit to be begun against him, the committee does not feel that it can ask him to come before it, but it has written him a letter saying that if he desires to be heard it would be very glad to give him a hearing.

The committee refused to give out the letter addressed to Hamilton. It was said that the suit had not been started, but that it would soon be.

COAL FACTIONS SOUGHT AID OF PRESIDENT

Robbins Tells How He and Mitchell Got Peace Letter.

HAD WHITE HOUSE ON 'PHONE

Independents Will Aid the Pittsburg Company to Resist Steel Trust's Demands.

PITTSBURG, March 9.—When the coal operators of the Pittsburg district go to the general conference at Indianapolis on March 19 with the operators of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, they will take a stand as a body. This action was determined at the meeting called by Francis L. Robbins, which was held in this city to-day.

A sensation was sprung at the meeting by a demand made of Mr. Robbins, who was presiding, for an explanation of how President Roosevelt came to enlist in the pending controversy between the miners and the operators. The demand, it is said, was made by George B. Magoon, Vice President and General Manager of the Pittsburg & Westmoreland Coal Company, one of the largest of the independent coal companies.

Mr. Robbins said the whole matter was accomplished as a result of a conference with John Mitchell while they were in New York. The situation was serious, and both agreed that it was necessary to get another meeting of the inter-State conference.

Mr. Mitchell went to the long-distance telephone and called up the President at the White House. After explaining the status of the matter to him, he suggested that he write a letter to Mr. Robbins urging that a new conference be called.

He also asked the President to talk the matter over with Robbins, and, without changing the call, Mr. Robbins went on the line and arranged for the letter to be written which would be the basis of the second call of the general conference.

This was on Monday, Feb. 24, and the following day, Feb. 25, Mr. Robbins received the letter from President Roosevelt, and the call for another convention followed. This, Mr. Robbins explained, was the story of the President's intervention.

In the course of the conference to-day the independent operators assured the Pittsburg Coal Company that they would stand by it in resisting the demands of the United States Steel Corporation. If a strike comes and the steel corporation takes its contract, which calls for not less than 8,000,000 tons a year for twenty-five years from the Pittsburg Coal Company, the independent operators will refuse to fill it.

F. B. Bush, President of the Consolidated Coal Company of Illinois, and A. Cunyngam of Cincinnati, representing the Ohio operators, were at the meeting. They pledged the operators of their districts to stand by the Pittsburg men in refusing to grant any advance and to help the Pitssburg company in its battle with the steel corporation.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to-day sent representatives to the leading operators of this city and asked for advice in the matter of stocking coal. Each operator advised that the road should begin laying up a supply at once. F. L. Robbins, President of the Pittsburg Coal Company, is quoted as saying:

"The situation has become most critical, and it is the part of wisdom to prepare for a shut-down. If a strike comes the road will be able to continue its business. If the trouble is settled the stock of coal can be readily used up anyhow."

Acting in this advice, the road has begun preparations for creating a reserve supply of fuel. Notices have already been sent to all shippers that all coal in transit will be seized if a strike is declared.

The strike is already on in the Irwin field, where about 50,000 miners are employed, mostly non-union. A week or more ago a half dozen union men were discharged. Three hundred others struck at once. The trouble threatens to spread all through the region, and the men are clamoring for organizers to be sent into the field. In the event of a strike nearly all these men will lay down their tools on April 1. The men in this district now favor a strike, although at first they were opposed to it. They are insisting on an advance.

The presence of one or two Federal Secret Service detectives at the Ashland House while President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers was conferring on Thursday with President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor caused some comment yesterday. One of them was a member of the bodyguard which accompanied President Roosevelt to different places in this city when he was last in New York.

Mitchell, when told of the presence of the detectives, said he knew nothing about the matter or why their presence should have any connection with him. It is known that detectives have been around the Ashland House most of the time since he came here. Mitchell had another conference with Gompers yesterday.

LOST IN THE TENDERLOIN.

Chubby Five-Year-Old Finds a Girl Protector, Who Grieves with Her.

Birdie Dawson, young and pretty, of 129 East Fiftieth Street, walked into the Tenderloin Station early last night crying. Behind her, with awe-stricken face and chubby finger stuck into her mouth, followed a five-year-old girl who seemed in doubt whether to cry or run.

"Here's a poor little girl who's lost," said Birdie between sobs, when Capt. Hodgins asked her what the trouble was. "I've been walking around for two hours trying to find out where she lives, but I can't." And Birdie began to sob again.

"Lost girl, eh?" said the Captain with mock severity. "Don't you know that you're liable to be locked up for kidnapping that baby?"

"No, I didn't," answered Birdie through her tears. "She's a sweet little thing, and I just had to take care of her."

"What's your name, little one?" asked Hodgins, leaning over and looking down at the waif.

"Mith Luthy Grissen," she replied proudly, taking her finger out of her mouth and then promptly putting it back again.

Capt. Hodgins called a policeman and told him to take the child around to Thirty-second Street, where the child said she lived. As the policeman started out the door with the waif his charge began to scream for her companion. Birdie looked around, and, seeing the baby's terror, cried, too, and then accompanied the policeman.

The parents of Lucy Griffen, at 248 West Thirtieth Street, joyfully received the child as their own.

STEUNENBERG MURDER PLOT.

Three of the Prisoners Arraigned—Twenty Witnesses to Testify.

BOISE, Idaho, March 9.—Charles H. Moyer, William D. Haywood, and George A. Pettibone were arraigned this forenoon before Judge Frank Smith at Caldwell under the indictments charging them with the murder of former Gov. Frank Steunenberg by exploding a dynamite bomb at the gate of his house as he was about to pass into the yard. The pleas of the prisoners will be heard next Friday.

Moyer, Haywood, Pettibone, and "Jack" Simpkins, the last still at large, are indicted jointly, being charged with having murdered Steunenberg. There is in the indictment no mention of the Western Federation of Miners, nor any charge of conspiracy. So far as the indictment shows, each is accused of having personally participated in the crime charged.

The names of twenty witnesses, including Harry Orchard, who has confessed to his part of the crime, are indorsed on the indictment.

MARCH 1906

ANTI-COAL TRUST CASE REOPENED FOR HEARING

Commerce Commission Acts Under Supreme Court Decision.

MAY BREAK THE MONOPOLY

Hearst Lawyers Confident the Anthracite Combination Now Can Be Effectively Attacked.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—A new and important turn was given to-day to the proceedings designed to break the combination of anthracite carrying roads. Acting under the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court that a railroad cannot grant to itself lower rates on products it owns than it gives to other shippers, the Inter-State Commerce Commission reopened the case of William R. Hearst against the coal roads.

Voluminous testimony has been taken and exhaustive arguments made before the commission in this case. It was supposed that the whole matter was closed, and the commission was preparing to make its report when the Supreme Court decision was handed down. It is the belief of the lawyers for the complaint that under this decision the anthracite monopoly can be effectively attacked and therefore the commission was asked to hear fresh arguments.

This decision was handed down by the commission to-day:

"Pending consideration by the commission of the record in this proceeding and the preparation of its report and opinion herein, the Supreme Court of the United States on Feb. 19, 1906, rendered its decision upon appeals from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Virginia, entitled 'New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, appellant, vs. the Inter-State Commerce Commission,' and 'the Inter-State Commerce Commission, appellant, vs. the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company,' relating to the purchase and sale of coal and the transportation thereof by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company, in which decision provisions of the act to regulate commerce as amended are construed and applied;

"And it appearing to the commission that rulings announced by the Supreme Court in that decision have important bearing upon issues in this proceeding arising upon the practices of defendant carriers in relation to the purchase and sale of anthracite coal, the transportation of such coal, and the compensation actually received by them for such transportation;

"And it further appearing to the commission that such issues, presenting questions seriously affecting the operations and business policies of the carriers, as well as the interests of shippers and the general public, should not be determined by the commission without further argument directed especially to the application in this proceeding of the law as interpreted and declared by the Supreme Court since the case was heard and submitted,'

"It is ordered:

"That this case may be and is hereby reopened and assigned for reargument at Washington on the 29th day of March, 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M."

On Feb. 19, 1906, the Supreme Court decided the cases of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company against the Inter-State Commerce Commission and the commission against the Chesapeake & Ohio Company, declaring unlawful any act granting and concealing secret rebates by railroad companies through their double status of dealer and carrier.

Under the decision, however, the railroads were not enjoined from dealing in coal, and it was not declared to be unlawful for a railroad to mine or sell coal or to deal by purchase and sale in other commodities transported over its lines.

The case decided arose out of a contract by which the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad agreed to deliver to the New Haven Road in New Haven 60,000 tons of coal at a price below the market price of coal at the mines, plus the cost of transportation. The published rate from the mines to Newport News was $1.45 a ton, while at the price for which the coal was sold the Chesapeake & Ohio Road would have received for its services only 28 cents a ton. The road's attorney set up the plea that there was no rebate, no departure from the published rate; that the loss of more than $1 a ton came out of the purchase price and was voluntarily borne by the Chesapeake & Ohio Road as a method of compensating the New Haven Road for failure to carry out a former contract for the sale of coal, fulfillment of which had been prevented by a strike.

The fundamental principle of the decision was that since the Inter-State Commerce act forbade common carriers, directly or indirectly, by special rate, rebate, drawback, or other device, to collect or receive a greater or less compensation from one shipper than from another, it could not in reason be held that the carrier could take himself out from the statute by simply electing to be dealing in or transporting commodities of that character.

TO LOOK UP EXTRA FEES.

House Committee Wants to Know If U. S. District Attorney Here Got Them.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The House Committee on Judiciary to-day authorized a favorable report on a resolution introduced by Mr. Sullivan of Massachusetts, calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for information about any extra fees paid in customs cases to the United States District Attorney for the Southern District of New York.

The resolution calls for information as to what sums were paid between Jan. 1, 1898, and Jan. 1, 1906, to the New York District Attorney as extra compensation in customs cases originating prior to the Customs Administrative act of June, 1890, stating the amounts paid in each. He is also called on to state what was the character of the services rendered.

It is said by those who favored the resolution that $219,895 has been paid in extra compensation to the New York District Attorney between the dates mentioned.

Califf, Artillery Corps; Henry S. Turrill, Deputy Surgeon General; Crosby P. Miller, Deputy Quartermaster General. Colonel to be Brigadier General—John W. Bubb, Twelfth Infantry.

merits and you have the votes," fairly shrieked Beveridge. He was as white as a sheet, and kept jumping up and down in his place and breaking in on Foraker until the latter tartly reminded him that he had the floor. "Now I want it," he added, "for a few minutes without being interrupted."

This refusal of the floor compelled Beveridge to take his seat. Senator Dubois made an earnest appeal for an amendment against polygamy. Later his amendment, which was fortified by a most complete and comprehensive declaration against the methods that have been followed by the Mormon Church was adopted unanimously.

When the bill was reported to the Senate Mr. Burrows renewed his motion to strike out the part of the bill relating to Arizona and New Mexico, and this time it prevailed by the vote of 37 to 35, as follows:

The Line-Up of Senators.

Stone, (D.)	Warner, (R.)
Tallaferro, (D.)	Wetmore, (R.)—35
Teller, (D.)
Tillman, (D.)—37

The changes from the first vote were Scott, who voted, and Overman, who transferred his pair with Clarke of Arkansas to Carmack, and voted in the affirmative. The bill as amended was then passed by unanimous vote.

The analysis of the vote by which the amendment which shut Arizona and New Mexico out of the bill and which was the really vital action in the contest, shows that 12 Republican Senators voted for the amendment and 34 Republican Senators against it. Twenty-five Democratic Senators voted for it.

The Republican Senators voting for the amendment were Alger, Bulkeley, Burrows, Carter, Flint, Foraker, Gallinger, Hansbrough, Heyburn, Perkins, and Spooner. All the Democrats present voted for it. Clarke of Arkansas, who is the leader of the so-called "White House Democrats," was the only deserter from his party, and he was absent and paired.

Representative Babcock of Wisconsin, who led the fight in the House against the forced admission of New Mexico and Arizona, said to-night:

"I have no hesitation whatever in saying that if the bill had come to the House with the referendum amendment it would have been passed by a vote of 4 to 1. Now the second amendment is a great deal better than the other, and it will be concurred in by an overwhelming vote. It is unnecessary for me to say that when I say this I mean that this will be the result if no extraordinary pressure and duress is exerted to prevent the House acting as it believes. I have heard it said that the President had indicated an intention to veto the bill if it came to him with the Foraker referendum amendment on it. That is another thing from the measure as it will now be sent to him."

As amended by the Senate the bill provides for the creation of the State of Oklahoma out of Oklahom and Indian Territories upon the adoption of a Constitution. The State is given the usual quota of executive, judicial, and legislative officers, two United States Senators, and five members in the lower House. A constitutional convention with 110 members, fifty-five of which are to be chosen by each of the Territories comprising the State, is provided for, and male citizens or male Indians 21 years of age are made eligible to membership in it. There is an especial provision protecting the Indians in their rights and continuing the prerogative of the National Government to control their affairs.

The sale of intoxicating liquors in what is now Indian Territory is prohibited for twenty-one years, and longer unless the Constitution is changed.

Sections 16 and 36 of each township of land in Oklahoma are set aside for the benefit of the common school system, as is also 5 per cent. of the proceeds of the sale of public lands. There is an appropriation of $5,000,000 from the National Treasury for the benefit of the schools.

Provision is made for the support of higher education and charitable institutions; two districts for United States Courts, one in Oklahoma and the other in Indian Territory, are provided for. Guthrie is made the temporary seat of Government, but the House provision continuing it in that capacity until 1915 was eliminated.

FALSE, SAYS WRIGHT.

Never Got a Telegram from Beveridge About Statehood, He Wires.

Tucson, Arizona, March 9, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I had no request from Senator Beveridge for 500 telegrams in favor of the Statehood bill or any telegrams. If Mayor Manning or any one else sent such a statement to Washington its only purpose was to deceive.

JOHN B. WRIGHT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

TUCSON, Ariz., March 9.—John B. Wright, former City Attorney and leader of the joint State faction, stated that he had received a message from Senator Beveridge saying he intended making the speech of his life on Statehood and that he could make good use of 500 telegrams urging the passage of the bill. A committee was organized, with former Mayor Schumacher as Chairman, to draft and send the telegrams to Beveridge.

The sentiment of the community is overwhelmingly against joint Statehood, only a few disgruntled Republicans favoring it. I sent the substance of what Wright repeated when soliciting signatures to Delegate Smith with the request that he convey the information to Senator Foraker.

Tuscon is celebrating the defeat of joint Statehood with great enthusiasm to-night.

L. H. MANNING, Mayor of Tucson.

is broken, and there is only a launch service between the two islands. As a result of the interruption of the cable service, further details of the battle are not available, but the military authorities are endeavoring to obtain them speedily.

Apparently there will be no more fighting on the Island of Jolo. On Mindanao Federal troops and constabulary are pursuing hostile Moros, and probably some unimportant engagements will follow.

WAR DEPARTMENT GETS NEWS.

Taft Says Wood Had No Idea of What Was Going to Happen.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Not because of the casualties among the American forces engaged, though they were more numerous than in any battle in the Philippines for some years, but rather because of the extraordinarily large number of the natives killed, the news of the battle of Mount Dajo was received at the War Department (and at the Navy Department as well, for the bluejackets were in the thick of the fighting) with intense interest.

The first news of the battle came through press reports, though at the same time the cipher experts of the War Department were busily engaged in trying to unravel a report from Manila. This message was from Col. Andrews, the military secretary at Army Headquarters at Manila, who had received his data by inter-island cable from Zamboango. The telegram was as follows:

Military Secretary, Washington, D. C.:

Following condensed from Major Gen. Wood's dispatch from Zamboango, March 9:

Troops, naval detachment, constabulary, Col. Joseph W. Duncan commanding, attacked Moro fortifications in crater on Mount Dajo, near Jolo. Action lasted afternoon March 6 until morning March 8. Mount Dajo 2,100 feet high, last 400 feet angle 50 degrees. Lava ridges, heavy timber. Artillery lifted by block and tackle 500 feet. Moros depredated from stronghold for last eight months and resisted to the death. About 600 killed. Major Gen. Wood and Brig. Gen. Tasker H. Bliss were present throughout the action.

Killed—Army, 15 enlisted. Capt. Tyree R. Rivers wounded in thigh, slight; First Lieut. Gordon Johnston, wounded in shoulder, serious; First Lieut. Ernest H. Agnew, wounded in hand, slight; First Lieut. Wyley T. Conway, eye, slight; thirty-two enlisted men. Names enlisted men killed and wounded will be reported later.

Navy—Wounded, Ensign H. D. Cooke, in foot, serious; Coxswain Gilmore, elbow, slight; one seaman, slight.

Constabulary—Killed, three enlisted. John R. White, wounded in thigh, serious.

Total killed, 18; wounded, 52, (82?). Troops, naval detachment, and constabulary all highly recommended.

ANDREWS,
(In absence of Division Commander.)

STATEMENT BY MR. TAFT.

Secretary Taft was at a Cabinet meeting when the official cablegram was finally deciphered, and a copy of it was sent at once to the executive offices. The President and the members of the Cabinet listened with the keenest interest to its reading by Mr. Taft. After his return to the War Department Mr. Taft, commenting upon the engagement, said:

"Gen. Wood appears to have been there by accident, or rather without any idea of what was going to happen. I had a cablegram from him saying there were some matters calling him into the southern islands, but that he would not be out of reach of the cable, and I suppose when he got there he found the trouble on. Gen. Bliss, who as commander of the Department of Mindanao exercised military jurisdiction over the Jolo group, was probably already at Zamboango when Gen. Wood arrived there on his trip of inspection.

"Here's Wood's cablegram: 'Manila, Feb. 26.—Leaving for Zamboango. Be absent eight days. Civil and military business preparatory to turning over duties as Governor of Moro provinces. Shall be constantly in cable communication.'"

This telegram from Gen. Wood was produced by the Secretary in response to a suggestion that possibly Gen. Wood went to Jolo with the intention of organizing a punitive expedition against the Moros in the mountain fastnesses, who had held out for the past two years against the American forces.

The Secretary said that he had made two trips to Jolo, the latter in the course of his visit to the Philippines last Summer. Refreshing his recollection by some of the official figures at hand, he said:

"The Island of Jolo is 326 square miles in area, with a population of 44,718.

"In the whole of Jolo there are only 1,270 civilized inhabitants. Jolo is the most important island of the archipelago of that name, lying southwest of Zamboango. The surface is covered with hills, which in a few cases rise to the dignity of mountains.

"The Jolo Archipelago is inhabited by two races, the Jolos and the Sismas, the former a Malay people long inhabiting the Jolo Islands, who were converted to Mohammedanism. The Sultan lives near the City of Jolo, and is the nominal head of all Moros there and in Mindanao. The latter recognize him, however, only at their convenience—when it suits their purposes. Two or three Dattos have always resisted the Sultan's claims, and there has always been a state of war between them. The Sultan's control over them, therefore, is quite limited, and, with two or three warring factions in the islands, the jealousy of the support of the Americans for one side or the other is quite enough to keep them in a constant state of turbulence and fighting.

"I suppose one of the factions thought it had gotten together men enough and that they were absolutely immune, so they were just cleaned out.

"By the way, it is worth noting that the constabulary, which is highly praised in Gen. Wood's dispatch, was, in that section, made up of Moros themselves. It has never been difficult to enlist them in our service to fight against their own people when called upon, probably owing to the number of factions in the islands.

"In this particular case the heavy mortality among the Moros engaged was probably due to their methods of fighting. It would have been impossible to have inflicted the same loss on the northern Filipinos. The latter have a way of disappearing before the troops in the interstices of the jungles and conducting guerrilla warfare. But the Moros, on the appearance of an enemy, sound the alarm and gather everybody inside their forts, where they will fight to the end. Probably the loss in this case was caused by the fire of our artillery. The bluejackets were probably called upon to assist in getting this artillery up the steep heights of the mountain because of their knowledge of blocks and tackle.

"No, I have not the least fear that this movement will extend to the other islands, and, in fact, I think that the heavy blow struck the Moros will have a strongly deterrent effect upon them."

The news of the battle was particularly interesting to members of the House who were with the Taft expedition to the Philippines last Summer. Representative Longworth remarked on reading the message of Gen. Wood:

MOROS RELIGIOUS FANATICS.

"I remember that little island very well, indeed. We went all over it. It was there the Sultan of Sulu entertained us with an exhibition of the native sports, including buffalo fights. The inhabitants of the island are entirely uncivilized, being Mohammedans and religious fanatics of the most pronounced type. They have no military organizations and their fights are all inspired by religious beliefs.

"At any time a priest among any of the mountain bands can inspire an uprising, and then a swoop on the lower country will be made. The belief that if killed in battle they will go directly to heaven makes them desperate and anxious to fight to the death."

"The soldiers told me," said Representative Cooper of Wisconsin, "that they were exceedingly glad when our party went aboard ship from that island. The natives there are the most treacherous of any in the group. Our people kept them down for some time by telling them that whenever they were killed in battle the Americans would bury them with pigs in their graves. They believed that would prevent them from going to heaven."

Assuming that the American organizations were up to their normal strength, there were about 490 soldiers in the action besides the naval contingent, the strength of which is so far unknown. It is believed, however, that owing to the sick list and other causes there were probably not more than 400 of the military engaged. The strength of the constabulary is unknown.

Ensign H. S. Cooke, Jr., who was wounded, commands the gunboat Pampanga, a craft of about 200 tons. Cooke is a native of the District of Columbia, but was appointed to the navy from New York, and his father lives at 166 West Fifty-fifth Street, in that city. He has been on duty on the Asiatic station since 1903, and because of his good record recently relieved Ensign Oscar F. Cooper in command of the Pampanga, of which boat, prior to that time, he had been executive officer.

MOROS A TURBULENT RACE.

Corbin Thinks They Will Make Trouble Till They Become Extinct.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—Major Gen. H. C. Corbin, who was recently in command of the Division of the Philippines, said to-day regarding the fight in Jolo:

"This encounter has no bearing on the Philippine situation. The Moros are religious fanatics and are not amenable to the influence of other peoples. They owe no allegiance except to their Mohammedan faith and are liable to cause trouble at any time.

"When an individual Moro feels what he calls an inspiration, he runs amuck and kills all the people he can. This condition has always existed, and, presumably, always will until the race becomes extinct. However, we are now educating many of their children, and from this enlightened generation there may soon spring a new and better type of Moro."

EX-ROUGH RIDER WOUNDED.

Lieut. Johnston Is a Personal Friend of the President.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 9.—Lieut. Gordon Johnston, Jr., who was wounded in the fight in Jolo, is a son of Gen. Robert D. Johnston of Birmingham, recently appointed Commissioner of the Federal Land Office at Montgomery. He is also a nephew of ex-Gov. Johnston of this State.

Lieut. Johnston was a member of the Rough Riders in the Spanish-American war, and is a personal friend of President Roosevelt.

Gen. and Mrs. Johnston received a dispatch to-night through the War Department stating that their son's wounds are not considered serious.

RAPS FAR-AWAY TREATMENT.

Dr. Crandall Scouts Claims of the Force-of-Lifers.

Can a physician tell what's the matter with you when you are in San Francisco and he is in New York? According to the testimony of a physician at the Force-of-Life hearing before Commissioner Ridgway yesterday, he can't. As the Force-of-Lifers had offered to give far-away treatment and to do many other more wonderful things, through the mails, Assistant United States Attorney Houghton called Dr. Floyd M. Crandall yesterday to testify that they couldn't.

The hearing was on the question whether or not there is sufficient evidence for Grand Jury consideration. Mrs. Laura M. Wilson, "Dr." W. W. Hadley, and Arthur H. Williams were on hand, together with persons who are said, by the accused persons, to have been benefited by the Force-of-Life treatment.

Dr. Crandall, who is a member of the County Medical Society, said he had never heard of "Dr." Hadley's being an expert in bacteriology or any other branch of medical science. He gave it as his opinion, moreover, that Hadley had not "revolutionized" the practice of medicine.

"Do you believe a physician can prescribe properly for a patient he has never seen?" Dr. Crandall was asked.

"No, he cannot—no matter how well informed he may be," was the reply.

Then Dr. Crandall looked at the Force-of-Life symptom blanks and said that when filled in they would not impart enough knowledge of a case to warrant a prescription.

The physician declared that a doctor should see the patient personally, feel his pulse, look at his tongue, &c. He was cross-examined by Clarence Lexow for the defense and then Mr. Houghton announced that the Government would rest its case. The hearing will go on this morning.

STOLE BONDS FOR SPITE.

So, Says Bookkeeper After They Are Found in His Room.

Charles Quitz, an assistant bookkeeper in the employ of C. B. Richard & Co., brokers at 31 Broadway, was held in the Tombs Court yesterday on the charge of stealing two $1,000 railroad bonds from his employers.

The bonds disappeared on March 2 from the desk of the firm's foreign correspondent. There are more than fifty clerks employed in the office. As there was no clue to the identity of the thief, all became objects of suspicion.

Detective Sergt. Herlihy, after watching the behavior of the men in the office, came to the conclusion that Quitz was the man. Yesterday morning Herlihy took the risk of breaking into the room occupied by the suspected clerk at 203 East Thirteenth Street. There he says he found an overcoat stolen from another clerk in the office of Richard & Co., but not the bonds.

Returning to the office and confronting Quitz with the overcoat, Herlihy scared him into making a confession. The bonds were then recovered from their hiding place in his room.

Quitz pleaded not guilty in court, and said that he had taken the bonds only to spite the foreign correspondent.

SHIP'S OFFICER FREED.

Kerwin, Who Shot a Sailor, Goes to His Boat, Which Waited.

After being exonerated by a Coroner's jury on the ground that he had acted in defense of his life, Elmer H. Kerwin, fourth officer of the steamship Massachusetts, who on Thursday shot and killed James Slocum, a member of the crew of the vessel, was discharged yesterday by Magistrate Tighe in the Butler Street Court, Brooklyn. Kerwin returned to his ship, which had delayed sailing and was waiting for him off Liberty Island.

Kerwin's story of the fight among the drunken sailors was corroborated by several witnesses.

Save a Fourth to a Third On ORIENTAL RUGS.

SINCE THE SALE STARTED LAST MONDAY a great many people have been making rather careful comparisons of the various Oriental Rug stocks in Brooklyn and New York. And if money talks, the verdict is very definitely in favor of the Oriental Rugs now offered in this March Sale for a fourth to a third under our regular prices.

If you have a little more than the ordinary knowledge of Oriental Rugs; if you have some especial Rug need you would be glad to fill—at a saving—come in to-day. We know, and we are glad to find it publicly verified, that such a sale as this would be practically impossible in any other store.

$6 to $11 Hamadans and Carabaghs at $4.50 to $8.50.

Average size, 2x3 to 2.6x4. One of the coarser weaves of Oriental Rugs, but very serviceable. Plain centers and allover effects, in the dark, rich shades.

$16.50 to $22 Shirvans at $11.50 to $16.75.

Average size, 3.6x5.6. These are among the best values of the Oriental Rug Sale.

$28 to $35 Kazaks at $16.75 to $25.

Average size, 3.4x6 to 3.8x8. Most everybody knows a Kazak from other weaves, because of the boldness of the designs and the thickness of the pile; just the Rug for hard service.

An Antique Persian Silk Carpet In a Bond Street Window.

This is a Carpet of the late 18th century with 11 borders. The large border in the middle of the smaller ones contains a wreath of sacred flowers with birds of Paradise. The smaller ones contain the flowers Levkoy, Iris and Violet, which in the symbolic Persian language mean the words "Ja Nabi" (Oh! Prophet).

The center contains the crest of the ancient Persian Kings of Iran, the crowned Falcon crushing a Snake, which signifies the conquest of the Medes by the Persians.

The characteristics of the entire design strongly resemble the ancient Chinese. The Rug is one of the best examples of the very ancient Persian workmanship. The close relationship of the ancient Chinese and Persians is furthermore demonstrated by the flowing branches of horse hair tails spread over the coat of arms in the center. At the top of the horse tails is spread the fan of sacred feathers, which was held over the throne of ancient Persian rulers by slaves, and is an emblem of supreme power.

MARCH 1906

MOROCCAN PROBLEM MAY BE SOLVED TO-DAY

Germany Now Eager to Bring Negotiations to Conclusion.

FRANCE NOT YET SATISFIED

But It Is Believed the Way for an Agreement Is Opened—Surprise Caused by Kaiser's Surrender.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cables. Copyright, 1906.

ALGECIRAS, March 9.—After a day's reflection the favorable impression made by the Austrian proposal remains intact. Though it can hardly be accepted in its present form, it is generally regarded as furnishing a terrain d'entente. Its chief significance is that it shows a decided change in the attitude of Germany, for no one doubts that the proposal emanated from Berlin.

Until yesterday Germany had shown herself so unbending that her professions of a strong desire for an amicable solution were received here with extreme skepticism, and there was a universal conviction that for the rupture which seemed inevitable she must be held responsible. All this is now changed, and it is to be hoped that France will continue to show the spirit of conciliation in which she has hitherto conducted the negotiations.

The Austrian proposal does not give France all she desires. Excepting one town from the general scheme of intrusting the organization of the police to France and Spain is a disagreeable anomaly. Even more anomalous is the idea that the Inspector at the excepted port, who is to be Swiss or Dutch, should be at the same time instructor of the entire police force, and that it would be to him that the French instructors would have to report, but these and other anomalies may be removed by friendly negotiations.

What is chiefly feared is that the French should, in accordance with well-known peculiarities of their national character, abandon the practical ground on which the negotiations can best be conducted and introduce into the discussion general principles and abstract terms. A discussion of principles would inevitably lead to a rupture, and the main question for the moment is whether the new French Cabinet will have the wisdom to let dangerous sleeping dogs lie.

BERLIN, March 9.—Yesterday's optimism in regard to the prospects of an agreement at Algeciras continues, and it is hoped that at the meeting of the conference to-morrow all doubts of a favorable issue will be dispelled. There is now as great eagerness to bring the negotiations to a conclusion as there formerly was to spin them out in the hope of some favorable turn of fortune.

It is hoped that the progress achieved to-morrow will be so decisive as to render the subsequent labors of the conference a matter of details rather than essentials.

PARIS, March 9.—According to trustworthy information received in Paris to-day Germany is now seeking with precipitation an issue to the deadlock at the Algeciras Conference. We are not yet out of the woods, but the change in the attitude of Germany has been as manifest as it was unexpected.

Some credit must perhaps be given to the milder methods of Herr von Tschirsky, the new German Minister of Foreign Affairs, since whose advent Baron Holstein's power for mischief has been on the wane.

Whereas a week ago a satisfactory result of the conference was all but despaired of in Paris, some hope has now been restored, though as yet there is no trace of optimism.

PARIS, March 9.—The Temps, which usually voices Government opinion, says regarding the latest developments at Algeciras:

"We can affirm in the most categorical manner that neither we nor Spain can accept the Austrian combination—first, because it sets aside our special interest; second, because it is contradictory, and, third, because it is impracticable. But it is none the less evident that, the mandate once given for Franco-Spanish officers, we shall guarantee that the powers represented at Algeciras will receive periodical information of the working of the police by other channels than those the Austrians propose.

"These being the conditions, it is not likely that Germany will cling obstinately to the only solution unacceptable to us, especially when we are most willing to consider all others which arrive at the same result by another way.

"The situation is quite clear. France's position remains, and will remain, as M. Revoil defined it yesterday. All further concessions are inadmissible. Thanks to our firmness, the affair has now reached a positive stage, where if the same firmness is maintained a solution will be arrived at, and we are able to say that this position will not be abandoned."

ALGECIRAS, March 9.—Expressions by the French and German delegates this evening give the impression that a compromise on the points hitherto deadlocked may be reached at to-morrow's sitting of the conference.

The German delegates have now abandoned the rigid standpoint which they maintained relative to the Moroccan Bank, declaring their readiness to grant to French subscribers to the existing loans two shares of the capital of the bank instead of one share, as originally insisted on.

SARRIEN CABINET LIKELY.

Bourgeois Will Be Foreign Minister, No Matter Who Is Premier.

PARIS, March 9.—President Fallières received Jean Sarrien, ex-Minister of Justice, this afternoon and offered to him the task of forming a Cabinet.

M. Sarrien said if he obtained the co-operation of MM. Bourgeois and Poincaré he would accept the task. M. Sarrien's conferences with M. Bourgeois, M. Poincaré, and other statesmen continued until late this evening. Although giving hope of eventual success, they did not furnish sufficient promise of co-operation to enable him to announce to the President, whom he saw at 11 o'clock, his ability to construct a Cabinet.

The principal obstacle encountered is the difficulty of obtaining the consent of M. Poincaré to accept a portfolio. Efforts to overcome this reluctance continue. M. Sarrien is assured of M. Bourgeois's support, and, with M. Poincaré's assent obtained, the allotment of the rest of the portfolios will be an easy task.

If a Sarrien Cabinet is formed M. Sarrien will take the Premiership and the portfolio of Justice, M. Bourgeois will be Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Poincaré Minister of Finance or of the Interior, and M. Thomson Minister of the Navy.

M. Bourgeois is assured of the portfolio of Foreign Affairs in whatever Ministry is formed to succeed the Rouvier Cabinet.

Friendly Message Sent Through the New Charge at Washington.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Dr. Gabiras Guzman, recently appointed Chargé d'Affaires of Venezuela, to succeed N. Veloz-Goiticoa, was formally presented to President Roosevelt this afternoon. The presentation took place in the Blue Room of the White House. It is unusual for the President thus to receive a diplomat below the rank of Minister, but in this case an exception was made.

In the course of the conversation with the President Dr. Guzman assured him of the good will of Venezuela and of the great desire of its Government to keep in friendly relations with the United States. He also brought to the President an expression of personal friendship on the part of President Castro. Mr. Roosevelt thanked him and said he hoped Dr. Guzman would express for him the same feelings toward the Chief Executive of Venezuela.

The question of arbitration between Venezuela and France was not brought up, but it can be stated authoritatively that Venezuela is quite willing that her differences with France be given to a court of arbitration for settlement.

TURKS STILL PROCRASTINATE.

American Legation Proposes to Apply More Urgent Pressure.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 9.—The Porte has informed the American Legation that orders have been sent to Beirut to admit duty free all consignments for the American schools in Syria. The same note declares that the Porte is ready to accord the same official recognition to American as to other schools if a request to that effect is presented to the proper department for each institution separately.

This is not satisfactory to the American Legation, where it is considered to indicate a further attempt at procrastination, as similar requests for the recognition of certain schools presented to the Ministry a year ago have not yet been granted.

The legation now proposes to apply more urgent pressure for the recognition of the four most important educational establishments.

BRITISH EMPIRE'S GROWTH.

3,500,000 Square Miles Added in Forty Years—Population, 400,000,000.

LONDON, March 9.—As the outcome of a suggestion by Joseph Chamberlain when he was Colonial Secretary, a unique Blue Book has been published recording and tabulating in 300 pages forty years' growth of the British Empire as revealed by the census of 1901.

The Blue Book shows that since 1861 the area of the empire has increased from 8,500,000 to nearly 12,000,000 square miles, and the population from 250,000,000 to 400,000,000. Only 54,000,000 of these are whites and 58,000,000 are Christians.

The tables convey interesting information as to the birth rates, the proportion of sexes, religions, and social conditions in various parts of the empire.

JAPANESE ENVOY IN RUSSIA.

Minister Motono Welcomed in St. Petersburg by Our Ambassador.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 9.—The new Japanese Minister, M. Motono, and his suite arrived here from Paris to-day and were welcomed at the railroad station by American Ambassador Meyer and Second Secretary Bliss. There was no demonstration.

The Minister drove immediately to the house on the French Quay, which was formerly occupied by the Japanese Legation, and which had been prepared for his reception.

DOMINGO REBELS' TREACHERY

Fight After Agreeing to Surrender—A General Killed.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The State Department has received a cablegram dated Monte Cristi, Santo Domingo, yesterday, saying that on the preceding day, while the terms of surrender were being carried out between the Government forces and the revolutionists, the latter acted in bad faith and there was a fight, in which two officers, including Gen. Cepin, and six men were killed.

The revolutionists escaped to the bushes.

NAN-CHANG STILL EXCITED.

Another Outbreak Feared—Chinese Say Magistrate Was Murdered.

PEKING, March 9.—The settlement of the responsibility for the massacre of French Catholic and English Protestant missionaries at Nan-Chang, capital of the Province of Kiang-Si, on Feb. 24 is likely to be difficult and continues to excite almost unprecedented interest.

The Chinese profess to believe that a Catholic priest stabbed the local Magistrate, while the foreigners are equally certain that the Magistrate committed suicide as a protest against the Catholic demands and for the purpose of arousing the people. Such an act is in no wise unusual with the Chinese.

The Government is dispatching Taotai Liang, Director of Railways, to inquire into the case. Liang was educated abroad and has had much dealing with foreigners, but it is admitted that he has a delicate mission. If his report favors the Christians further trouble is probable. The inhabitants of Nan-Chang are still hostile and demand that the French pay funeral honors to the dead Magistrate.

The officials of Nan-Chang protest against the presence of foreign gunboats, fearing that they will provoke hostilities.

GRANT TELLS OF A PLOT TO SEIZE HIM IN LUZON

Invited to Dinner, He Went, but with 30 Scouts.

THEY TOOK 420 PRISONERS

Tells Graduates' Club That Navy Wanted to Let Go in the Philippines—Coghlan Retorts.

"America in the Philippines" was the subject discussed by the Graduates' Club after their dinner last night in the Aldine Club's quarters, 111 Fifth Avenue. A warlike turn was given to the evening by the reminiscences of the early days of American occupation by Gen. Grant and Rear Admiral Coghlan. Other speakers dwelt on the progress made and the reforms introduced.

"In Colonial administration," said James B. Reynolds, "we have been pioneers in the very high estimate we have put on education for the native races and the extent to which we have granted them self-government."

Gen. Grant said:

"My good friend Woodford kept treading on the corns of the Spaniards until our statesmen in their wisdom decided on war. Then our navy took the Philippines, and we poor fellows of the army were sent to help them when they wanted to let go."

He went on to describe a conspiracy that had been formed against him in Luzon. "I thought something was up," he said. "So I stopped the mail carrier. We had a military government and no mail laws, so I opened the mail, read it, and sealed it up again. From that time the mail always passed through my headquarters. The conspirators had appointed a Governor for Luzon and Alcaldes and Presidentes for all the towns.

"The whole thing was to come off with the capture of myself at a dinner. I had my officers mark down the conspirators, and I accepted the invitation to dinner. I never refuse an invitation to dinner.

"I attended the dinner with 30 of my scouts and my host was one of the men arrested. I dined with his family, and a very good dinner it was. Altogether 420 people were captured, and after we had whipped those who surrounded me and killed a few, the rest were as loyal as people could be who were afraid not to be loyal.

"No doubt there were some cases of improper conduct among the officers and men, but they were always stopped as soon as known. We had to use strategy sometimes. We might know a village had a certain number of guns, but we could not find them. We would march the men out to an open space and tell off three to be shot. They were led a little way off behind low bushes, and ropes were tied to their legs by soldiers, lying concealed in the grass. The firing party would arrive and shoot blank cartridges. The natives' legs would be pulled from under them and their friends thought they were killed. Three more were told off, and the performance was repeated until the guns were produced by the 'survivors.'"

Admiral Coghlan on rising remarked: "If we did call upon the army to help the navy let go, I notice from the last dispatches that two days ago the army was calling on the navy to help them to let go."

He went on to give an account of the battle of Manila Bay and paid a high tribute to Spanish bravery.

"The Spaniards were not cowards," said he, "but fine manly fellows. Only they were utterly unprepared. The punishment they took for two and a half hours shows they were very brave men. In one ship out of a crew of 491 there were only 125 left at the end of the battle.

"The British did us a most friendly act at Manila. We had cut one cable, but did not know of the existence of another, and, of course, the British might not tell us of it. But one day an English officer asked innocently, 'How did you know which cable to cut?' and in five minutes the news was signaled to the Admiral."

Congressman Herbert Parsons also spoke. He pointed out that the reason the Philippines wanted a preference on sugar and tobacco in America was not so much that they hoped to send any large quantities here, as that they might use the possession of another market as a means of forcing the Chinese and Japanese to give them better prices for what they sold to them.

BELLEVUE'S LONE POLICEMAN.

Bingham's Latest Order Cuts Out More Work for Him.

Police Commissioner Bingham recently cut the detail at Bellevue, leaving but one policeman on duty there. Formerly one was stationed outside the prison ward, while the other was inside to watch the prisoners, with orders not to leave.

Last night Commissioner Bingham ordered that the policeman on detail in the prison ward, in case of trouble anywhere in the grounds or in other wards, lock up the prison ward, leaving the prisoners, and go to the scene of trouble. Among the twenty-seven prisoners in the ward are one charged with murder, one charged with burglary, and half a dozen convalescent prisoners.

PICTURES' VALUE DISPUTED.

Art Experts Are Summoned to Testify Before Customs Authorities.

Unless the United States General Appraisers reverse the action of Collector Stranahan in raising invoice prices 100 per cent. on two paintings imported by Alexander Hollander & Co. of this city the pictures will be seized by the customs authorities and forfeiture proceedings instituted.

The pictures were painted by J. B. Pater, a French artist, who lived in the middle of the eighteenth century. They are the property of J. Baurdariat of Paris, and were brought to this country for sale. They were invoiced at 35,000 francs, but Collector Stranahan raised their dutiable value to 70,000 francs. The importer has appealed to the Board of Appraisers for a review. Many art critics and dealers have been summoned to testify.

WOMEN STORM 'C.-B.'S' HOUSE

British Premier Refuses to See Suffragists—Three Arrested.

LONDON, March 9.—A band of thirty zealous women suffragists attempted to storm Premier Campbell-Bannerman's official residence in Downing Street this afternoon. They used the knocker vigorously and attempted to force an entrance when the door was opened.

The women clung tenaciously to the railings when the police tried to disperse them, and only gave way after determined resistance to the superior strength of a large force of police.

Three ringleaders of the women suffragists were taken to the nearest police station, struggling and screaming and followed by twenty-seven of their companions, who shouted "Down with C.-B.!" and other war cries.

"C.-B.," otherwise Premier Campbell-Bannerman, was presiding at a Cabinet Council at the time the women called, and he refused to see them.

A Beautiful, Tasteful, Exquisitely Made Suit in Voile, All Silk Lined, for 14.75

Every syllable of that headline is the literal truth—adjectives and all. The suit is really a wonder at the price. You couldn't get better style for $50, and you would get only the same materials and general finish for $25.

Most women will recognize the value, merely from the words "a silk-lined voile suit" in connection with the price. Almost any voile suit would be a bargain at $14.75, but this is an especially good one.

The model will instantly attract the woman of refined, quiet, but fastidious taste. It is a smartly cut Eton jacket, simply but effectively relieved by straps and braiding, with a touch of color in the moire collar edging. Three-quarter sleeve, stylish girdle, gored circular skirt with bias folds at bottom. Entire suit silk lined with ruffled flounce on the drop skirt.

We consider this suit the greatest early season offer we have ever made. If there is one of them left to-night it will be only because it got torn or damaged in the rush for the others.

To-day only (because there won't be any left for Monday) 14.75

A Handsome Pocket Match Box Free To Wearers of "Foot Mould" Shoes.

Don't thank us—thank the makers of "Eclipse Colt" for the gift. It comes about this way:—

When we pinned the reputation of our shoe store to the "Foot Mould" shoes, you can be sure that we had done a lot of hard testing of the leather that went into them. We were especially anxious to find the best patent leather procurable, for more friends are lost to shoe dealers through disappointment in patent leather shoes than from any other cause—except, perhaps, fibbing about values.

We Found What We Were Looking For in "Eclipse Colt."

For five years we have used no other leather in "shiny" shoes, and it has helped to build up the reputation of "Foot Mould" as a make of shoe that used to be the best materials possible to obtain.

We have been such a large customer of the Eclipse Colt makers that they have marked their appreciation by sending us several thousand very handsome pocket match safes, one of which we will give, with their compliments, to every man who comes into our shoe store wearing "Foot Mould" shoes, or who purchases a pair of that make.

The box is a new flat model, handy to carry and arranged to hold and light either ordinary or safety matches. A nickel box, with a jewelled clasp.

TO TELL ABOUT STANDARD OIL

Counsel Says the Company May Produce Certain Witnesses.

After a conference with Alfred D. Eddy of Chicago, Western counsel for the Standard Oil Company, M. F. Elliott, the Standard's general solicitor, announced that a decision might be reached next week in the matter of expediting the New York hearing of the suit instituted by Attorney General Hadley of Missouri against the company and its subsidiary concerns which are operating in that State.

"Mr. Eddy will see Attorney General Hadley next week in St. Louis," said Mr. Elliott, "and an agreement may be reached as to certain facts which the Attorney General is attempting to establish, and that the company will agree to produce certain witnesses."

Henry Wollman, New York counsel for Attorney General Hadley, said: "All Attorney General Hadley wants is testimony showing who owns the stock in the three companies which are the respondents in the proceeding pending in the Supreme Court in Missouri. I believe that the Standard Oil people, realizing the futility of opposition to our efforts to make them reveal this testimony, will now furnish it or else produce witnesses whom we have so persistently asked them to produce hitherto. If they do, it is quite immaterial who the witnesses are. All we want is to get at the facts.

"It is not improbable that counsel for the Standard Oil Company have assured Attorney General Hadley that Mr. Rockefeller has no personal knowledge on the subjects into which we are inquiring, and if we are able to get the information we desire from others connected with the Standard Oil Company it would not be our purpose to put Mr. Rockefeller on the witness stand unless we felt reasonably sure that he was able to produce testimony which would be to our advantage."

"Is a subpoena still out for Mr. Rockefeller?" Mr. Wollman was asked.

"Yes. It was necessary for us, our subpoenas having lapsed, to get out new ones last Tuesday. Mr. Rockefeller was on the list, and a subpoena for him is now in the hands of a process server."

If H. H. Rogers and John D. Archbold returned from Washington, where they had a conference with President Roosevelt Thursday night, they did not go to the Standard Oil Building, 26 Broadway. Nobody in the building could say when they were expected.

LUYTIES BROTHERS, GENERAL AGENTS NEW YORK

SCHEME TO LINE UP ALL STATE EMPLOYES

Will Establish Record of Political Clubs They Belong To.

FORBIDS PARTY ASSESSMENTS

Forces Disclosure of Cost of Connection with Organizations, and Punishes False Statements.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 9.—Behind a bill introduced in the Senate to-day by Senator Horace White of Syracuse, and which has for its ostensible purpose the further cutting off of assessments for political purposes, there is a well-laid plan to line up all the employes of the State and of the cities and get them on record as to what political organizations or clubs they are affiliated with.

The bill, which is "introduced by request," is an amendment to Section 24 of the civil service law, which makes it a misdemeanor to demand or collect or pay any political "assessment." It adds thereto the words "subscription or contribution," and further makes it a misdemeanor for any person to prepare or send out "any letter notice or circular requesting the payment of any political assessment, subscription, or contribution," and prohibits even the oral demand for anything of the sort.

In addition, however, to enabling any one who runs to read what political organization a civil employe is a member of, it forces him to show just what it costs him every year to keep up this sort of political assessment in the form of club dues. It makes it compulsory upon him to show his political affiliation, at least in regard to his connection with organizations and clubs, and if the bill becomes law there is likely to be a marked falling off in the membership of political clubs, so far as their membership rolls are open to public inspection.

Not only does the bill make any false statements on the part of any city or State employe regarding his affiliations with political organizations and clubs a misdemeanor, but the employe cannot get his money until he files with the disbursing officer from whom he gets his salary warrant a complete record of what his political affiliations have cost him.

Under the present law, which makes it a misdemeanor to give or solicit political assessments, there was no way of proving whether such were asked for or given unless the person assessed kicked over the traces and took a chance on holding his job as a consequence, or the parties to the agreement were caught in the act. Then, too, no one ever thought membership in a political club had anything to do with any one but himself or that what he paid there could be looked on as a political contribution. That part of the bill which deals with political assessments from an entirely new standpoint is as follows:

"Every officer, agent, clerk, or employe under the Government of the State of New York or any civil division or city thereof shall at the time of receiving his first payment of salary or compensation in the month of December of each year, or at the time of payment first thereafter, file with the Treasurer or other disbursing officer from whom he received his salary or compensation a signed statement setting forth the amount of the contribution, if any, made by him during the term of one year preceding Dec. 1 of the year in which the statement is made for any political purpose, directly or indirectly, including dues or payments to any club, association, or corporation organized for political purposes, or to promote legislation or to influence official action with reference to conditions of public employment.

"Such statement shall show in detaitl the amount of such payments or contributions, the date on which each was made, the name of the person, party, association, club, or corporation to whom or to which each was contributed and the name of the person or persons receiving each of them.

"The State Civil Service Commission shall prescribe a suitable form or blank for the filing of such statements and every Controller and other fiscal officer of the State or any civil division or city thereof, whose duty it is to draw, sign, or issue warrants for the salary of any officer, agent, clerk, or employe, shall provide blanks after the form so prescribed and furnished them, to be filled out by the officers, agents, clerks, or employes. Said blanks may be attached to and form part of a warrant or payroll or may be separate.

"No Treasurer or other disbursing officer of the State or any civil division or city thereof shall pay any salary or compensation on the payment of which the statement of political contributions is required by this section until such statement is made and signed. The statements required by this section shall be preserved by the Treasurer or disbursing officer with whom they may be filed, and shall constitute a public record.

"Any officer, &c., under the Government of the State or any civil division or city thereof who refuses or neglects to file the statements required by this section or who willfully files a materially false or incomplete statement shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor."

TO LICENSE ARCHITECTS.

Bill Also Creates Board of Examiners and Provides Penalties.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 9.—A bill to license architects and to create a Board of Architectural Examiners was introduced in the Assembly to-day by Mr. Wells of New York.

The Board of Examiners is to consist of five persons to be appointed by the Regents of the State University prior to May 1, and they are to hold office for two years. Nominations to the board are made by the New York, Brooklyn, and Buffalo chapters of the American Institute of Architects and by the Fine Arts Federation of New York, and four of the five members of the board chosen by the Regents from the names submitted must be architects of at least ten years' standing.

The board will issue licenses upon the payment of a fee of $25 after a satisfactory examination or upon proof that the applicant has been engaged in his profession in the State, or if he shows a satisfactory certificate from a similarly constituted board from another State or is a graduate from some school recognized by the board as satisfactory.

The license may be revoked for ignorance, recklessness, or gross incompetency under certain restrictions, and it is made a misdemeanor to practice the profession in the State without a license issued by the board.

BILL TO CONTROL METERS.

Regarded in Albany as Incidentally a Club for State Inspector.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 9.—The intention of the State administration further to compel the gas companies to give consumers more rights and privileges than they have had in the past became manifest to-day when Majority Leader Moreland introduced a bill giving the State Gas Commission power to inspect all gasometers and electric meters and to affix the seal of the commission guaranteeing its efficiency. Lighting corporations may not install meters unless they have been inspected. The bill also provides that a testing apparatus shall be kept on the premises of the consumer. A consumer may demand a test in his presence at any time. If the test by the company be unsatisfactory in his opinion he may ask for a test by the State Commission.

Behind this bill is said to be a movement to take from Jastrow Alexander his powers as State Inspector of Gasometers and transfer them to the State Commission. Alexander is Republican leader of the Twenty-sixth New York District, and, like many other Republican District leaders, he is waiting to see which way the wind blows before he ties himself to either State Chairman Odell or Chairman Parsons.

As the appropriation bill does not provide anything for the maintenance of his office, the Moreland bill placing most of its powers with the State Commission is taken to be a direct notice to Alexander to get in line with Chairman Parsons, a recognized Higgins man.

WAR ON WATER BOARD.

Putnam County Leaders Back of the Yale Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 9.—Behind the Yale bill to legislate out of office the three Water Commissioners appointed last year by Mayor McClellan is a coterie of Putnam County leaders who think proper consideration has not been shown to them by the commission. This bill is a notice to the commission that it must come to an arrangement with Yale and his lieutenants concerning patronage or it may soon find its official life in jeopardy.

Yale aims to get the present Commissioners out and have three named who will be more agreeable to suggestions from himself and some of his friends without regard to party. The provision of the bill which decreases the salaries from $12,000 to $7,000 is likely to meet with favor.

GOVERNMENT ENDS ART SALE.

Part of the Russian St. Louis Exhibit Has Paid No Duty.

The sale of the art works that formed a part of the Russian exhibit at the St. Louis World's Fair, came to a sudden end at 236 Fifth Avenue last night. Prospective purchasers of the works of Verestchagin, Maimon, Makofsky, and other well-known Russian artists gathered in good numbers, and there was no intimation that the sale was to stop until some one arose and announced that the sale had been discontinued by orders issued from the Treasury Department at Washington.

It appeared that the works already sold had been taken out of bond and the tariff on them paid, and the Government had no complaint to make regarding them. When it was learned, however, that last night a number of works which were still in bond, and on which no duty had been paid, would be put up for sale, the Government decided that it was time to take a hand.

The sale of the exhibit was ordered by Edward M. Grunwaldt, Councillor of Commerce of St. Petersburg, who was Russia's Commissioner to the St. Louis Fair. Soon after the closing of the fair an exhibition of the works of art was opened at 236 Fifth Avenue. Baron Rosen, the Russian Ambassador at Washington; Baron de Schlippenbach, the Russian Consul General in Chicago; Nicholas de Ladygensky, Consul General in New York, and the Russian Archpriest in New York, the Rev. A. H. Hotovitsky, were members of a committee formed to further the success of the local exhibit, which culminated in the auction that began last Monday and ended so abruptly last evening.

TILLSBURY FOOLED, HE SAYS.

Declares a Race Track Acquaintance Put Him Up to Blackmail Moore.

Central Office detectives yesterday were investigating stories told them by Henry Tillsbury, who is held in the Jefferson Market prison for hearing to-day on a charge of forgery in the third degree in connection with what the police believe was an attempt to rob or blackmail Robert R. Moore, President of the New Amsterdam National Bank, at Thirty-ninth Street and Broadway.

Tillsbury told the detectives yesterday that he had been the innocent tool of another man whom he met last Summer while on his way to the race track, and had not seen again until last Monday, when he met him on Broadway. The detectives are investigating the story.

"The man," Tillsbury is said to have told the police, "told me that he was John Cornish, Superintendent of the Pinkerton Agency, and knew a way to get some money from Mr. Moore if I would assist him. On the strength of that I wrote the letter at his dictation and took it to Mr. Moore. I expected to find this man in my room at the Astor, but he was not on the job."

The police believe that if there was another man in the game, he was fraudulently using the name of Cornish, the Pinkerton man. Tillsbury, according to Inspector McLaughlin, came from Norfolk, Neb., and Chicago, where for a time he was a messenger in the Lincoln National Bank and later assistant cashier of a club. They say he has frequented race tracks.

WAS DR. PETERS HISSED?

Two Versions of an Interesting Incident at a Woman's Meeting.

The Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters informed THE TIMES yesterday that his remarks about women drinking were not really hissed at the meeting of the West End Woman's Republican Club on Thursday, as THE TIMES report said. "Ask Mrs. B. M. Sherman, who was the Chairman of the day, and at whose request I addressed the club," said Dr. Peters.

"There was no hissing," said Mrs. Sherman at the Hotel Martha Washington. "But when Dr. Peters said that there was as much drinking among women as among men the women did not agree with him, and called out 'It isn't so! It isn't so!' I didn't hear any hisses. Many of the women thanked me on leaving for the pleasure given them by the speaker."

"No hissing?" said Mrs. Helen Secor Tonges, President of the club. "I don't know where their ears were. Of course there was hissing. I had to bring the gavel down not once, but three times to stop it. I always read THE TIMES, and I saw the story in the paper, and thought it was all right. We thought Dr. Peters was too ultra. We are an abstemious body of women; we don't know anything about this drinking, and we don't believe it."

Grand Jurymen Late for Luncheon.

The Grand Jurymen were in a grouchy mood when they left the Criminal Courts Building about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. They had not finished their routine work till nearly 2 o'clock, and then, when they wanted to go home, Judge O'Sullivan was lunching, and they had to wait for him. Most of the session was devoted to the Mann perjury case.

GILLESPIE ANSWERS PRESIDENT'S CRITICISM

Says Message May Defeat Quick Results in Rate Inquiry.

RESOLUTION AND A BILL

Designed to Remedy Defects in the Tillman Resolution Pointed Out by Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—A resolution and a bill designed to cure the defects President Roosevelt pointed out in the Tillman resolution for the investigation by the Inter-State Commerce Commission of railroad discriminations and monopolies were introduced to-day in the House, the resolution by Representative Townsend of Michigan and the bill by Representative Gillespie of Texas. Mr. Townsend's resolution provides an appropriation of $50,000 to carry on the investigation and the Gillespie bill makes an appropriation of $100,000 for the same purpose.

The resolution provides that the Inter-State Commerce Commission shall have under the Tillman-Gillespie resolution all the powers to subpoena witnesses, to compel them to testify, and to produce documentary evidence which it enjoys under the Inter-State Commerce act. It also provides that witnesses shall enjoy the same rights and immunities in this investigation that they enjoy under the Inter-State Commerce act. Similar provisions are made in the Gillespie bill.

In explanation of his bill and in reply to objections offered by the President to the Tillman resolution, Mr. Gillespie said to-day:

"I am glad the President signed the resolution, and that the same has become a law, although in doing so he sent a message to Congress that will, I fear, defeat the quick results that otherwise might have been reached by the commission in the investigation which the resolution provides. His message conveys to the guilty parties a doubt as to its power to compel the production of books and papers. Of course, they will take advantage of this doubt and urge it against every step the commission may take."

Of the President's objection that if the investigation were carried on to the full extent of its provisions it might cause immunity from punishment to those guilty of unlawful conspiracy, Mr. Gillespie said:

"I must say that I do not think any of these high criminals are trembling in their boots from fear of imprisonment as things are now, and if all of them should escape imprisonment by rushing to the commission and unbosoming themselves we would see just as many frenzied financiers in jail as if no investigation had been held. Besides, we ought to give the commission the benefit of the doubt on the question that they, as officials of the Government, are interested in the enforcement of the criminal laws, and that they would not willingly take any step that would turn any criminal loose without it was necessary in order to get at the truth."

WORST POLICE STATIONS.

Ex-Magistrate Ommen Names Them to Long Acre League.

Ex-Magistrate Ommen, speaking last night to the Long Acre League, a civic club of women on the far west side, declared that many of the police stations of New York were disgraceful.

"In 1905," he said, "more than 125,000 arrests were made in Manhattan and the Bronx. Of this number more than 62,000 were discharged by the Magistrates on the following day and not more than 35 per cent. of the remainder were finally convicted. Thus you see that fully 75 per cent. of the prisoners arrested are innocent. Those placed in police cells have at least a right to expect a clean place in which to remain until their cases are heard."

The ex-Magistrate suggested, as a solution of the problem, that all police prisoners be taken to district prisons, as the jails connected with the various police courts are called. While condemning all the police stations in Manhattan, he spoke particularly of the West Thirty-seventh Street, the Tenderloin, Mercer, Madison, and Church Street Stations as being very bad.

The league promised to try and convince Commissioner Bingham of the need of reforms in the West Thirty-seventh and West Forty-seventh Street Stations, which are within their territory. The meeting was held in Public School 144, 524 West Forty-fourth Street. Mrs. Henry Parsons presided.

ROCKEFELLER AN EXECUTOR.

Son of the Standard Oil Head Named in Dr. Simmons's Will.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is named as one of the executors of the will of the late Rev. James B. Simmons, whose will was filed in the Surrogates' office yesterday. The instrument was drawn on Jan. 23, 1904. The testator died on Dec. 17 last. The property left is probably worth $50,000.

Other executors are Supreme Court Justice Hatch, Henry J. Weber, and the President of Simmons College, at Abilene, Texas, of which the Rev. Mr. Simmons was one of the founders. In case the President of the college declines to act, Senator Everett Colby of New Jersey is named in his stead.

The testator's home, at 129 East Fifty-ninth Street, with its contents, is left to his son, Dr. Robert S. Simmons, as long as he desires to occupy it. The residue of the estate goes to the college at Abilene.

The clergyman, who was 74 years old, directed that his body be interred beside that of his wife on the college campus, with as little expense as possible.

Mrs. C. K. G. Billings Causes an Arrest—Randolph Guggenheimer Gave $10.

A young man went to the home of C. K. G. Billings, at 673 Fifth Avenue, last night, and asked Mrs. Billings if she wouldn't subscribe to a fund he was raising for a ball to be held on March 15 at the Grand Central Palace for the benefit of the "Telegraph Clerks and Lady Operators' Association."

"I have subscribed to many of these things, and have found most of them frauds," Mrs. Billings told the solicitor. "Let me think it over a while, and if you care to come around in an hour I may give you something."

The young man said he would come back. When he had gone Mrs. Billings telephoned to a nearby telegraph office and found that no such association existed. She then notified the East Fifty-first Street Police Station, and Detectives Summers and Conroy went to the Billings home and waited for the young man to return.

"I guess you've found that my plea is genuine," he said to Mrs. Billings when he was admitted to the house again an hour later.

"Here's some money," she replied, handing him an envelope containing a $1 bill. When he left the house the detectives arrested him on a charge of obtaining money on false pretenses. At the station house he said he was Arthur Ester, a broker's clerk.

A few days ago he got $25 from Edmund Randolph of 6 East Forty-eighth Street, and returned for more. The butler notified the police, but they were unable to catch their man. Ester told the police that he and two other men had obtained a considerable sum from residents of upper Fifth Avenue, among the subscribers being Randolph Gugenheimer, who had contributed $10.

JEALOUS, KILLS HER SISTER.

Young Wife at Atlanta Shoots 17-Year-Old Girl Five Times.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 9.—Crazed by jealousy caused by her husband's attentions to Chappell Whisenant, her seventeen-year-old sister, Mrs. Edward M. Standifer, 25 years old, shot the girl dead this morning at the home of her brother-in-law, P. W. Dunham, with whose family Miss Whisenant resided. She fired five shots at her with a revolver, and each took effect in her sister's left breast.

Mrs. Standifer then boarded a car, went to her husband's office, and said: "I have killed Chappell." Both she and her husband were arrested. She conversed freely with the police, to whom she declared that she had "avenged her outraged womanhood."

It appears that last night Standifer and Miss Whisenant went for a drive and did not return until a late hour. Early this morning Mrs. Standifer went to her sister's home and asked her to leave her husband alone. She says the girl answered laughingly, and then she shot her. Standifer admitted that he and his sister-in-law loved each other.

E. M. Standifer came to Atlanta about two years ago from Gadsden, Ala., where he was married. He says his father is W. S. Standifer, United States Marshal at Gadsden, and his uncle W. H. Standifer, Assistant United States District Attorney at that place.

MORE SEWER INDICTMENTS.

J. A. Coyle, Inspector in the Controller's Office, Accused of Fraud.

Two men, one of them a Democratic politician, were indicted by the Kings County Grand Jury yesterday in the sewer claim scandals. One of the indicted men, Charles M. Wells, is a lawyer in the office of William O. Miles, the lawyer who has been indicted for conspiracy in the same inquiry. This is the second indictment found against him.

Joseph A. Coyle, the second man indicted, is an Inspector in the Controller's office, and a friend of ex-Deputy Police Commissioner Haggerty, leader of the Tenth Assembly District. He is a member of the Kings County General Committee, and has held several offices.

The indictment against the two men was for conspiracy to defraud the city. For some years, according to District Attorney Clarke, Coyle had been an examiner of claims in the Controller's office. Wells for a long time handled sewer claims for Lawyer Miles. It is charged that the two indicted men worked off fraudulent sewer claims against the city and divided the profits.

QUICK SURGERY ON WHEELS.

Dr. Valentine Opens a Patient's Vein in Hurrying Ambulance.

Dr. Valentine of the German Hospital, in Williamsburg, performed a surgical operation in an ambulance going at full speed yesterday which gave immediate relief to his patient, Mrs. Frederick Wood of 445 Linden Street, Williamsburg, and which very likely will save her life.

Mrs. Wood had suffered from both kidney and heart trouble, and her condition became so serious that her removal was decided on. She had one convulsion after another in the ambulance, and finally was seized with one so severe that her face turned blue.

Seemingly she was about to die when the surgeon drew forth a sharp instrument from his kit and opened a large vein in one of her arms as a measure of relief. She rallied rapidly, and at the hospital last night it was said she was still improving.

CAR AHEAD? NO, SIR-EE.

Mr. Golden Keeps on Riding and Is Arrested for Not Paying Fare.

Daniel A. Golden, an insurance agent of 172 West Ninety-seventh Street, boarded a Sixth Avenue car yesterday morning to ride down town. He says the car was marked "South Ferry." When it reached Fourth Street it stopped.

"Take the car ahead," ordered the conductor.

"I've paid my fare to go down town and I want to go there on this car," demanded Golden.

"Get off or go back," answered the conductor. Golden stayed aboard. On the return trip the conductor tried to collect his fare.

"Nothing doing," asserted Golden, emphatically; "I paid to go down town and you won't take me."

"Pay up or I'll call a policeman," threatened the conductor.

"Go as far as you like," was Golden's retort. In the Jefferson Market Court, where he was arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct, his case was adjourned to to-day. Golden argues that the car company has no right to make Fourth Street a terminal and that he will carry the case to the highest courts.

MRS. TOLLA ESCAPES HANGING

Receives a Sentence Which, Commuted, Amounts to Five Years.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., March 9.—Mrs. Antoinette Tolla, who was under sentence of death in the Hackensack Jail for the murder of Joseph Sonta more than a year ago, was to-day sentenced to seven years and six months in State prison by a vote of 6 to 2 of the Court of Pardons.

Mrs. Tolla is the first person under sentence of death in New Jersey to have sentence commuted to a number of years. All others received a commutation to life imprisonment. The Court of Pardons reached this decision to-day after the condemned woman's counsel convinced the court that under the Constitution it could commute to a number of years as well as to an indefinite period. The court established the precedent.

The vote which saved the woman's life to-day and will give her liberty in five years with the usual commutation for good behavior, was: For commutation—Gov. Stokes, Judges Vroom, Vredenberg, Gray, Dill, and Bogart. Those opposed were Chancellor Magie and Judge Green.

TO TEST DEAD MAN'S LUNGS.

Surgeons to See If Killed Switchman Inhaled Subway Steel Dust.

While working in the Subway at 133d Street and Broadway early yesterday morning, Henry A. Koch of 237 East 113th Street was knocked down and instantly killed. Koch, who was a switchman, was about to throw a switch for a south-bound train. The train approached him rapidly, and, becoming confused, he stepped directly in front of a north-bound train, running at full speed.

Train dispatcher Tisdale discovered the body and had it removed to the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Police Station. Duke C. Ormsby, the motorman of the train, was arrested and taken to court, where he declared he knew nothing of the accident until he was arrested. He was paroled to await the action of the Coroner.

Coroner Harburger has instructed his physician to perform an autopsy on Koch's body to discover whether the lungs show any evidence of consumption from particles of steel dust according to the theory of Dr. George A. Soper, consulting sanitary engineer of the Board of Health.

Prof. John H. Larkin of the College of Physicians and Surgeons will co-operate with Dr. O'Hanlon in making the autopsy.

HAINES BLAMES WOMEN FOR HIS OVERTHROW

He Reveres the Sex, but Says It's Very Cruel.

CALLS OPPONENTS JACKALS

And Takes a Gloomy View of the S. P. C. A.'s Future—Also of Newspaper Management.

John P. Haines, the retiring President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, blames the women. They are more cruel than men, Mr. Haines said yesterday, and they have been particularly cruel to him.

"I have seen women members of the society drive up to this building," he declared, "with their horses checked so that an attendant had to go out and uncheck them. I have seen them come to meetings with coats of the skin of unborn lambs and wearing aigrettes of the plumage of birds that are obtained by the death of the mother bird and the starvation of the brood. They are, as a sex, more cruel than men, I believe, and I have as deep a reverence for their sex as any man."

Mr. Haines said that he didn't want to talk for publication, and held up a blue pencil before THE TIMES reporter, saying that editing would fix the interview anyway.

"There's a picture of Collier," he said, as he pointed to the mantel over the great open fireplace in his office. "Three years ago I stopped his deer hunt, and Collier's Weekly has been after me ever since."

"Why should newspapers and publishers antagonize you?" he was asked after he had complained about Collier's and various New York newspapers, including THE TIMES.

"Twenty-five years ago," he replied, "a newspaper was run by the editor. Now it is run by the business office. Against me are men of wealth with whose pleasures the society has interfered. We have stopped the docking of horses' tails, their hunts, pigeon shooting, &c., and they have exerted their influence against us."

"Through the newspapers?" he was asked.

"Yes," he answered, "and through the women; and although they have not worked against me in the open, they have worked against me just the same."

"Take a man," continued Mr. Haines. "If his fellow man goes wrong and gets down he will not shun him or point at him but will help him. His old friends will always stick to the fellow who slips."

"Do you intend to keep up your interest and work to prevent cruelty to animals?" was asked.

"I am a life member of the society," he replied, "and do not resign as a member, although I resign as President. I may remain in the society, but that depends on its management. I can't tell what these jackals will do."

Mr. Haines declared that he was feeling fine after having resigned, and that after seventeen years he could at last get a vacation. He declared that he had worked night and day without compensation for seventeen years for the society, and had spent a fortune on it and the cause, but he was glad to be out. Then he again referred to his opponents as "jackals."

The retiring President takes a gloomy view of the society's future.

"A woman who was to have left the society $80,000 has decided not to leave the money to it," he declared, "and because I have resigned. I could have remained President indefinitely, for I had a majority of the Board of Managers, and I had many pleas to stay. I was not forced out."

"Between J. B. Erhardt, Gen. Roe and Henry Bergh, who are mentioned as candidates for the Presidency, have you any choice?"

"I have no choice," he answered.

Then Mr. Haines indicated that he was not for Mr. Erhardt by mentioning his name with the insurgent element.

As for his plans for the future, Mr. Haines said that he had a great deal to do, and would not find time hanging on his hands. But first he would take a vacation. Mr. Haines referred again to the cruelty of women, and shook his head mournfully.

AMMONIA THROWER HELD.

"John Doe," the Police Believe, Is a Strike Breaker Turned Thug.

When the man arrested on Thursday night for throwing the contents of a bottle of ammonia in the face of William L. Malaney, Superintendent for Post & McCord, on the Fiss, Doerr & Carroll Building in East Twenty-fourth Street, was arraigned before Magistrate Cornell in the Yorkville Court yesterday, he persisted in withholding his name and address and was arraigned as "John Doe."

Policeman McGowan produced the broken ammonia bottle, which, he said, he saw the man throw away. The policeman testified that the accused wore rubber-soled shoes, and showed a wonderful burst of speed.

Mr. Malaney told the court that, while he had shown the striking housesmiths every consideration and even had helped them financially, he believed his life was in danger.

Magistrate Cornell held "John Doe" in $2,500 bail for trial.

"You ought to be in prison," the Magistrate said. "There you would be prevented from doing further harm. I think you ought to get forty years."

Before his arraignment the prisoner was taken to Police Headquarters, where his photograph was taken and he was measured under the Bertillon system. The police believe that his right name is Nagle and that he was brought from San Francisco. In the West he was a strike breaker, but the police think he was brought to New York by the striking iron workers.

MAY COST CITY $1,000,000.

Prevailing Rate of Wages Law Upheld in a Painter's Suit.

As the result of a decision handed down by Justice Bischoff, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, the city may have to pay out an extra $1,000,000 in wages to its employes.

James J. Carey sued the city to recover an amount alleged to be due him as the difference between his daily wage as a painter in the city repair shops and the prevailing rate of wages. After being employed from May 17, 1897, Carey, on Nov. 29, 1898, served notice on the Controller of his claim, setting forth that he received but $3 a day, while the prevailing rate of wages was $3.50. A month later he began an action, and within twenty days judgment was entered in his favor.

A decision was subsequently handed down by the higher courts in another case, which, apparently, reversed the decision in Carey's case, and the judgment was vacated. Carey's lawyers decided later that his case was not affected, and Justice Bischoff's decision of yesterday was the result of a second suit.

Carey's last suit was for the difference between what he received from the city from Dec. 1, 1898, to Jan. 1, 1900, and the prevailing rate of wages. This amounted to $175.

It is said that enough city employes are in the same category as Carey to force the city to refund $1,000,000 if they institute suits.

Drops Shipbuilding Suit.

Ashbel P. Green filed notice in the Supreme Court at White Plains yesterday of the discontinuance of a suit brought by him against the Mercantile Trust Company interpleaded with James H. Hyde, George Gould, the United States Shipbuilding Company, and others, to recover what he lost on the Shipbuilding stock issue. The notice does not say whether the case was settled.

JURY FIXING CASES VAGUE.

Jerome Tells Gov. Higgins Why Only Tillinghast Went to Jail.

District Attorney Jerome wrote a sixteen-page letter yesterday to Gov. Higgins about the alleged "fixing" of jurors in damage cases by men connected with the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. The Governor has become interested in the case of William H. Tillinghast, who was sent to the penitentiary for three months recently, after having pleaded guilty to impersonating a juror in the City Court last January.

It appears from Mr. Jerome's letter that Louis E. Julian, a discharged chief investigator of the Metropolitan, first brought Tillinghast and Stanley S. Bagg, a former investigator for the Metropolitan, to the attention of the District Attorney. Julian was indicted for subornation of perjury in November, 1901, but was discharged on his own recognizance. He knew nothing whatever at first hand, Mr. Jerome writes, had only hearsay evidence to offer, and admitted that his disclosures were prompted by a grudge he had against the company. Of Tillinghast he writes:

> Tillinghast admitted having served on numerouse cases in the City Court when he was not on the panel. The plan was part of a scheme by which the clerks of the City Court were retaining for themselves money paid to them for the jurors by plaintiffs. When called the clery would send word through some court officer as to which side of the case the clerk inclined, and he (Tillinghast) would give a verdict accordingly. He could give no details as to any such instance.

Bagg, according to Mr. Jerome, told about several cases in which Tillinghast acted as juror and received money by order of Ambrose F. McCabe or Daniel W. Patterson, two attorneys for the Metropolitan. The District Attorney was unable to obtain corroboration of Bagg's and Tillinghast's evidence.

"Under the circumstances above narrated," Mr. Jerome says, "the District Attorney found it impossible to proceed criminally against anybody."

Finally Mr. Jerome described the circumstances that led to the conviction of Tillinghast a few weeks ago on a new case, committed after the man had been promised immunity for old offenses.

OLD IRISH WORKS SOLD.

A Copy of the Book of the Dun Cow Among Them.

Rare books relating to Ireland were in the second and concluding day's sale of Part II. of the library of Wilberforce Eames, by the Anderson Auction Company, in West Twenty-ninth Street, yesterday. The total for the two days' sale is $4,050.

One of the most interesting of the Irish books was the extremely rare subscriber's copy of the first edition of John O'Donovan's translation of Annala Rioghachta Eireann, or Annals of the Kingdom of Ireland by the Four Masters. This is the original edition in five 4to. volumes. It sold for $90.

Another fine item was the beautifully written manuscript copy, in Irish characters, made by the famous scholar Eugene O'Curry of the Rev. Geoffrey Keating's History of Ireland.

It sold for $186.

Not less interesting was a perfect reproduction of the oldest known manuscript, entirely in the Irish language, Leabhar Na H-Uidhri, or Book of the Dun Cow, a collection of Pieces in Prose and Verse in the Irish language, compiled and transcribed about A. D. 1100 by Moel Muiri MacCeileachair. Of the original MS. only 134 pages remain. It brought $51.

Still another interesting work was the Book of Leinster. This and the Book of the Dun Cow are the two oldest Irish manuscripts in existence. It also sold for $51. Another rarity sold was "A Bibliography of the Original Quartos and Folios of Shakespeare, with Particular Reference to Copies in America," by Justin Winsor. Folio. Boston, 1876. $73.

MRS. GILBERT'S BIBLE SOLD.

It Brought Only $12—Other Souvenirs of the Actress at Small Prices.

Mrs. Gilbert's Bible brought the highest price among her personal belongings sold at the Knickerbocker Art Galleries yesterday afternoon, $12, given by W. C. Crane. This was a gift to Mrs. Gilbert on her eighty-third birthday from the Ladies' Guild of the Reformed Church, New York, and had a bookmark with solid gold anchor, heart, and cross. Many autograph photographs were sold yesterday, with a collection of theatre programmes and other souvenirs. The pictures were cabinet size, in small wooden frames.

A photograph of Mrs. Gilbert and Annie Russell, together, brought $6, and one of Paderewski the same price. A photograph of Joseph Jefferson brought $5.50, and others from $1 to $3. A lot of old-fashioned plates used by Mrs. Gilbert sold for $1.90, some of her old music, with autographs, brought $1.50, and the manuscript of "Granny," the last play in which Mrs. Gilbert appeared, brought $1.75.

Charles Burnham, manager of Wallack's Theatre, bought a small silver sugar bowl and creamer, and Miss Amelia Bingham and Charles Richman bid in some of the old programmes.

CONSOLIDATED TO PAY MORE.

State Tax Commission Raises Valuation of Gas Franchise.

Officers of the Consolidated Gas Company received notice yesterday that the State Tax Commissioners had increased the assessed valuation of the company's franchise. Last year the valuation was placed at $27,300,000, this year it is $31,900,000, a difference of $4,600,000.

This means that the Consolidated will have to pay, under the franchise tax law, $478,500, or $70,000 more than it paid in 1905.

Part of the State Gas Commission's order fixing the price of gas in New York at 80 cents reads as follows: "On the evidence before the commission it is questionable whether the Consolidated Gas Company has franchises of any considerable value."

COULDN'T SPEED TO PATIENT.

The Doctor's Life-and-Death Plea Didn't Move Policeman.

Dr. G. G. Fischlowitz of 1,298 Madison Avenue got a hurry call from a patient early yesterday morning.

"Get around to the house as fast as you can," he ordered Leon De Kalb, his chauffeur, as he jumped into his automobile. Patrolman Scanlon of the Traffic Squad soon arrested the chauffeur.

"It may be a case of life or death," argued Dr. Fischlowitz.

"Can't help it," answered the inexorable policeman; "you're going too fast."

Magistrate Cornell, in the Harlem Court, discharged the chauffeur when he heard the facts in the case.

Merger in the Publishing Trade.

Fox, Duffield & Co., the New York publishers, have absorbed by purchase the firm of Herbert S. Stone & Co. of Chicago. The Stone Company succeeded in 1893 to the firm of Stone & Kimball, and since then have been fortunate in the "discovery" of popular authors, among them George Barr McCutcheon, George Ade, and Hobart Chatfield Taylor. R. K. Fox, formerly connected with R. H. Russell and Pitts Duffield, who got his training while with Charles Scribner's Sons, founded Fox, Duffield & Co. three years ago.

Jubilee at Russian Cathedral.

At St. Nicholas Cathedral, in East Ninety-seventh Street, will be celebrated tomorrow the tenth anniversary in the priesthood of the Very Rev. A. A. Hotovitzky, archpriest and Dean of the cathedral. Archbishop Tikhon of North America and the Aleutian Islands will celebrate pontifical high mass, Bishop Raphael officiating as Archimandrite Theoclytes, in honor of the occasion, and there will also be a special musical programme.

INDIAN ACTOR HEARD GREAT SPIRIT CALL

So He Tried to Kill Himself After the Theatre.

HIS SQUAW SAW HIM SHOOT

Kawinga, Weary of Making Believe in the Paleface Land, Yearned for Happy Hunting Ground.

In Manhattan, the very mecca of the pale face, Kawinga, the Sioux Whirlwind of the Prairie, had a dream. In it he saw the happy hunting ground where dwelt his fathers by the legion, where hills were steep and hard to climb, the trees tall, the bushes thick, where laughing waters gushed from between the rocks, and where the woods were full of game. There dwelt Mitonga, his brother.

Vainly he tried to still the voice within him; it called him to come. But instead of warriors bold in paint and feathers, he saw great crowds of men with queer hats upon their heads; squaws wearing feathers, instead of chiefs, and paint as well; instead of trees, heaps of stone that seemed to touch the sky; instead of brooks, the fountains at the corners, where men drank stuff that foamed.

Each night he made believe. Before a sea of faces, faces that looked strained and queer, he danced and shouted in the old familiar way, pretended to be free, an Indian. It made him sad. He was an actor merely, an actor in a house they called the Star.

Even amid the roar and rattle of unfamiliar sounds—sounds he likened to the coyote whining on the plains, or hungry wolves at night—amid the flaring, garish lights, right in the middle of "Angel Gulch," where the white man yelled "The mine belongs to me!" and where the squaw, the squaw that looked so fine, called out that she was rich and had the cash—amid it all he heard that strange voice. "Come! come!" it said.

He heard it plainly once again on Thursday night. In a white man's tepee Morning Star, who later told what thoughts impelled her brave, was waiting for him when the show was over. Little White Eagle, their two-year-old papoose, was lying on her cot. With a glare in his dark eyes Kawinga led his squaw before the window. He showed her things she could not see before—the great campfire burning on the hills, great chiefs grouped about it—chiefs who were brave and real, not make-believes. They were awaiting him.

"They are calling me," he said. "The great Manitou is calling me, and Mitonga, my brother. They are calling me to join them there where you see the campfire burning, where the moose roams the forest, the brooks are full of fish, and where there is great room, room to breathe and room to hunt."

"It is only a dream," said Morning Star.

But Kawinga still was glaring out upon the street, shaking his head.

Then she pleaded with him. "Thou art young, Kawinga," she said. "The Great Spirit is not calling yet. Think of me and little White Eagle. We are in the white man's land, alone." Then, when she saw his fixed and glaring eyes, she said and said:

Still he shook his head. Then the squaw saw that he held in his hand something that gleamed. The next instant there was a flash and then a scream from Morning Star. Kawinga had done his best to reach the happy hunting ground which he and no one else had seen.

The rest was prosy, very real, according to the white man's way in Harlem. First came a policeman and then the surgeon. They took Kawinga from the New Star Hotel, Lexington Avenue and 107th Street, to the Harlem Hospital. It may be he will see the happy hunting ground and it may be he will have to be an actor once again—a make-believe!

ABSORBS ANOTHER BANK.

The Union of Brooklyn Takes Over People's as a Branch.

The Union Bank of 44 Court Street, Brooklyn, has absorbed the People's Bank of 1,246 Broadway, Brooklyn. After legal formalities have been attended to the absorbed bank will be known as the People's Branch of the Union. The consolidation will not cause a single vacancy in the People's, from President down to office boy. In fact, there will be more places to fill.

The Union Bank has been absorbing smaller institutions for the last few years. The last was the Stuyvesant Heights Bank, which was taken in last year. David A. Sullivan, President of the Stuyvesant Heights, became President of the Union. George W. Spence is President of the People's.

The price paid for the stock of the People's Bank by the Union was 396. This is more than 100 points above the recent bid price. The Executive Committee of the Union approved the purchase Thursday, and the Executive Committee of the People's took the same action yesterday morning. Then President Spence and President Sullivan had a conference in the latter's office and decided to give out the news of the transaction.

Mr. Spence has been President of the People's for many years. He was against selling the bank to any other, but finally changed his mind. He will be in charge under the new régime, just as he was before, and his authority will be practically the same.

At present the Union is capitalized at $500,000 anad the People's at $200,000. This last purchase makes the Union a bank with total resources of nearly $13,000,000; deposits amount to more than $11,250,000. Not much more than a year ago, before it began to take in smaller institutions, its total resources amounted to only $2,000,000 and its deposits to some $1,700,000.

BAND OF SLAVE DEALERS.

Negroes Who Kept Young White Girls Prisoners Are Arrested.

Representatives of the District Attorney's office went into the Tenderloin last night and raided a flat in West Thirtieth Street, only a few doors from the police station, as a preliminary step in a campaign against a band of negroes whom the District Attorney has been investigating for four months. Important information about them came finally out of the arrest and trial of Berthe Claiche.

The raid followed an indictment by the Grand Jury on three counts yesterday against Robert H. Spriggs, a Tenderloin negro, who was arrested early yesterday morning by Central Office Detectives Berry and Flood. Spriggs is indicted for abduction, assault, and keeping a disorderly resort.

The flat in West Thirtieth Street was one of many, the District Attorney's office says, which Spriggs and others maintained, others being in West Twenty-seventh, Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninth, Thirtieth, and Thirty-first Streets. The flat in West Thirtieth Street was managed by a colored woman, known to the police as Sallie Bennett. She and three other prisoners were locked up for a hearing this morning.

The raid was made by Assistant District Attorneys Garvan and Murphy, Chief Clerk Henneberry of Mr. Jerome's office, and Detective Sergeants Flood and Berry of the Central Office on a warrant issued by Magistrate Moss. They acted on the evidence of an unnamed white woman, who alleges that while half intoxicated she was kidnapped from a saloon, taken to the house, and forcibly detained.

The complaining witness on the indictment against Spriggs was Hattie Warren, a fifteen-year-old white girl. Corroborating witnesses were Maggie Brooks, 17 years old, and Cora Chester, 16 years old. When the indictment was found District Attorney Jerome said:

"This is one of the most important cases during my term of office."

Among Spriggs's enterprises is a dance hall in West Thirtieth Street, and another in Minetta Lane. To neither place has a white man ever been admitted unless he was able to display a police shield.

One case has been brought to light of an unusually attractive girl kept in one of those places for more than three years. Extraordinary precautions were taken to keep her from regaining her freedom. In spite of all her eforts, she was unable to communicate with the outside world until finally the police broke into the place and released her.

Some of the girls thus kept prisoners are said to have been lured from good homes. Most of them, however, were found in drinking places, drugged there, and carried off unconscious.

One of the most important features of the case is the knowledge of Spriggs's doings alleged to have been possessed by some members of the police force. It was said yesterday that this feature was the cause of a visit which Deputy Police Commissioner Waldo paid to Mr. Jerome yesterday morning, after he and Commissioner Bingham had had a talk with Assistant District Attorney Ely.

THEATRE CRUSH INQUIRY.

Police Handling of Sunday's Y. M. C. A. Crowd Is Being Investigated.

Inspector Walsh of the Fourth Inspection District is making an investigation into the conduct of the police at the Y. M. C. A. meeting at the Majestic Theatre last Sunday. The matter was brought to the notice of Commissioner Bingham on Monday by letters from those who were in the crush and he called for a report. This was not explicit enough and the Commissioner directed further evidence to be collected.

All yesterday Inspector Walsh was examining witnesses in his office in the West Sixty-eighth Street Station. Capt. Daly, who was in charge of the police at the theatre, and Walter T. Diack, Secretary of the West Side Branch of the Y. M. C. A., were present. A point to which a good deal of attention was given was the statement of the Captain to the Y. M. C. A. officials about the responsibility for opening the doors in the face of the crowd. The Y. M. C. A. people seem to have understood that if they unlocked the doors the Captain would withdraw his men. He declares that what he meant to say was that it would be impossible for him, with only two men, to control the crowd, and that if the reserves were not waited for he and his men would be forced to stand aside and let the crowd have its own way.

Many letters have been received at Headquarters both from people who thought the police behaved roughly and from those that held they acted with as little force as was possible under the circumstances. When Inspector Walsh makes his report next week Commissioner Bingham will decide whether or not he will have charges made against Capt. Daly.

PLACE FOR EDITOR VON SKAL.

Staats-Zeitung Man Is Appointed Commissioner of Accounts.

George Von Skal, editor of The Staats-Zeitung, was appointed Commissioner of Accounts yesterday by Mayor McClellan. Mr. Von Skal immediately resigned his editorial place and was sworn in as a city officer. He succeeds Joseph Haag, who resigned to become Secretary of the Board of Estimate. The Commissioners of Accounts receive $5,000 a year each.

The new Commissioner was born in Germany in 1854. He was graduated from the Royal Prussian Military Academy, and was a Second Lieutenant in the army until 1877, when he came to America. He joined The Staats-Zeitung staff in 1890, and has been editor since 1899. He is married and lives at 1,817 Prospect Avenue, the Bronx.

GUILTY OF TRIPLE MURDER.

Dr. Haugh Convicted of Killing His Father, Mother, and Brother.

DAYTON, Ohio, March 9.—The jury in the case of Dr. Oliver C. Haugh, accused of the murder of his father, mother, and brother, and the destruction of their home by fire to conceal the crime, to-night found him guilty of murder in the first degree.

The case was given to the jury in the afternoon. Counsel for the defense ignored the plea of insanity, which it was thought would be made. Judge Brown, in his charge, told the jury that they were not to permit the question of the mental competency of the defendant to enter into their deliberations. The defense will appeal the case.

Awards to American Artists.

The jury of the Society of American Artists yesterday afternoon awarded the $500 Carnegie prize to Childe Hassam for his "Juno," the $300 Cobb prize to Edward W. Redfield for his "Delaware River," and the $200 Julia A. Shaw prize to Lydia Field Emmet. There were 419 pictures hung, and 44 pieces of sculpture placed. The exhibition will be opened at the Fine Arts Building on March 17.

ANTI-SMOKE LEAGUE WANTED.

Charles T. Barney Suggests One to Keep Officialdom Busy.

Charles T. Barney, who has had some things to say recently about the smoke nuisance, suggests the formation here of an anti-smoke league on the plan of that in Baltimore. Mr. Barney was moved yesterday to make these remarks:

"I see that we have at last forced Dr. Darlington to acknowledge that the present laws are sufficient, if executed, to suppress the smoke nuisance, and that he has started on a voyage to discover what every citizen has seen for three years. The work is only begun, however, as Dr. Darlington made a similar show of activity about a year ago, which quickly died out. He must be held to the mark now.

"There is an Anti-Smoke League in Baltimore now, which is doing splendid work. It might be well to form one here. Meanwhile, if citizens who are suffering injury will advise me I will be glad to have the information."

MORE STAKES FOR SYSONBY.

Champion Entered in Cosmopolitan and Metropolitan at Belmont Park.

James R. Keene continues to name his champion Sysonby in all of the stakes for which he is eligible. Naturally a great number of the nominations are of a complimentary nature, but there is every evidence that he will not lack for opportunity in this his four-year-old season. He has been recently named for the Cosmopolitan and the Metropolitan of the Westchester Racing Association. The Cosmopolitan is a new stake and is to be run the opening day of the Spring meeting at Belmont Park. It has a value of $5,000, and is at one mile and a sixteenth. The Metropolitan is the race in which Sysonby began his racing career last season, and in it he ran a dead heat with Race King. It was the only time that the acknowledged king of the American turf was anywhere near defeat, and his showing was plainly due to lack of condition.

In both the Cosmopolitan and the Metropolitan this year the lists are particularly fashionable. In addition to the great Sysonby there are found the names of Artful, Hermis, Burgomaster, Tradition, Blandy, Santa Catalina, Hamburg Belle, Roseben, Astronomer, Oiseau, Stalwart, Tanya, Lord of the Vale, and many others of the first division. The nominations for the Cosmopolitan and Metropolitan are:

COSMOPOLITAN.—Sysonby, Delhi, Bohemian, Santa Catalina, Bohemia, Lord of the Vale, Mount Henry, Blandy, Tiptoe, Agile, Accountant, Water Light, Oiseau, Outcome, Orly II., Knight Errant, Bad News, Ort Wells, Grapple, Broadcloth, Ivan the Terrible, Monsieur Beaucaire, Tokalon, First Premium, Astronomer, Hamburg Belle, Dandelion, Vendor, Roseben, Jacquin, Bedouin, Israfel, Aeronaut, Aucassin, Retort, Merry Lark, Bull's Eye, Adbell, Oxford, Cederstrome, Belle of Pequest, Tradition, Cairngorm, Race King, Ormonde's Right, Halifax, Batts, Hermis, Stalwart, Black Prince, Goldsmith, Dolly Spanker, Gallivant, Inquisition, Tanya, Ironsides, Artful, Juggler, Red Knight, Master of Craft, and Heaslip. Total, 61.

METROPOLITAN.—Sysonby, Delhi, Bohemian, Santa Catalina, Bohemia, Tiptoe, Don Diego, Blandy, Mount Henry, Lord of the Vale, Accountant, Sue Smith, The Clown, Waterthrush, Orly II., Ort Wells, Grapple, Knight Errant, Ivan the Terrible, Tokalon, First Premium, Astronomer, Hamburg Belle, Dandelion, Vendor, Esoteric, Roseben, Jacquin, Israfel, Aeronaut, Aucassin, Oxford, Adbell, Samson, The Quail, East End, Entre, Cederstrome, Tradition, Cairngorm, Belle of Pequest, Race King, Red Knight, Ormonde's Right, Batts, Hermis, Stalwart, Goldsmith, Heaslip, Battleaxe, Nathan Hale, Dolly Spanker, Tanya, Artful, Timber, Burgomaster, and Pegasus. Total, 57.

For the Futurity of this year there are still 282 eligibles, with only one more declaration period to come. The estimated gross value of the race is $50,000. The void list is particularly heavy, and as a void entry naturally entails the return of the nomination fee, the value has a shrinkage from that source of from $5,000 to $6,000. There are no less than 383 mares in the void list.

NEW TRIAL IN PICTURE CASE.

The Ownership of "Love's Surprise" Is Still Undecided.

A new trial of the case involving Scalbert's picture, "Love's Surprise," in controversy between the Hoffman House and Mrs. Rose L. Blakely, was made possible yesterday when the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the lower court in favor of the Hoffman House.

The majority of the Appellate Division holds that the evidence was not sufficient to justify the finding of the trial court that the painting was the property of C. H. Read & Co. or their successors, the Hoffman House Corporation. The appellant laid a claim to the painting as the widow of Edward S. Stokes, in whose residence the picture was hanging at the time of his death.

U. S. REPRESENTATIVE TO OLYMPIC GAMES

President Roosevelt Appoints J. E. Sullivan of This City.

AMERICA'S ATHLETIC TEAM

Augmented by Lightbody and Three Canadians—Will Sail for the Greek Sports March 31.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—It was learned to-day from official sources that James E. Sullivan of New York will be the representative of the United States at the Olympic Games in Athens, which are to open on April 22.

The appointment is made in accordance with the request of King George of Greece, transmitted through the State Department, that each of the countries contesting send an official to represent them at the games. It is understood that the appointment of Mr. Sullivan was determined upon at a luncheon held at the White House several days ago, when President Roosevelt entertained a number of prominent men interested in athletics and particularly in the project of sending a large American team to compete in the coming carnival. The name of Mr. Sullivan was the only one considered, he embodying in the minds of all present every desiderata of the position.

The presence of official representatives from all the leading countries in the world gives the Olympic games this year a larger importance than they have attained hitherto. This is in line with the Grecian determination to make the carnival a biennial feature of surpassing interest. When it was determined to hold the games hereafter in Athens every two years, it was decided to enlist all the nations of the world officially in them. King George of Greece assumed the Honorary Presidency of the games, and appointed the Crown Prince to take active charge of the arrangements. The various embassies were instructed to approach the Governments to which they were appointed to enlist official co-operation of all to make the games a success.

It was through the representations of the Greek Embassy that President Roosevelt was induced to accept the honorary Presidency of the American committee to assist in the work of organization here, and even when he had turned the routine work over to his committee, headed by Caspar Whitney, the President continued to display an active interest in all that was done. The luncheon on Wednesday at the White House was understood to have been for the purpose of acquainting him with the plans consummated.

The American team to go abroad will probably be the largest sent by any country competing. That thirty men could be sent abroad, representing the best available talent in the United States, was due largely to James E. Sullivan. He has been in close touch with every phase of the preparatory work undertaken to insure its success. That the fund raised to defray the expenses has reached its present large proportions is largely the result of his solicitation. That the team chosen has included the best men in America who are in every sense fitted to represent this country has been largely secured by his effort. He has induced several of the best men to go who could ill afford to spare so much time for such a trip, and, what is more important, he has prevented the attendance of some who, while they might have been athletically capable, bore reputations none too savory for pure amateurism. Place on this team is in itself a certificate of bona fide amateurism that all can accept without question.

The final arrangements for the sending of the American team have been completed. It was learned here that the report to President Roosevelt stated that about $14,000 had been pledged and paid to the committee to defray the expenses, that this was ample to cover all the needs of the thirty men who are to go, that they would sail from New York on March 31, that all of the twenty-nine athletes had been entered in the various competitions by cable to insure the entry arriving there in time, and that besides these twenty-nine three other names had been entered of men who would go independently.

These three are James D. Lightbody of the University of Chicago, James D. Connolly of Boston, and D. Sullivan of Butte, Mont. The latter is the athlete who competed at Portland, Ore., in the fifty-six-pound-weight event. Connolly is the well-known writer of fishing stories and sea tales, who in 1896 won the triple jump, and is anxious to compete again. Lightbody is the great middle-distance runner, probably the most versatile in the world, who has made such a remarkable record in the West. He will compete in the 400, the 800, the 1,500 meter events, and probably in others. Lightbody would have been a selection of the American committee to represent this country had it been possible to get the consent of the University of Chicago authorities to allow him to participate, but Lightbody was behind in his studies and had been prohibited from taking part in athletics there, and the university refused to allow him to be absent. He, however, decided that he was so far behind that he could not make up his work, and that he would drop out of the university and make the trip, returning in the Fall to repeat his year.

It is also understood that three Canadian athletes are to make the trip representing Toronto, and will join the American team and accompany it to the games.

The games besides drawing together the best athletes from all the leading countries all over the world and affording competitions that will outclass anything hitherto held in the history of athletics, will attract dignitaries of the highest rank. It is hoped that both Emperor William and King Edward will be among the guests, and that royalty will be represented by other Princes of the blood, if not by rulers. The representatives of other countries include men of mark and family, whose names are highly held, and in view of this the appointment of the Secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union by President Roosevelt is looked on as highly complimentary.

President Roosevelt has expressed himself as delighted with the plans of the American Committee and hopeful of an unexampled success to be attained by the United States contingent.

SENTENCED TWICE IN A DAY.

Old Pickpocket Frank Preston to Spend Four Years in Sing Sing.

Frank Preston, alias "Peggy" Bingeman, who, in spite of his youthfulness, is known half way across this continent as one of the cleverest pickpockets, broke a record yesterday by being tried twice in the same day on two offenses, convicted and sentenced on both. He will go to Sing Sing this morning for four years and three months.

Preston was tried in the morning before Judge Cowing, in Part III., General Sessions, on the charge of stealing a diamond stud from Willis J. McCullough of 148 West Fourth Street, on an Eighth Street car on Feb. 12. A sentence of two years and six months was pronounced, and he was taken before Judge McMahon in Part II., where he was found guilty of stealing another diamond stud from Louis Pulvermacher of Brooklyn on a Madison Avenue car on Oct. 20, 1905. The sentence of one year and nine months was added.

The prisoner admitted having served time for similar crimes in Buffalo, Newport, Cincinnati, and Mount Holly, N. J. Judge McMahon said:

"New York is overrun with pickpockets. Inspector McLaughlin of the Detective Bureau has asked the aid of the Judges of this court in suppressing them, and he shall have it."

The English Courts have just decided that only a Pot Still Whiskey can be called Whiskey.

For 125 years the distillers of John Jameson Three Star Whiskey have steadfastly adhered to the old Pot Still method.

KICK COST BOY'S LIFE.

Man Who Attacked Fighting Schoolboys Charged with Homicide.

Andrew Arthur Quinn, 12 years old, of 305 Broadway, Williamsburg, died early yesterday morning of injuries due to a man's kick a week before. After an autopsy Coroners' Physician Charles Wuest announced that the boy had died from concussion of the brain from his head striking the sidewalk when he was thrown down by the kick.

Acting on information furnished by Herbert Samuels, 12 years old, of 240 South Second Street, a schoolmate of the Quinn boy, the police of the Bedford Avenue Station, last night arrested Emil Boll, 49 years old, a cloth cutter of 326 South Second Street, and George Barnes, 11 years old, of 334 South Third Street, also a schoolmate of Quinn's. Both were charged with homicide.

The Quinn boy attended Public School 19, at South Second and Keap Streets. He was monitor of the singing books in his room, and while he was collecting the books last week, Friday, Barnes laid his book on a desk instead of handing it out. Quinn muttered something about getting square.

At noon Quinn and Barnes, with a dozen more boys, met at Rodney and South Third Street, and the two fought. A man ran up to the two boys and tried to strike Barnes, who was taller than Quinn. Barnes got away, and, while Quinn's back was turned, the man kicked him in the right side, fracturing a rib. Quinn fell, and suffered concussion of the brain.

Quinn didn't tell his parents, but went back to school, returned on Monday, and aagin on Wednesday. On Wednesday night his parents called Dr. Herbert J. Knapp, who found the boy delirious and dying. In his delirium he would cry out to his assailant not to kill him.

DIDN'T DECLARE COSTLY LACE

Mrs. Mulhall Arrested on a Charge of Attempted Smuggling.

Soon after the White Star liner Baltic, in from Liverpool, docked yesterday morning, Mrs. Marjory Mulhall, one of the saloon passengers, was taken in custody, on a charge of attempting to smuggle several hundred dollars' worth of lace into the country. She was arraigned later before United States Commissioner Shields, in the Federal Building, and was released under $2,500 bail for a further examination. The woman is said to be a well-known dressmaker of this city.

The articles found in Mrs. Mulhall's possession were a valuable lace cloak, concealed under a less valuable outer garment, and several other costly pieces of foreign workmanship. Mrs. Mulhall was greatly embarrassed by the predicament in which she found herself, and did not appear to realize that the bringing of the goods into the country without declaring them was against the law. She was met by her two daughters, who seemed as grieved as was their mother.

The value of the goods seized was estimated at about $800 by Inspector Raczkiwicz. The case will be heard by Commissioner Shields this morning.

ELIGIBLE ONE-ARMED FIREMAN

Lieut. Field Gets a Chance to be Captain—Anti-Croker Men, Too.

Lieut. Charles E. Field, the only one-armed man in the New York Fire Department, has been made eligible for a Captaincy by Commissioner O'Brien, according to a list published yesterday. Field lost his left arm five years ago when a ladder truck on which he was riding was struck by a Long Island Railroad train. Since then he has been assigned to easy berths.

Commissioner O'Brien's list also includes two officers who already have been made Captains. They are John H. Link and Robert C. Buckholdt. Both testified against Chief Croker three years ago. Soon after the Croker trial they were promoted from Foremen to be Lieutenants.

There are 150 names on Commissioner O'Brien's list, with 37 vacant Captaincies to be filled.

"MARY SMITH" DIDN'T STEAL.

Mrs. Hirsch of the Hotel Wolcott Mistaken About Her $40 Loss.

"Mrs. Mary Smith," who bore the brunt of the misunderstanding about some lost money that upset Upper Broadway on Thursday afternoon, was discharged in Jefferson Market Court yesterday by Magistrate Walsh after Mrs. Patrick Hirsch, a guest at the Hotel Wolcott, had said that a "dreadful mistake" had been made.

Mrs. Hirsch and "Mary Smith" and Mrs. J. F. Liendenstein of the St. James Hotel, all with legions of witnesses, were taken to the Tenderloin Station on Thursday afternoon by Policeman White, who could not untangle the contradictory statements about $40, which Mrs. Hirsch said she had lost. Mrs. Liendenstein had found a ten-dollar bill, which she was willing to admit was not hers. In the chatelaine bag of "Mary Smith" was $27, which she said was only part of some money she had lost and had just found.

In court yesterday "Mrs. Mary Smith's" lawyer said a great mistake had been made and asked that his client be paroled in his custody that she might go home to her baby. Mrs. Hirsch offered to withdraw the charge when she heard about the baby. The lawyer answered that the name of his client must be cleared. Mrs. Hirsch consented to admit that she "had been mistaken" after a talk with the young prisoner.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Illinois Central Railroad Wins Suit—Other Decisions.

In a decision by T. S. Sharretts the Board of United States General Appraisers sustained yesterday a claim filed by the Illinois Central Railroad regarding the customs classification of figures composed of china or bisque. The Collector at New Orleans assessed duty at the rate of 60 per cent., on the plea that the merchandise was a manufacture of china or bisque. This rate was opposed by the railroad company, on the ground that the figures were dolls and should be permitted to enter at 35 per cent. ad valorem. This claim the board sustains, and the Collector is directed to reliquidate the entries in accordance with the finding of the Customs Court.

The board also sustained a protest filed by L. H. Mace & Co. and others of New York, it being alleged that certain articles composed of celluloid, or pyroxylin, are dutiable at the rate provided for "toys." Collector Stranahan had assessed the articles at the rate of 65 cents a pound and 25 per cent. ad valorem.

Other importers' claims sustained were filed by Herrman, Sternbach & Co., New York; S. H. Kim, Stone & Downer Company, E. H. Child, and A. L. Tasker, Boston; Montgomery Ward & Co. and F. F. Jaques Tea Company, Chicago, and William Wolff & Co., San Francisco.

The board overruled protests filed by the Acker, Merrall & Condit Company, J. & H. Rosenberg, F. Cusimano, Austin Baldwin & Co., M. L. Eckstein, and L. Metzger & Co., New York; Charles M. Taylor's Sons, O. G. Hempstead & Co., and Theodore Massey & Co., Philadelphia; G. W. Sheldon & Co. and Edson, Keith & Co., Chicago; the Wing Chong Lung Company, Honolulu, and Etta Burbone and Mrs. Edward Brown, Bangor, Me.

FIGHT ON ODELL POSTPONED.

President and Gov. Higgins Fear Effect on Pending Legislation.

Word was passed around among the Republicans at the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday that the anti-Odell forces in the party had given up all idea of trying to make a further fight against Chairman Odell until after the adjournment of the Legislature. This was the result of Senator Platt's statement of Thursday that he favored the selection of Congressman John Dwight for State Chairman in Odell's place.

No secret is made of the fact that both President Roosevelt and Gov. Higgins think it unwise to press their anti-Odell fight at this time because of the effect it would have on pending legislation at Albany. Some of the Higgins men declared they could not understand such an attitude, but they were following orders just the same.

It became known incidentally that Lieut. Gov. M. Linn Bruce had been urged to become a candidate of the anti-Odellites for State Chairman, but had declined. William Barnes, Jr., of Albany has also declined to permit himself to be put up, and the anti-Odellites are having a hard time trying to find a standard bearer.

Senator Platt pushed along the Dwight talk yesterday. He said that Odell should be displaced as soon as possible, but admitted that Gov. Higgins's wish for delay would have to be respected.

ASK $100,000 FOR BROKEN LEG

Mrs. Keenan Values Her Injury at $50,000—Husband Wants Like Amount.

Patrick Keenan, who in 1899 and 1900 was janitor of the house at 168 West 121st Street, was the plaintiff yesterday in a suit brought in the Supreme Court to recover $50,000 from the New York City Railway Company, because his wife's leg was broken in a street car accident in Lenox Avenue on July 4, 1899. Keenan says he is entitled to that amount for the loss of her services. Mrs. Keenan has a suit on the calendar to recover a like amount for her injuries.

Ex-Assistant District Attorney John F. McIntyre represented the railway company, while Robert L. Turk appeared for Keenan. The company says that Mrs. Keenan received her injury as the result of her own negligence.

Mrs. Keenan was on the stand nearly all day yesterday. She testified that her son had just left the car, and that she was in the act of doing so, when it started suddenly, throwing her to the street and breaking her leg. She still walks on crutches.

Dr. Wolfred Nelson of the Astor House testified that Mrs. Keenan is suffering from a permanent shortening of the leg. The case will be continued on Monday.

BIG ELECTRIC CONTRACT.

General Electric to Transform the London, Brighton & South Coast R. R.

Word reached here yesterday that the London, Brighton & South Coast Railroad Company of England had decided to operate part of its lines by the Winter-Eichberg single phase alternating current electric traction system, the British patents for which are controlled by General Electric interests. There will be about seventy-five miles of track electrified at a cost of about $3,000,000.

All trains entering both the London terminals will be handled by electric power. Thirteen tracks are operated at Victoria and eleven at London Bridge. Each train will consist of three cars, two being motor cars, each with four motors developing 600 horse power a car. The Winter-Eichberg system was originated by the General Electric Company's German branch. This is the most important contract ever let in England for the conversion of a steam surface road into an electric system.

VANDERBILT CUP RACE COMMISSION ENLARGED

Foreign Auto Clubs May Name Representatives This Year.

OTHER CHANGES PROBABLE

Long Island Course Must Be Selected for Contest—Pennington Speedway a Dead Issue.

Jefferson De Mont Thompson, the new Chairman of the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association, intimated that changes were likely to be made at an early date in the conditions of the Vanderbilt Cup race. He stated at the close of the Directors' meeting on Thursday that the Cup Commission would be enlarged by official representatives from the automobile clubs of Italy, England, and Germany, and perhaps from other countries, provided they enter cars for the contest. Hitherto, France has been the only European country represented on the commission, and it is understood that this lack of official representation was really the source of the criticisms that arose over the conduct of the race by the foreign automobilists during the conference of motor clubs in Paris last December.

It was ascertained yesterday that this enlargement of the commission, thus making it more international in character, is William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.'s, wish. Some definite statement on the subject is expected from him when the new Amateur Athletic Association Racing Board meets, which will probably be within the next two or three weeks. Mr. Thompson said yesterday that he had not yet named his committee. He will confer on this matter with President John Farson when the latter returns to the city from Chicago, probably next week.

The general impression is that the new committee will be considerably less in numbers than in former years, and that men will be selected for their business and managerial ability, as well as a broad knowledge of automobile affairs. The Automobile Association of America realizes from past errors that the time has gone by to place men on committees simply because of their good fellowship. Mr. Farson has already impressed his influence upon the Directors as one who intends to see good results. To accomplish this requires work, and the American Automobile Association committees this year will be composed of workers.

It will be necessary for the Racing Board to make clear the changed conditions for the big race, provided any alterations are to be made in the nature of the contest, at an early date. If the same time is adhered to as last year for the closing of entries, May 15 will be the latest that entries can be received. Therefore, barely two months remain for the official naming of all the cars, the selection of the course, and the naming of the date for the race, as well as for the elimination contest.

The Racing Board will make some official announcement at its coming meeting regarding these conditions. There is little doubt that the Long Island course will be chosen again. A slight change may be made, so as to eliminate the dangerous curve near Albertson's, where Foxhall Keene ran into a telegraph pole. This poor section of the road could be readily cut out by continuing the route from the Bull's Head tavern along the North Hempstead Road to Lakeville, thus avoiding the Guinea Woods Road and the Willets road.

The Long Island course is the only available route now open for the Vanderbilt Cup. It had been expected that work would have commenced before this on the Pennington (N. J.) speedway, and on account of the aroused interest in that project the American Automobile Association adopted its resolution in January favoring road races hereafter on private speedways. The Pennington speedway, however, as Emerson Brooks said yesterday, is in a comatose condition. The project of a more ambitious automobile highway to Philadelphia from New York has turned the attention of the speedway enthusiasts to this more elaborate scheme, and plans are under way for ascertaining the probable cost.

Therefore, with no fear of rivalry on the part of the Pennington speedway the residents of Mineola, Garden City, Hyde Park, and other localities who have benefited financially from the Vanderbilt Cup race are certain of having the big event in their territory again. The petitions that have been circulated during the last few days in that portion of Long Island have been signed by several hundred persons, but as no rival course is in the field for the big road race it will hardly be necessary to apply to the American Automobile Association for the race, particularly as a majority of the Nassau County Supervisors are said to be favorable to granting the use of the highways this year.

NET PLAY AT HAND TENNIS.

Dr. Mallett Won Against Long Handicap at New York A. C.

Dexterity in using both hands with telling effect resulted in Dr. G. H. Mallett winning his match yesterday in the annual handicap hand tennis tournament at the New York Athletic Club. Dr. Mallett was handicapped at 7 aces against the 12 aces of his opponent, W. W. Swan. This gave the latter the advantage of 5 aces on the scoring, but Dr. Mallett won the competition by taking two straight sets at 25—12 and 25—17.

The match, which was a continuation of the first round, was played on the main court of the big gymnasium of the Mercury Foot clubhouse, at Sixth Avenue and Central Park South. Swan developed an excellent service right at the beginning, so that Dr. Mallett was called into active play in order to get his returns back safely. Swan endeavored to stroke the ball on his adversary's returns for place and passing shots along the side lines of Dr. Mallett's court. He successfully got the shots along the lines a number of times very cleverly. Dr. Mallett was on the alert for this side to side playing of the ball. He tried for everything that came over the net, and by volleying hard and steadily from both his right and left hand he outplayed Swan by a wide margin on the point score.

The most brilliant work of Swan was in the third service hand of the second set. In this hand he counted 5 aces by swiftly played passes from close to the net, getting the ball down and under Dr. Mallett's arm. The rapidity with which the match was played greatly exhausted Swan, and he was suffering from fatigue at the end of the contest. The score:

FIRST SET.

Dr. G. H. Mallett, (7 aces)—4 0 0 4 2 5 0 3 1 2 3. Total, 25.
W. W. Swan, (12 aces)—0 1 0 0 0 1 0 1 2 1 1. Total, 12.

SECOND SET.

Dr. G. H. Mallett, (7 aces)—2 2 0 0 0 8 0 0 9 4. Total, 25.
W. W. Swan, (12 aces)—0 1 5 2 0 1 1 0 2 .. Total, 17.

High-Class Entries for 7th's Games.

An unusually large entry list and of high class is expected for the annual games of the Seventh Regiment Athletic Association, which are scheduled for the regimental armory on the evening of March 24. The features of the rather extensive programme will be a 300-yard championship and a rescue and sack race. In the 300-yard event will be Paul Pilgrim, Walter Cimlotti, "Vic" Andrews, E. L. Brodhead, and "Bill" Horner, and as there is not much difference in their prowess an excellent race should result.

Richard Sheldon, the old Yale football guard, will try to establish a new record in the rescue race. This event long has been a feature of the Seventh Regiment games. For the sack race D. Darlington, the holder of the world's record, is in fine shape, and it is likely that a new mark will be made in the event.

FOOTBALL REMAINS IN WEST.

No Professional Coachers and Style of Game to be Modified.

CHICAGO, March 9.—Western colleges to-day decided to have football this year, although the style of game will be modified to such an extent that professionalism, brutality, and unnecessary danger, it is hoped, will be eliminated. This was the decision reached to-night by Faculty representatives of the "Big Nine" colleges, who were called together in a second "reform" conference by President Angell of the University of Michigan.

The recommendations which were chiefly objected to were the abolishment of the professional coach and the training table and the establishment of the three-year rule. The professional coach, it was decided to-day, is to remain only as long as existing contracts are in force. This means that the universities of Indiana and of Michigan will be the only colleges of the "Big Nine" which will have the services of a professional coach.

The training table was abolished. In regard to the style of game, a committee was appointed with authority to pass judgment on the rules adopted by the American Rules Committee. If these rules are found to be unsatisfactory the committee is vested with power to frame regulations of its own. The members of this committee are Prof. Sampson of the University of Indiana, Prof. Smith of Iowa University, and Prof. Moran of Purdue University.

Heretofore the football season has closed on Thanksgiving Day, but in the future the last game will be decided on the Saturday before Thanksgiving.

The three-year rule was changed so that all students who have taken part in athletics for three years will be eligible for another year, but that at the end of 1906 the three-year rule will be put in force so that it will include all college athletes.

NEW YORK BOATS AFTER CUP.

Three Contemplate Racing In Sonder Klass Against Germany.

There will be at least one New York boats in the race for the Roosevelt Cup between the German and American yachts, and possibly three. An order has been placed with William Gardner for a boat by a prominent New York racing man, a member of the New York Yacht Club, and the craft will be a competitor for the cup. The name of the owner is withheld for the present. Another equally well-known racing man is considering designs by Cox & Stevens for the same race, and a third, said to be young Havemeyer, may build from designs of Clinton H. Crane.

William Gardner said yesterday that the race would present one of the most interesting events on the racing schedule of the year. "There is likely to be a very wide diversity of types developed by the new condition that to the man interested in racing will present a mighty interesting study. My boat will partake somewhat of the general character of a raceabout and somewhat of the character of the 22-foot class built in Massachusetts Bay last year. With the sum total of length, beam, and draught not to exceed 32 feet, there is a wide diversity of design possible."

The number of boats for the race is likely to be very large. Almost daily additions are made to them. Herreshoff has an order for a third, besides those for H. M. Sears and F. G. Macomber. Edwin A. Boardman has now four, for Dr. John L. Bremer, C. H. M. Foster, Charles Francis Adams 2d, and C. P. Curtis, Jr. Small Brothers are said to have two boats for Dr. Morton Prince and E. W. Joyce, and Gen. Charles J. Paine is named as the owner of a boat designed by Burgess & Packard. Besides these Crowninshield will build two, maybe three, craft.

LINKS FOR WOMEN'S GOLF.

Metropolitan Championship to be Held at Englewood in May.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association was held yesterday at the Hotel Hargrave, 112 West Seventy-second Street. By a unanimous vote the metropolitan women's championship was awarded to the Englewood Golf Club, and the dates of May 21 to 24 selected for the event. The same conditions as prevailed last year will remain in force this season, a qualifying round preceding the match-play rounds.

The Ocean Country Club of Far Rockaway and the Siwaney Country Club of Mount Vernon were elected to membership, bringing the total membership up to 24 clubs. The Morris County, Fairfield County, and Ardsley Clubs have consented to hold one-day open tournaments during the season, to which all women in the local association are eligible, and special invitations have been extended to the women for a single day's informal play by fourteen clubs. Mrs. E. F. Sanford, the President, is highly pleased at the growing interest in women's golf, and she predicts that the coming contests will bring out more competitors than have been seen for some time in local events.

Knowles Defeated Davis at Pool.

E. Knowles defeated L. Davis last night in the amateur pool tournament at the Broadway Billiard Academy by the score of 100 to 97. Knowles was handicapped at 100, while Davis played 125 points. Both players kept on even terms up to the last frame, when Knowles ran out with eight points. The winner's high run was 17, with two scratches. Davis's best run was 18, with two scratches. W. Downs (100) and P. Daly (100) will meet in to-night's game.

More Money for Olympic Fund.

The Huckleberry Indians of the New York Athletic Club yesterday forwarded to Julian W. Curtiss, Treasurer, $100 as their contribution to the American Olympic Fund to defray the expenses of sending a team to Athens. The Irish-American Athletic Club forwarded a check for $250 for the same purpose. The other subscriptions received by Mr. Curtiss yesterday were: Southern Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, $250; Military Athletic League, $100, and the Thirteenth Regiment Athletic Association, $50. Among the other contributions received the names of the following clubs of the metropolitan district can be found: Brooklyn Athletic Club, St. George Athletic Club, Mohawk Athletic Club, Pastime Athletic Club, Church Athletic League, and Far Hills Athletic Club.

Dauntless R. C. Receives Trophy.

After a delay of ten months the Dauntless Rowing Club has received the prize for the junior four-oared gig race, which was won by the club at the Harlem Regatta Association regatta last Decoration Day. The cup is presented by Mr. Watson of Australia through Ned Hanlan, the professional oarsman, and is to be competed for until won three times consecutively by any club of the Harlem Regatta Association. The Dauntless Club will defend the cup in the annual regatta on May 30.

YALE ATHLETIC CONTROL IS VESTED IN STUDENTS

Faculty Appoints Committee to Co-operate in Reforms.

PRESIDENT HADLEY'S REPORT

Question of Limiting Competition and Similar Specific Recommendations to be Jointly Decided.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 9.—President Hadley of Yale University announced to-night the result of Yale Faculty's inquiry into athletic abuses in the university, together with the report of the special committee of the University Council upon this subject, and the action of the undergraduate Faculties upon that report. He said:

> The committee appointed by the University Council last Autumn to inquire into the conduct of athletics in Yale University reports that the principle of student management, in spite of the difficulties connected therewith, is, in its judgment, a good one. The committee has investigated many evils connected with the extravagant use of time and money in athletics, and has suggested to the committee of the Yale Financial Union a number of desirable reforms. The Financial Union is now occupied with attempts to carry out the suggestions of the Council Committee as fully and promptly as possible. As fast as the students and the graduate advisers have worked out these plans the results will be given to the public.
> The two undergraduate Faculties have given their general approval to the course suggested by the Council Committee. They have also appointed special committees, which, acting in co-operation with another and with the student body, can secure intelligent treatment of any further questions that may arise.

He announced the new Joint Committee named by the Academic and Scientific School Faculties to inquire further into Yale undergraduate athletics, as follows: Prof. Morris, Chairman; Profs. Farr and Emery of the academic department; Prof. Penfield, Chairman; Profs. Mendel and Percy Smith of the Sheffield School.

The Academic Faculty report issued to-night states that it is the Yale opinion:

> That it is wise to leave the management of athletic matters in the main in the hands of undergraduates and their immediate advisers, although we must not be understood as surrendering our right, which we have often asserted in the past, to legislate in regard to any points which fall immediately under our jurisdiction, especially those concerning the morals, the discipline, or scholarship of the students.
>
> That since in our belief the present situation calls for further action in the direction falling properly under our control, we direct that a committee of three be appointed to consider in detail this portion of the whole subject and to consult with the undergraduate managers and the Advisory Committee with a view to bringing before us specific recommendations as to what legislation is called for.
>
> That we express our cordial appreciation of the work done by the Committee of the University Council and our approval in most particulars of the specific recommendations made which have as their object the improvement of the present athletic situation.
>
> That, inasmuch as we hope to learn at an early date that the Advisory Athletic Committee and the student body have accepted the several recommendations of the Committee of the University Council and made them binding for the future, we take no further action in regard to these specific points.

SUSPEND SCHOOL FOOTBALL.

Principal's Council to Consider Recommendation to Stop Game.

The governors of schoolboy athletics representing forty-two schools in and about New York are following in the footsteps of the collegiate authorities and considering the question of the abolition, suspension, or reform of football. The question will be decided at a meeting of the Principals' Athletic Council called by the President, Virgil Prettyman, at the request of its Executive Committee. The committee adopted a resolution advising the suspension of the game as follows:

"Resolved, That the secondary schools now members of the Principals' Athletic Council should suspend the game of football for one year."

The meeting will be held in the committee room of the Board of Education, Fifty-ninth Street and Park Avenue. Many of the Principals of the schools are opposed to doing away with the sport. The boys themselves, of course, want to retain the game, especially among the high schools. The annual football championships have furnished money to defray the expenses of other teams, and the boys declare that to take away this revenue will materially cripple athletics. They fear, however, that they are likely to be voted down by the representatives of private schools, which numerically comprise the greater portion of the Athletic Council. A split in the Council appears to be imminent. The high schools, in the event of suspension against their wishes, may form an independent body.

The list of schools that received notification to attend the meeting at which the proposed action will be put to a vote includes:

Cook Academy, Trinity School, Hamilton Institute, Sachs Institute, Staten Island Academy, De Witt Clinton, St. Paul's, Charles School, Adelphi Academy, Prospect Heights, Claghorn's Business College, Kyle Institute, Polytechnic Preparatory, Brooklyn Latin, Barnard School, Leal's School, Boys' High, Stuyvesant, Eastern District High, Commercial High, Columbia Institute, Richmond Hill, Morris High, Bryant High, Newton Academy, Friend's Academy, Summit Academy, Dr. Holbrook School, High School of Commerce, Manual Training High, Erasmus Hall High, Staten Island Academy, De La Salle, City College Annex, Allen Stevenson School, Pingry, St. John's, Hudson River Military, Peddie Institute, Cutler, Berkeley, Flushing High, Far Rockaway High, and Jamaica High.

BASKET BALL MEN FIGHT.

Harvard Player Assaults Columbia Forward and Is Roughly Handled.

A small riot marked the Harvard and Columbia basket ball game last night in the university gymnasium on Morningside Heights, precipitated by Quigley, one of the Harvard forwards. Toward the end of the second half of the game, after having been several times warned for rough and unsportsmanlike play, he landed a left hook on the jaw of Cuthell of Columbia and stretched the Blue and White player on the floor. In an instant several Columbia men were pummelling the offending player, and only by the prompt interference of Manager Fisher and Capt. Hurley of Columbia and the joint efforts of Columbia and Harvard players, was he saved from rougher handling. The Columbia students and other spectators were indignant, but the influence of some cool heads among them prevented their taking a hand in the melee.

It was as flagrant and unprovoked an attack as has been witnessed in college sport in a long while. Nor is it the first offense of this player. Time and again, in almost every game, he has been warned, and The Harvard Crimson, the student paper, reprimanded him most severely. But in spite of this he has been allowed to continue play. It is probable that this offense will be meted with its just punishment at the hands of the Crimson's athletic authorities. The player he attacked was no physical match for him, as he stands head and shoulders above Cuthell.

The incident marred a well-played and interesting, though rough, game. The match decided the second rank in the intercollegiate basket ball championship. If defeat had been Columbia's portion she would have had to give place to the Cambridge five. Victory insured her second position behind Pennsylvania. This gave an exceptional point to the contest.

Columbia won by a score of 22 to 17, but at all times there was a chance of a spurt landing Harvard the winner. Line-up:

Columbia, 22.	Position.	Harvard, 17.
Melitzer	Right Forward	Brown
Moore	Left forward	Quigley
Ryan, M. White	Centre	Amberg
Cuthill, Fettridge, R. White	Right guard	Griffiths

Goals from field—Columbia—Moore, 3; Hurley, 2; Cuthill, 2; Ryan, 1; Melitzer, 1. Harvard—Griffiths, 3; Quigley, 3; Amberg, 2. Goals from foul—Columbia—Moore, 4. Harvard—Griffiths, 1. Time of halves—Twenty minutes. Referee—C. G. Lochmuller, Amateur Athletic Union.

Recreation Centres Contest for Points.

Recreation Centres Nos. 110, 105, 31, and 16 contested last night at Public School No. 188, Lewis and East Houston Streets, for the district championship. Owing to poor management only two events were run off, giving R. C. No. 16 the lead with 11 points. Summary:

BUSY DAY FOR TRAINERS.

Joyner's Two-Year-Olds Carry Off Speed Honors at Gravesend.

Fine weather and an excellent track condition resulted in a busy day for trainers at Gravesend yesterday, and during the forenoon hours there was more speedy work shown than at any time this Spring. A. J. Joyner came over from Sheepshead Bay with sixteen two-year-olds, and they carried off the speed honors. A pair of fillies, one a racy-looking chestnut and the other a bay, were the heroines. They went along for a quarter through the front stretch in 0:23¾, and even at that clip had something left. It was a move that would indicate an early start, and the colors of the stable will surely be seen at Aqueduct, if not before that meeting. A brown filly by Watercress, the sire of Waterboy, in company with a good-looking chestnut miss, went through the same quarter in 0:25, and a Dieudonne filly, with a handsome bay gelding, stepped the route in 0:25½. These are the ones that can be looked for early. Others in the big string were only asked galloping exercise.

"Matt" Allen had the J. B. Brady stars under saddle, but was content to give them nice open gallops. Those shown were Oiseau, at one time considered a worthy rival of Sysonby; Mackey Witt, and Holscher.

"Tom" Welsh, after galloping Inquisitor, Merry Lark, and Duenna, permitted them to go along smartly for three furlongs in 0:44½. Ormondale was only asked to gallop. W. O'B. McDonough, present owner of the Futurity winner, was on hand with Mrs. McDonough, and expressed himself as more than pleased with the colt's condition.

"Fred" Burlew sent a set of his two-year-olds along nicely, ending the work with a breeze of a quarter in 0:25. They are rapidly approaching racing condition. Belmere was sent along for an easy three furlongs in 0:48, and the others from the stable were only galloped. Trainer Timmons sent Prince Vic and a chestnut colt a good half in 0:57.

"Father Bill" Daly permitted Veronese and Warning, of his Benning string, to step along for five furlongs in 1:06. It was an easy task for them. Best Boy and Caronal went a half in 0:51½, and Amberjack breezed three furlongs in 0:39¾. Tom Cod and Priority had a half-mile task and accomplished it in 0:53.

"Jim" McLaughlin gave all of his charges useful exercise. The Poet and Jack McKeon went along for an easy five furlongs in 1:09, and the latter finished up the six furlongs in 1:24. Blue Coat had a six-furlong task in 1:24½. The two-year-olds Solly M., Sun Up, and Mode went along for three furlongs in better than 0:39½.

"Tim" Gaynor showed Whimsical and Star Spangle, and under double wraps they went a quarter in 0:28 and pulled up the three furlongs in 0:41½. Clarence Merritt indulged Sterling in a nice open half in 0:55. Suffice went the same route in 0:54¾, and Riggs stepped his half in 0:56½. All are doing exceedingly well.

Trainer Claxton had the jumping mare Miss Hobhorse out, but she threw her exercise boy and ran away. She was caught after going a mile, and no serious damage was done.

James Rowe had the horses of James R. Keene in light work over the Futurity chute at Sheepshead Bay. Trainers at Sheepshead have complained that the yearling track is too narrow for galloping when the big strings are taking their exercise, and the real work of preparation at that course cannot begin seriously until the main course is ready for use.

GIANTS HAVE LIVELY WORK.

The McGanns and McGraws Play Fast, with Pitchers Alternating.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 9.—The McGanns, led by the Giants' Captain, and the McGraws, led by the manager, entered into a battle royal at Red Elm Park to-day, which furnished the best practice for the champions of the training season. The twenty-odd players were divided into teams, with pitchers alternating in the box, each with a couple of innings' work. The play was fast throughout. Failing to secure consent of any one of his own men, "Dusty" Miller, a veteran player once with Cincinnati, was called on to umpire and had his hands full watching tricky base runners cut off yards from the corners on long drives to the outfield, and resorting to other methods that might have driven a regular referee to desperation.

McGraw played at second base in place of Gilbert, who is on the temporary hospital list owing to a strained ligament encountered at football played yesterday in the mud. Mathewson was also ailing, suffering from a cold, but Manager McGraw expects both to be in line on Sunday, when a real "championship" clash will take place between members of the Giants, who are stopping at two hotels. The teams will be known as the Clarendons and the Cordovas. The prize will be a banquet to be furnished by the hotel losing.

Gilbert and Mathewson, if well enough, will line up with the Cordovas, which will be captained by McGraw. "Broadway Alec" Smith, Kennedy, Hall, Graham, Ames, Wiltse, Wright, and the promising Louisville pitcher, George Ferguson, will be with the Cordovas. McGann will have a majority of the veterans with the Clarendons, including "Iron Man" McGinnity, Taylor, Donlin, Bresnahan, Dahlen, Elliott, and Marshall.

The new baseball suits arrived to-day and were donned by some of the Giants. The shirts are lettered, in black cloth, "Champions of the World." The uniform is of Yale gray and will be worn in all exhibition games prior to the championship season.

Arthur Devlin, the third baseman, has been excused from training and has left for Washington. The reason for his leaving, it is said, is with the view of getting married.

BATTED CHESBRO FREELY.

Greater New York Youngsters, Headed by Clarkson, Beat Regulars 8 to 7.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 9.—The weather was kind to the Greater New Yorks this afternoon, and the diamond, completely dried, was as fast as ever. After the Birminghams had their share of playing time, the visitors divided and played a game of five innings. Clarkson pitched for the youngsters and Chesbro worked out for the regulars. The latter was "touched up" lively, and the "cubs" scored a victory by a score of 8 to 7. Griffith umpired and kept the men hustling. He reminded them, when once there was considerable "kidding," that they were in Birmingham to work and not to play. The game was distinguished by the hard hitting of Hahn, the fielder obtained from New Orleans, and Leroy, the Indian pitcher.

Delehanty, who was acquired from Birmingham last season, is expected to-morrow, in spite of the fact that he declares that he will jump to the "outlaws" if Vaughan does not award to him a portion of the purchase price paid by Griffith. Manager Vaughan declares that Delehanty will not receive a penny even if it would save him the entire thousand dollars.

The first regular game will be played to-morrow. Griffith announced this afternoon that Leroy and Newton would pitch for the New Yorks and McGuire would catch. The Birminghams will pitch Jones, Utter, and Billiard, all youngsters. Wilhelm, who pitched last season for Boston, and who is now signed with the local team, is expected here to-morrow.

Frank Farrell in Montreal Club.

MONTREAL, March 9.—Patrick T. Powers, ex-President of the Eastern League and principal owner of the champion Providence Club of that organization, and J. McCaffrey, who, it is said, represents Frank Farrell, owner of the Greater New York Club of the American League, are in this city with a view of forming a new stock company to operate the Montreal Eastern League Baseball Club. Several Montreal men have already subscribed stock, and the officers, except the business manager, will be Montreal men.

Xavier Beats Jersey Champions.

In a fast and interesting basket ball game played at the Xavier Club, 205 West Fourteenth Street, last night, the crack Xavier Athletic Association team defeated the fast Acme five of Newark, champions of New Jersey, by the score of 39 to 16. The line-up:

Xavier, 39.	Position.	Acme, 16.
Kenny	Right forward	Wahlen
Donovan	Centre	Cleary
Craven	Right guard	Connell
Roach	Left guard	Bell

Goals from field—Kenny, (10,) Kearin, (8,) Roach, O'Connor, (3,) Cleary, (4,) Bell. Goal from field—Kenny.

Gleason Wins Gymnastic Prize.

Interesting exhibitions of gymnastic skill were witnessed last night at the annual championships of the West Side Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, held at its gymnasium, Fifty-seventh Street and Eighth Avenue. There were ten contestants, each giving performances on the German horse, horizontal bar, and parallel bars. The result was close. J. G. Gleason, with 81.2 points, received first prize; E. J. Klein, with 80.7 points, second, and R. Potter, with 77 points, third.

Champion Ray Ewry gave a fine exhibition of jumping and kicking. In the standing high jump he cleared 5 feet 2 inches. In the double high kick his feet touched 7 feet 3 inches, and in the hitch and kick he scored 9 feet 2 inches.

TIGERS ABANDON "SOCCER."

Faculty Objected to Association Football on Account of Outside Games.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 9.—Announcement was made to-day that the Association football team of Princeton University, which was organized this year, has been disbanded. The new sport was beginning to get a strong hold at Princeton, and the team had already played a number of games. A schedule had been arranged for the Spring which took the team out of town on several occasions, and it is said that on this account the Faculty frowned on the "soccer" enthusiasts.

The manager said that the aggregation had been broken up because the Faculty Committee on Sports would not give them permission to take their trips out of town. The news came as a shock to the players, and it is feared that it will prove the death blow to "soccer" at Princeton, as it will be difficult to arrange a schedule with all the games to be played here.

Hoppe Wins Two Billiard Games.

Willie Hoppe won both games yesterday which were played in his billiard rooms, 56 West Thirtieth Street. In the afternoon, while playing 18.1 balk line, he defeated Charles Peterson, playing 18.2 balk line, by 300 points to 194. Hoppe's average was 12 and his high run 77. Peterson averaged 7 19-25, and his high run was 40. In the evening the game was more closely contested, and at one time it looked as if Peterson would win. Hoppe scored 400 points to 380 for Peterson. Hoppe's high run of 124 contributed to his victory. His average was 14 22-27. Peterson averaged 14 16-26, and his best run was 75. At the close of the game Willie Hoppe presented a gold watch and fob to Peterson. The latter will play his final game to-day.

Tilt's Good Pool at N. Y. A. C.

W. A. Tilt, the present pool champion of the New York Athletic Club, played one of the fastest games of pool ever seen in the clubhouse last night in the championship tournament contests. He met J. M. Heatherton, who is also one of the leading pool players in the Crescent Athletic Club, and beat the latter by 100 points to 32. The game ran along evenly until the score stood 29 for each. Tilt then made some remarkable runs, scoring 15, 14, and 12 in succession, and made his remaining 71 points while Heatherton only got 3. Tilt's playing was characterized by accuracy and splendid judgment. Heatherton met J. W. Becker in the second game and won by 100 points to 64 for Becker.

Hildebrand Rode a Winner.

HOT SPRINGS, March 9.—Eugene Hildebrand returned to the saddle to-day after eight months on the ground, and, with three mounts, he rode one winner and one second. Maxim Gorky finished second in the opening race, but was disqualified for fouling. Ben Lear, Vagabond, and Mike Sutton were the other winners.

FRAYER-MILLER
THE CAR OF ENDURANCE

Did you ever consider that at the critical moment when your motor needs cooling the water cooled engine is hottest, because the motor is then very hot which in turn heats the water. The result is you are pumping hot water, which has small cooling properties after it attains a temperature of 212 degrees. On the other hand, the FRAYER-MILLER always pumps air of the same uniform temperature. If your motor is laboring or standing still the result is always the same—you pump 50 cubic feet of air per minute for each horse-power developed. Think this over carefully—then let us give you a real demonstration.

PRICE

Every purchaser of a Motor Car has the question of price to consider, not only as to first cost, but as to future expense.

And the decision had better rest in favor of that car which while high in price is insured against outlays are provided against in the first cost of such a car, and the delays and annoyances because of the frequent repair shop visits of the cheaper car are entirely obviated in the higher grades.

Say to yourself "never satisfied," if you are not to be satisfied. Go wrong, to have the best is the first economy.

Our little booklet, "Expert Testimony," tells why.

THE SUPREME COURT.

The announced retirement of Justice Brown from the bench of the United States Supreme Court and the prospective retirement of Chief Justice Fuller, now in his seventy-third year, will impose upon the President a duty involving some of the gravest responsibilities of the Executive office. In Washington it is taken for granted that President Roosevelt in filling these vacancies will appoint Judges who can be counted on to sustain the law regulating railroad rates, of which he hopes during this session to secure the enactment. The fact that such a comment should be made, or such a conjecture ventured upon, shows to what an extent the fundamental and vital principles of our Government have been lost sight of in the rush and hurry of events and of new ideas in the National capital.

We speak well within bounds when we say that sober-minded men in the country will await with no little apprehension the announcement of the President's choice of successors to the retiring Justices. It ought not to be so—the speech of people shows that it is so. It was said that some two years ago, when the name of a Western jurist was suggested to the President as one worthy of consideration in connection with Supreme Court appointments, he declared with much emphasis that the next man he appointed to the Supreme bench must be one who would agree with his Philippine policy, his Panama policy, his policy of rate regulation, and his policy of controlling the corporations. This utterance, had it been made, would have shown so shocking a disregard of the relation of the Executive and the Judicial departments that we withhold credence to the story, although these rules prescribing the qualification of a Supreme Court Justice were said to have been laid down by Mr. Roosevelt at a time when he was suffering under the annoyance and disappointment of the dissent of Justice Holmes, who had been appointed by him, from the majority opinion in the Northern Securities case, which he so enthusiastically approved. But if this story be not true of the President, there is a very widespread belief that he is capable of the sentiments if not of the utterance. It would be much more serious if he were capable of the act.

In seeking to secure the ratification of the Santo Domingo treaty and the passage of the Hepburn rate bill Mr. Roosevelt has gone as far, perhaps, as a President regardful of Executive limitations would wish to go in seeking to influence the judgment and determine the action of the legislative department. The control of Congress by the President would reduce one of the three independent departments of the Government to a state of subordination. The theory that Supreme Court Justices may properly be selected because of their previously ascertained agreement with Executive policies would in its application abolish the other as an independent branch of the Government. Under our republican form of Government it is, of course, obvious that the legislative and the Executive power will be exercised by men in substantial agreement with majority public opinion. It is not to be denied that the courts themselves in the long run are influenced, though less immediately, by the people's views and the people's wish. In the case of the lawmaking body, however, a popular caprice or delusion, a sudden gust of passion or resentment, may be quickly translated into statute law, to the ultimate regret of its instigators and its makers. The courts yield to public opinion only when it has been formed by mature deliberation through free discussion and the interplay of minds. Legislatures may from a single instance deduce a general principle and give it broad application; the courts usually seek to apply to the case before them general principles, evolved out of a multitude of like or comparable cases. The difference is manifest. The Supreme Court pays heed to public opinion in those extensions of principle, in those broadening interpretations which, as Mr. Cleveland said of the Monroe Doctrine, make the Constitution "applicable to every stage of our National existence." In this way sterile rigidity is avoided and the American system of government is made workable.

But if one American, even though he have his seat in the White House, should arrogate to himself the power to give authoritative expression to public opinion and should seek to mold the Supreme Court bench to his view of the public interest and the public welfare, we should at once be carried very far from the foundation principles—should, indeed, be swept quite adrift upon a sea of perils. A man of Mr. Roosevelt's almost magical power of charming the public fancy and winning the popular confidence and applause may easily secure for his personal policies and doctrines an acceptance so wide and general that a superficial observer might be deluded into the belief that they had become a part of the public opinion of the land. This is to-day the case with Mr. Roosevelt's ratemaking policy. It is his own invention, a thing unrelated to the public need. But it is vociferously sustained by a great part of the American people, though in the true sense, in the economic sense, there is no public demand whatever for the projected legislation. The historian will without reproach write upon his page that the public opinion the President has called to the support of his bill is neither instructed nor intelligent. Not without fear of reproach in many quarters, but with full confidence in the justice of the observation, we here write that opinion upon this page of The Times. That a public belief, delusion, or superstition of this nature should be permitted through the Executive discretion to subdue to itself the Supreme Court would, of course, be to the last degree preposterous and in a high degree alarming.

Other Presidents have no doubt taken occasion to "sound" in a general way their appointees to the Supreme bench, and Gen. Grant, in two well-remembered appointments, which a law of Congress authorized him to make, did this in a very special way. But the attempt to select Justices of that tribunal by examinations intended to ascertain how far they were in agreement with the Administration and willing to affirm its decrees would be nothing short of revolutionary.

OUR DETERIORATING CITIZENSHIP.

A topic suggested rather than exhausted before the National Civic Federation was the effect of immigration upon our citizenship. Of males of voting age more than one-quarter are foreign-born now, and arrivals of immigrants are at the rate of a million per annum. It would be serious enough if these arrivals were merely foreign, that is, un-American. Our British, German, and Scandinavian recruits are assimilated as easily as ever, and on the average under 10 per cent. of those nationalities remain aliens. But among the Slavs, Latins, and Asiatics a third remain unnaturalized. The political influence of the former class is highly beneficial. They were on the right side in the recent attacks upon the standard of value, and they are not conspicuous among the agitators who call themselves Socialists at the present moment.

It cannot be charged that Slavic and Iberic races are objectionable upon this account.

Their aloofness, their resolute abstention from taking part or lot in the solving of our problems, some of which they create, is the grievance of to-day, associated with the fact that the balance of the power lies with them in the future. Within two generations, at the recent rate, the potential foreign vote will outnumber the native. The clannishness, the unintelligence, the lack of interest in our institutions, is a grave objection to this class of citizenry. Much as the South needs labor, it objects to receiving this class. The South knows what it is to have a race problem, and a problem rivaling the negro question is growing up above Mason and Dixon's line among those who wonder at the hard work the Southrons make of accommodating themselves to a race more assimilable and sympathetic than our Northern colliers and operatives.

Nor is this altogether a question of the future. Aliens are lawful voters in many States to-day. Federal citizenship is not a requisite qualification in twelve States, and in eight only six months' residence is necessary. Natives under 21 years are not allowed to vote, but aliens may who cannot speak English, and who perhaps have not enjoyed or exercised suffrage at home, and therefore are not qualified citizens, even if they comprehend our institutions. Only in three States is there an educational test. If such citizens vote at all they are likely to vote together, and thus increase the effectiveness of their ballots, even without that intention. The German vote, for instance, had a decided effect upon our excise question at a critical time. It is not too early to take thought of the possibilities of this factor in our politics, considering that our naturalization laws remain as they were enacted a century ago, although the quality of our immigration has altered decidedly and not for the better. The largest proportions of aliens among males of voting age are Greeks, Italians, Hungarians, Austrians, Poles. The thought of naturalizing them as Tammany naturalizes the Irish is revolting, and it is known that the volume of fraudulent naturalization is great. It is unjust to blame these foreigners both for voting and for not voting, and it is difficult to choose which Americans would have them do. Yet a choice should be made and a policy adopted.

BRIDGES AND FERRIES.

Controller Metz strikes a new note, which may prove helpful in solving both the bridge and ferry questions. He says the ferries are needed for the trucks. "We have to get goods from one part of the city to another, and you cannot make a man drive five miles out of his way to get to a bridge." But the city merely provides streets, and does not provide motive power along them. In getting transportation the truckmen get something upon the ferries they do not get in the streets. Pedestrians are free upon the bridges, and teams might as well be, for they pay tolls not worth consideration, and, like pedestrians, they do not use the cars. But upon ferries trucks get what passengers get upon the bridges.

The point where the bridge and ferry questions come together is this. The teams want ferries maintained for their benefit, and the teams are a costly nuisance on the bridge, at least in the rush hours. If the teams would accept ferry accommodations all day in return for exclusion from the bridge in rush hours, more trolley tracks might be laid in the vacated wagon roadways. This would do more to solve the terminal problem than a ten-million-dollar terminal. The city would save that money, the passengers would get more cars, and the trucks would receive a valuable consideration for the surrender of privileges which they enjoy only at the expense of an incomparably larger volume of traffic of a higher class. The ferries would be worth something, despite a debit balance upon operation, if they solved the bridge-terminal problem. That the Staten Island ferries are netting a loss is not a conclusive argument. It is true that an annual loss of $250,000 is the interest upon a capital sum of $7,500,000, more or less. But there are offsets. Richmond County profits enough to make it worth while, and the loss will decrease if the ferries are well managed. The municipal ownership advocates should look after that. The price proper to pay for the ferries is another story.

"AMBULANCE-CHASING."

We do not quite know what Mr. Wemple, Member of Assembly of the State of New York, thinks he would be at in Bill No. 1137. On its face this measure is a re-enactment of the common law upon the subject of barratry and champerty and maintenance. Rather, it is a specific application of the common law to the new conditions created by the automobile that slayeth in darkness and the trolley car that murdereth at midday. These vehicles, or projectiles, have infused terror into all beings in their path of less agility than a kangaroo or a jackass rabbit. But also they have given rise to a new kind of fraud, on the part of persons who pretend to be thrown off cars when in fact they jump off, or to be knocked down by automobiles when in fact they fall down. Also they have given rise to a new phase of activity in the legal profession, the phase known as "ambulance-chasing." The ambulance-chaser is a shyster who presents himself as specializing barratry and champerty and maintenance, just as certain theologians specialize the Christian religion, with a view to current conditions.

But, after all, the ambulance-chaser has been prevised by the perfection of reason which, according to the absurd Coke, the common law is. He is merely a subdivision of the barrator, the champertor, or the maintainer. One sees no occasion for special statutory dealing with him, in the form of "An Act to Prevent the Malicious Promotion of Litigious Claims."

Mr. Wemple's bill may fairly be presumed to have been inspired by the traction companies. But there is already law enough to punish, if not to "prevent," the malicious promotion of litigious claims against those corporations. If they would operate the existing machinery they would make it dangerous to promote unjust claims against them. The trouble with them is that they do not in such cases come into court with clean hands. There is some evidence in the possession of Mr. Jerome, though he has as yet made no public use of it, that some of them make it a rule to fight all suits, whether well or ill founded, with equal pugnacity, that they have developed a system of jury fixing and also a system of subornation of perjury upon which they rely for their defense against claims just and unjust.

The merry war between the ambulance-chasers on one side and the jury-fixers and suborners of perjury on the other is without doubt a grievous public scandal. But there is no occasion for more law on either side. There is enough law now to send the barrators and champertors and maintainers to jail, and to send the jury-fixers and the suborners of perjury to keep them company there. What we need, and all we need, is the enforcement of the existing law. The question is not "up to" the Legislature. It is up to the courts and the public prosecutors.

THE S. P. C. A.

It was said of a certain Chief Magistrate of our country that "he treated the Presidency of the United States as if he had won it in a raffle." It was undoubtedly the "treatment" in that spirit of his office as President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, in succession to Henry Bergh, which has at last cost Mr. John P. Haines that office.

As a practical preventer of cruelty to animals Mr. Haines has not been shiningly successful. The casual wayfarer in New York is in the way almost daily of seeing outrageous cases of abuse of animals, while he must be a very casual wayfarer indeed who expects to get the abuse remedied by complaining to the Society which exists ostensibly to remedy it. On the other hand, it must be owned that Mr. Haines has been diligent in collecting the dog tax, and adding the amount of it to the assets of the Society. But the great principle for which he has battled, the principle that when a man gives money to a corporation it is none of his business what becomes of it, has been so battled for by Presidents of life insurance and other corporations that it has lost all charm, and even interest. As the abbot of a monastery subsisting exclusively on testamentary dispositions, Mr. Haines might have been very comfortable, say, in the England of the sixteenth century, before that eminent reformer and Armstrong of the period, Henry VIII., broke in and "wanted to know, you know." But in 1906, and where a large proportion of the people who supply the money for his operations are still alive and disagreeably inquisitive, it must be owned that he appears somewhat anachronic.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Protection for Shade Trees.

All through the suburbs around New York there will be mingled wonder and joy at the news that Magistrate Crane, in the Westchester Court on Thursday, imposed a fine of $50 upon an employé of the Bronx Gas and Electric Company for ruining a big maple tree that happened to spread its branches where the company wanted to string some wires. Punishment of that crime is as rare as its commission is frequent. To be accurate, it is almost unheard-of, while the ruthless mutilation of wayside trees—when they are not cut down altogether—is the commonest of occurrences all through the benighted region that surrounds the metropolis. In all the suburban towns there are many people who have all due regard for shade trees and feel a cruel pain at their destruction, but these people are not often of the kind that understand the ways of making an unsalaried office remunerative, and therefore they do not seek election to the local boards, Aldermanic and other, that control suburban destinies. Between the men who do secure positions on these boards and the companies that want to string wires along the streets there is usually a friendship curiously close, and the result is that the companies can in most cases secure what passes as a legal "consent" to do about what they please in the way of hacking off the branches of trees. What they invariably choose to do is to save every foot of wire they can, and in most places their employés have long since forgotten the possibility of sparing a tree if it stands in the way of their convenience. The Bronx, however, has a tree-planting association, which also pays attention to the protection of the trees already planted, and its lawyer, finding in Magistrate Crane a sympathetic and civilized soul, was able to give this particular company a lesson which it doubtless found most shocking and disagreeable. Of course, a single fifty-dollar fine doesn't amount to much, but its infliction will be noticed in many another town, and those whom the destruction of trees by these companies has long enraged will awake to the fact that they are by no means as helpless against corporation vandalism as they have supposed. A consent to string wires along a street does not involve the right to interfere in any way with the trees that shade it, and no local authorities can give any such right as against the owners of the contiguous property. The latter can always protect their trees, even from a suburban Mayor and Aldermen, if they will only take the trouble to do it.

Sea Gulls in the Reservoir.

There is some difficulty in understanding why the reservoir in Central Park is such a favorite resort for sea gulls, for certainly the conditions there are not those to which these birds in past generations have been attracted, and if they were controlled by blind and immutable instinct alone they would be expected to shun a little stretch of fresh water closely surrounded by numberless abodes of their deadly enemies. The fact remains, however, that the gulls are extremely fond of the reservoir, and that they constantly flock there in great clouds. Somehow or other they have discovered that they are in no danger there of sudden death, and the water contains many little fish upon which the birds are supposed to feed. Not a few people have watched not a few gulls in more than a few harbors without ever having seen them catch a fish, and have thereby acquired the conviction that they are only scavengers, but the books credit them with the higher ability of killing their own game, and kill it they must if they get anything more than comfort and safety in the reservoir. The presence of the birds troubles many who get their water supply thence, and consequently there have been energetic efforts to drive them away, but as yet these efforts have been wholly unsuccessful, for the gulls have somehow learned that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, even if it doesn't do much protecting, will at least protect them, and of blank cartridges they are wisely scornful. It might be doubted if the gulls do any real harm at the reservoir, and the chances are that there, as everywhere else, they serve a useful purpose. At any rate, they are a highly decorative feature of the Park life and regret that they cannot be driven away is mitigated by the interest they excite in all observers with an eye for the beautiful. Certainly they ought not to be killed unless it is proved that they are measurably dangerous to the public health. Few, indeed, are the places where their lives are safe along the coast, despite the laws that have been passed to make gull shooting a misdemeanor. In the out-of-the-way coves where they would naturally spend their leisure time their perils are still innumerable, and if they are willing to find a refuge in the Park the inclination ought to be encouraged if it can be done without too much expense.

Women Need Not Fear This Enemy.

One doesn't have to be an advocate of or believer in what is called "woman suffrage" to see that such arguments as were used by the Rev. Madison C. Peters in his speech to the West End Women's Republican Association will never put an end to the agitation, or to understand why they were received with such obvious impatience by his hearers. Experience in Colorado and elsewhere supplies no basis whatever for Mr. Peters's assertion that few good women would avail themselves of the privilege of the ballot if they had it and that all bad women would. Then, again, it is simply ludicrous to say that if women vote they must also be policemen. No end of men vote who would make worse policemen than many women would, and, as a matter of fact, the act of voting and the ability to guard the public peace are so remotely connected that to couple them is entirely unnecessary. That the extension of the suffrage would not be a panacea for all our public evils is quite true, but Mr. Peters would have some trouble to find in political history evidence that any of the previous extensions of the suffrage have failed to make things at least a little better. In the end this question will be settled by the women themselves. When they all, or nearly all, want the ballot, they will certainly get it, and those who want it now should devote all their persuasive energies to the conversion of their less "advanced" sisters. Women are the only real foes of woman suffrage, most men being convinced that it makes little difference one way or the other whether they vote or not.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Assistant Secretary of State Bacon, in cleaning up his desk yesterday, found several ink-spattered, soiled, and rumpled pieces of paper there. With one index finger he touched a bell button for his messenger. With the other and the thumb that toils with it he lifted one of the dirty bits of paper.

"Eddy," he said, holding up the blotted paper as the messenger advanced to his desk, "what is this?"

"That, Sir," replied the faithful messenger, "is your pay check."

"And what is this?" said Mr. Bacon, lifting up another dirty piece of paper gingerly.

"That also," said Eddy, "is a pay check."

"And all these are also?"

"Yes, Sir, they are all pay checks."

"Well, take the filthy things away and cash them, then," said the Assistant Secretary in a tone of disgust as he took up a confidential dispatch from Algeciras that had just been brought in fresh from the deciphering clerk.

Two of them were pretty girls, visiting Washington. They listened with hushed attention to the words of wisdom that fell from the lips of the third. He was their Washington cousin and knew all about the Capitol and was graciously explaining its sights to them.

"And this," said he, stopping before a door in the Capitol, "is the Supreme Court of the United States. That, you know, is the highest judicial court in the land. There are other courts in different parts of the country that are just as high, but this is the highest judicial court."

Then they entered and heard an argument delivered before nine Judicial Judges.

Down in South Carolina they are unusually solicitous for the personal comfort of Uncle Joe Cannon. Several articles of personal use and adornment have recently come to the Speaker from that State, and yet South Carolina is not satisfied.

That the outfit of clothing which began with a homespun suit and has been steadily growing, may be complete, Editor Hemphill of The Charleston News and Courier, has decided to send Uncle Joe a pair of real old-fashioned fancy calfskin boots. And to make the present the more thoroughly representative he has asked for contributions of one cent. He has limited the subscription list to Republicans, and his notification to Uncle Joe of what he is doing says that by that means the boots will be a gift from the entire Republican Party of the State.

In fact, Mr. Hemphill is a little doubtful of there being enough Republicans in South Carolina at one cent apiece to make up 1,700 necessary to raise the price of the boots, but he says that if that lamentable suspicion of his proves to be well founded he will cheerfully make up the deficit.

CAN'T SUPPRESS MONTE CARLO.

"But," Says Mr. Crane, "You Can Stay at Home and Play Bridge."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

How is "W. B. C." going to set about suppressing Monte Carlo? Does he not know that societies have been organized for that purpose and have signally failed! Has "W. B. C." been reading "The Gambler" that his moral sensibilities are in such mad revolt against the Casino, or has he been a "bad loser" in that "stifling, scented atmosphere, listening to the incessant, significant click of gold and silver, watching the artificial light glaring down upon the hideously artificial faces pressed in densely packed circles round the long green tables?"

My advice to our young men is to stay at home and play "bridge" with their mothers, sisters, wives, sweethearts, fathers, brothers, cousins, uncles, and aunts. Let us keep the money in the family, for, in playing against a public bank, the gambler should know in these times that the science of mathematics has been already employed on the side of the managers, and is arrayed against him as a fixed law, working on the side of the croupier, whether he wills it or not. The chance of the next "odd" or "even" at roulette is precisely one in two, or one-half the chance of a run of any given eight results in a specified order—such as odd, odd, even, odd, odd, even, even, even. It will be only one in 2x2x2x2x2x2x2x2, or one in 256. If you could but steadily stake your money so as to stake it against the arrival of this highly improbable compound event you would be sure to win.

Beautiful "system," isn't it? Talk about the "systems" that Lawson talks about—why, the bank at Monte Carlo gives you no chance at all of staking your money against any complex event. Cool, sagacious Cantabs have "bucked" in vain at Monte Carlo.

Rural Free.

From The Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Macomb (Ill.) Daily Journal is developing a new field in the collection of news. It is printing reports from the rural postal routes in the neighborhood.

For example, Route 1:

James Manning, who has been ill, is able to be up and around the house.

Chester Stocking, having finished sawing hardwood lumber in T. C. Yard's timber, is this week moving his sawmill into woods east of the Monmouth Road, some four miles distant from its former location.

Route 2:

Winter work is all done; farmers are simply lying on their oars waiting for weather and ground to get into condition for Spring work.

Route 3:

Inspector Griswold went over Route 3 yesterday in his inspection in work of establishing county service. Mr. and Mrs. F. Harlan entertained both Inspector and carrier in most sumptuous manner at dinner.

NEWS THAT'S FIT TO PRINT.

Thomas Carlyle's View of the Duties of an Editor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your maxim, "All the News That's Fit to Print," is working only on the condition that it acts inclusively, rather than exclusively. The evolution of literature is marked by a condensing and shortening of sentences and even books—by an "integration," Spencer would say. But at the same time, (concomitantly,) there are a wider range and generality of subjects and phases discussed. We exclude in order to include to a greater extent than ever.

"All the news that fits the truth" is also a good maxim. This following sentiment is taken from Carlyle's essay on "Cagliostro." It is his defense for the publication of all the news that fits the truth:

"Does the reader ask what good was in it? Why occupy his time and hours with the biography of such a miscreant? We answer, 'It was stated on the very threshold of this matter, in the loftiest terms by Herr Sauerberg, that the lives of all eminent persons, miscreant or creant, ought to be written.' Thus has not the very Devil his Life, deservedly written, not by Daniel Defoe only, but by quite other hands than Daniel's? For the rest the thing represented in these pages is no sham, but a reality; thou hast it, oh, reader, as we have it. Nature was pleased to produce even such a man, even so, not otherwise; and the editor of this magazine is here mainly to record, in an adequate manner, what she of her thousandfold mysterious richness and greatness produces." G. L. REES.

Shortcomings of Elevated and Subway

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I believe the One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street Station of the Manhattan Railroad (elevated) is the busiest and the most congested of any station attached to that road. It is almost impossible to walk up or down the stairs on account of their width, as only two persons can walk abreast. Why can't the officials of the road correct this nuisance without having their attention first called to the matter?

Also, why don't the Subway officials have guards collect all transfers instead of having to get in line and have them exchanged for Subway tickets? This would save much valuable time to the passengers.

I think there should be elevators or lifts to carry passengers to the elevated station, to save the people the climb of four flights of stairs. ED. DAVIS.

Jury System Shortcomings.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If our present jury system is the best that can be devised, could there not be an arrangement by which those upon whom large business affairs depend might be released by the payment of, say, double the amount of a juror's pay for the time? This would result without loss to the city and would frequently relieve individuals of actual hardship.

There certainly are enough younger men not heads of enterprises, or older men beyond the drive of business affairs, or young lawyers who would profit both by the experience and the fee, without having to impress the active heads of mercantile houses upon whom the whole working machinery often devolves and whose forced absence of from two to four weeks every year or two causes a loss which requires much extra work to wipe out.

Warrington and Pendennis.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why, oh, why should people who might quote accurately from the text of the classics misquote them from memory? Here is one of your esteemed contemporaries enlightening the world with an original version of Thackeray. Considering Uncle Joseph Cannon's homespun clothes, it observes that: "In the beautiful words of Mr. George Warrington, they were given by the hands of beauty to adorn the breast of valor." In the first place, the beautiful words are "worked" and not "given" by the hand, &c. In the second place, they are not the beautiful words of Mr. George Warrington at all, but of Mr. Arthur Pendennis. W. M. T.

That Public Library Tablet.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I heartily concur in the suggestion of Mr. Haydel in his letter protesting against the proposed tablets in the Public Library. The wording suggested by Mr. Haydel is dignified and appropriate, and in accordance with the best traditions of monumental and public inscriptions. Full recognition is thus given to the Astor, Lenox, and Tilden foundations, but the expression of the essential nature of the institution as the New York Public Library is properly preserved. We have enough crudely worded public inscriptions without adding another. McCREADY SYKES.

Pool Table and Hose Wagon.

From The Providence Journal.

"In my town," said the suburban resident, "we had a fire the other morning. It was a pretty likely fire, and it came near being rather disastrous. The members of the village fire company, like those in a good many other villages, I imagine, are some given to social recreation, and they use the fire station more or less like a clubhouse, which is all right and helps to keep up their interest. No one realized, though, how much of a clubhouse the place had got to be until the other morning. When the first three or four members of the department got to the fire station after hearing the alarm they found they were up against it, and it looked for a time as if a good-sized chunk of the village might burn up before they began to spatter any water on the blaze. The hose wagon was over in a corner behind the pool table, and they could not get it out. They jumped around and hollered and swore, but they couldn't do a thing, and they had to wait ten or fifteen minutes until several more members arrived so that they could move the pool table out into the street and make a passage for the hose cart."

"That's no worse than I saw once," remarked another suburbanite. "I used to belong to the hook and ladder company in our village, and when I jumped with the others to answer an alarm one day we found that there weren't any ladders on the truck. The foreman had borrowed them all to use in painting his house."

The Last Red Coats.

From The Montreal Gazette.

The last troops of the British Army have left Halifax for home. The event is a step in the evolution of the relations of motherland and colony that will create some feelings of regret. The presence of British regiments long ago ceased to be necessary in Canada, it is true, either from an imperial or a colonial point of view. The departed corps will doubtless fill a more important place in the scheme of general defense in their new stations, and Canada should be able to care for her own strategic positions. Yet the departure, breaking a chain of service that has lasted nearly a century and a half, will to many seem like breaking a link in another chain. It will be long before those who hastened it will get much credit for their work.

PROPHETIC SHAKESPEARE!

Foretold the Motor Car, and an Operation for Appendicitis at St. Luke's.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May not the line as to man's "glassy prescience" by one of your correspondents the other day simply mean that man is most ignorant of what he thinks he knows best—his reflection in the glass! We find in James, i., 23, "a man beholdeth his natural face in a glass and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was"—"most ignorant of what he's most assured."

Shakespeare knew many things beyond his age, and one might describe numerous modern inventions in his words, provided we went to work like Barrie's Scotch parsons, "who can howk anything out o' the original Hebrew."

Did not Shakespeare behold motor cars careering in the future when he said (Hamlet, vi., 2) "the bubbles art out," and in Macbeth, I., 3, "The earth hath bubbles, as the water has"? And most wonderful of all, we find him talking of an impending operation at St. Luke's, and ordering a priest to be present, in case the operation should not be successful! For in Act IV., Scene 4, of "The Taming of the Shrew" we read these remarkable words: "My master hath appointed me to go to St. Luke's, to bid the priest to be ready to come against you come with your appendix."

I do not despair of finding X rays and telephones more than hinted at in the works of the greatest of poets, always provided that the investigator has a sense of humor. BARD.

Waste of Water by the City Itself.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Commissioner of Electricity, Gas, and Water complains of the waste of water and tells us of the intention of his department to put in more water meters.

This morning between 11 and 12 o'clock I observed two street cleaners flushing the asphalt pavement between Fifty-ninth and Sixtieth Streets, on Central Park West. They were using the regulation fire hose. For over twenty-four hours the city had been thoroughly washed by an usually heavy rainstorm.

Talk about waste! Why these two sweepers wasted more water in one hour than would 10,000 families in a month. It is purely a case of laziness on the part of the employes and of imbecility (or worse) on the part of the Street Cleaning Department. F. E. WOOD.

Sentence by Jury.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would like to submit the following question for the consideration of the readers of The New York Times: Should a jury be allowed to sentence criminals?

In the South and West the practice is prevalent. In that way a jury can determine exactly how guilty a person is.

As it is now the jury finds a man guilty of a crime. Assume that the penalty is from one day to twenty years. The jury could determine how much of the maximum sentence should be imposed. Is not twelve men's judgment better than the judgment of one?

The Proposed "Columbus Day."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An attempt is being made to have Oct. 12, the anniversary of the discovery of America, made a public holiday.

I wish to protest most strongly against this scheme. We have too many holidays, and a holiday in October would be almost a disaster in New York City. It would cause interference with public business.

The courts are now behind years with their calendars, and as they open, after the long vacation, in October, every day is of great value.

THE RECORD.

[The Committee on Agriculture has stricken out the appropriation for the distribution of free garden seeds.]

I've been a loyal citizen for five-and-forty years,
I've asked no favors and I've kept my taxes from arrears,
Right patiently I've tilled the soil, and when the price was low
I've taken fifty cents for wheat because 'twas ordered so;
I've voted as my conscience urged and tried to be content
With what few blessings I have had, by Heaven or Nature sent,
And is it strange my aching heart with dismal sorrow bleeds
To know they've stopped my one reward—my packages of seeds?

For years and years they've come to me in little paper sacks
To reconcile me to my lot of till and toil and tax;
What matter if they sprouted not or if the corn marked sweet
Grew up to mangel-wurtzel or became a sugar beet?
Those were but trifles light as air—the seeds gave me to know
The Government at Washington survived through weal and woe,
And 'twas unpatriotic and the most unwise of deeds
To sever all the ties that bind—my packages of seeds.

The radishes were often punk, the onions shorn of scent,
The cabbages were prone to worms and some fell discontent
Would stunt the spinach as it grew, but every Spring I'd sow
My plot at Government expense and watch for them to grow.
They made me feel an integer of Governmental life
And though they brought me days of toil and twilight hours of strife
With cut-worms, cabbage bugs, and new varieties of weeds,
They were a source of pure delight—my packages of seeds.

The Rate bill is in statu quo—the Tariff bill is dead,
The Statehood bill is far from passed and, far as I have read,
The toil of Congress up to date may be set down as naught;
So when they make the record of the things this session wrought
To lay before the common folk who stand behind the gun
The only thing of all they had to do that has been done
To fill the Nation's pressing wants and meet the people's needs
Has been to cut off my supplies of Governmental seeds. J. W. FOLEY.

CHINESE PRINCE HERE; WILL SEE ROOSEVELT

Imperial Party to Dine at University Club To-night.

GEN. GRANT MAKES A CALL

Busy Day at the Fifth Avenue and Dinner in Chinatown for Hi, Lo, Jack, and The Game.

His Highness Tsai Tse, Imperial Prince of the Chinese Empire, Official Watchman of the Graves of all the Emperors, got into New York yesterday morning and went directly to the Fifth Avenue Hotel. He was accompanied by the other Imperial High Chinese Commissioners, who are on their way to England and France to study educational and commercial conditions of the Occident.

Each of the Commissioners had with him ten secretaries and seven servants. The servants have become round-shouldered kow-towing to the Prince since he started on his trip. Dr. Kwan, the cultivated special physician to the Emperor, came with the Prince's party. They were met at the Grand Central Station by Section No. 1 of the Chinese Imperial Commission, which arrived here on Wednesday.

The Prince had a pocketful of photographs of himself taken in Peking. They were intended for distribution among the Governors of the various States through which he passed, but, as he only met the Governor of Minnesota and the Governor of North Dakota, he consented to loan the remaining pictures to the Sunday newspapers. Each photograph bore the Prince's autograph.

Shortly after the arrival of the party the Prince's special body guards, referred to by one of the hotel porters as Hi and Lo, became very busy. Hi was on duty all day. He waved a huge fan over the Prince's head, while Lo was kept busy chasing away photographers who were trying to get snap-shots of the Prince.

The costume worn by Hi was a dreamy gown of gray, fastened tightly about the neck and extending to the floor. A maroon colored nightshirt without any sides to it topped off the gray gown. Lo was similarly clad, with the exception that his gown was of navy blue and his nightshirt of pink. Each wore a turban adorned with what appeared to be a purple Easter egg.

The dress worn by the Prince was a gorgeous affair. Embroidered across the breast was a black crane, to indicate that the wearer was of royal blood.

After the party reached the hotel, Hi and Lo hunted up the rooms assigned to the Prince on the second floor. They ordered the other members of the party to climb up a flight, and some had to climb two flights to get new quarters after the Prince arrived.

One tall, thin Chinaman, attired in a thin, tight gown of red, had a queue that was longer than those of the other members of the imperial party. The hotel porter referred to him as Jack, and he answered to the name readily. He was secretary of the trunks, he explained.

One fat member of the party found the way to the café soon after he arrived, and made frequent trips downstairs thereafter. He spent much time telling the waiters in the hotel that "life was life only while one lived." They called him Ping Pong, the game Chinaman. But whenever Hi, Lo, Jack, and The Game met in the upper corridors of the hotel the Prince's first private secretary, Tso, would shout:

"Chee cho-e lün!"

That meant, "Remove yourselves from this confusion."

"Twenty-three," was the way the hotel porter put it.

Hi, Lo, Jack, and The Game were put out with "Twenty-three" every time the Prince fell into a doze. Then they tiptoed away, Hi sneaking back to the Prince's room with his big fan, and Lo going the rounds of the pickets to ascertain whether there were any camera fiends in sight. Once when a sketch artist appeared at the head of the stairs the hotel porter shouted:

"Twenty-three for yours!"

The Prince overheard it and sent for his twenty-third assistant secretary, whose name sounded something like Chew Hay. He asked Chew to translate Twenty-three into Chinese.

"Ye sup sarm!" said Chew, and then the Prince took another nap until Gen. Fred D. Grant arrived with his staff from Governors Island. Gen. Grant was presented to the Prince first, and His Royal Highness shook hands with the General. The General and the Prince chatted through an interpreter for an hour.

Prince Tsai was invited to visit Governors Island and be Gen. Grant's guest to-day. The Prince said he would go this morning at 11 o'clock.

Sir Chentung Lian Cheng, the Chinese Minister, who had come on from Washington to meet the Prince, was present while Gen. Grant was there. He said that he intended to accompany the Prince to Washington Sunday morning, and that he would introduce the Prince to President Roosevelt, probably on Monday. He would also have the Prince as his guest of honor at a dinner in Washington.

When the Minister and Gen. Grant and his staff had gone a committee from the University Club called to ask the Prince to dine to-night at the University Club. The committee explained that the Prince would be the guest of certain American merchants who are engaged in commercial enterprises in China. The Prince accepted the invitation.

Then came a committee of New York Chinese merchants, who asked the Prince to be their guest at a Chinese dinner early in the evening. The Prince said he would go to the Chinese dinner if he could go incog. He was opposed to any demonstration in his honor, he said. At 6 o'clock last night he left the hotel with a group of his secretaries to attend the Chinese dinner.

On Tuesday the Prince will get back from Washington. He and the members of his party, including Hi, Lo, Jack, and The Game, will sail for Europe on Wednesday next on the steamship Baltic.

Chinatown was all excitement when Prince Tsai Tse and his party went down to dine there. The Prince, accompanied by Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, Commissioners Shang Chi Hing and Li Sheng To, all under the escort of Detective Sergeants Funston and Fogarty, entered two carriages at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. The two detectives trailed them in a hansom.

A good part of Chinatown knew of the Prince's visit in advance, and he got a big reception as the carriages rolled down Mott Street. The biggest crowd was in the neighborhood of the Port Arthur Chinest Restaurant at No. 79. The Imperial Guard of the Chinese Reform Association, fifteen strong, under the command of Col. Lee Ling, were lined up on the sidewalk at present arms when the Prince and his party alighted.

There was a policeman on every corner and in nearly every second doorway, lest the On Leongs and the Hip Sings should make trouble. There was much kow-towing as the Prince stepped from his carriage. He acknowledged it slightly and mounted to the restaurant. Here the host, Chu Gow, had a private dining room of teak wood and pearl inlaid furniture decorated with Oriental splendor for the reception of the Prince.

The Prince got a real Oriental dinner. The cooks began work shortly after the distinguished visitor stepped from the train at the Grand Central Station, and seven hours were spent in preparing the dinner. There were eighteen courses, including such tidbits as gai yong woug ye tow, otherwise the brain of yellow fish with minced chicken; sam see chee, being sharks' fins with sliced chicken, ham, bamboo shoots, and a few other things; si wo ap, which is boneless duck smothered in condiments and garnished with Chinese parsley; foony wong yin, a Peking concoction, and so on from sang sui li chee gon, the rarest of nuts, to the imperial tea, and any number of cigarettes between.

The Prince reached Chinatown at 7 o'clock, and he and his party spent almost four hours at dinner. At the restaurant he met Consul General K. F. Shah and the Vice Consul, L. Wing. He got back to his hotel at 11 o'clock.

WORKS OF ART STUDENTS.

Exhibition of Woman's Art from Cooper Union Students.

The galleries of the National Arts Club, 37 West Thirty-fourth Street, contain a selection from work produced by students in the Art School of the Cooper Union. The range of work is large. Screens and designs for screens, paper lamp shades, and hammered brass, bookbindings and illuminated vellum, embroideries for dinner table, drawn work, and toilet sets—these and other objects stand about the floor or are gathered into showcases. The walls offer paintings and pastels, water colors, and etchings, charcoals, and pen-and-inks. Sketches in plaster represent sculpture. The branch of miniature is well filled, showing that these students are already making their way in the minor lines of portraiture.

Good figure work in oil and pastel and landscapes in water color are signed by Clara L. Davidson. Dutch peasant woman, by E. M. Campbell; landscapes, by Sophie Schneider; townscapes, by M. Wilson and I. M. Geer are well worth examination. Clever little colored figures, townscapes, interiors, with groups, are by A. Herzig. An amusing and well-drawn series of heads of dogs, bull terriers and pugs, collies and others, are by L. J. Kipper.

One of the most brilliant handlers of pastel is Florence E. Nosworthy, as, for example, "Great-grandmother's Bonnet," "Study of Girl," "Baby's Head," "Sketch of Child"; also in black-and-white, "Hunting Girl," "Tennis Girl," &c. Extremely clever are the illustrations by May Wilson Preston, such as "Jimmie, the Burglar" and "The Fat Woman Mopped Her Eye." Good figure pieces by G. C. Sweeny and Grace Shrive, Dutch interiors and single figures by H. C. Geiger, landscapes in oil by A. Hufnagel, illustrations by M. Tidball, Alice Crosby, D. D. Plympton, Gladys Peck, and M. Law; flower compositions by A. A. Hills, and children's heads in pastel by S. D. Runyon, testify to the excellent work the students at the Cooper Union are turning out.

Miniatures are represented by Mesdames Hirzig, Sidebotham, Whitlock, Ham, Sweeny, Cooper, McKiniry, Peper, Melvin, and Dale; fan designs and lamp shade decorations by Jeanne Moncault, Grace Dagget, and L. A. Baldwin; book covers by C. H. Olmstead, C. Brinckerhoff, G. Stein, A. Booth, and B. Stuart; posters by A. B. Westermann, Justine Bach, and E. Traphagen, and low reliefs in plaster by A. Borgman and May Lewis.

Among the useful articles decoratively treated may be mentioned the cushions and table covers by S. H. Eltzner, the leather work by M. Sidebotham, candle shades and scarfs by M. Serrell and May Lambert; hammered brass by A. M. Kelly, and vellum portfolios, with colored designs, by L. Baldwin.

The exhibition will continue for several weeks. Like all school work the standards are up and down a bit, but there is much that is worth a visit.

AN INNESS SELLS FOR $75.

Low Price for "Mount Washington" at American Artists' Sale.

Sixty-five paintings, the work of American artists, brought $5,722 at the Fifth Avenue Art Galleries last evening, the highest price being $560. This was given by C. E. Snedecor for "The First Snow," by George Inness, Jr.

A landscape by H. W. Ranger brought the second highest price, $400, given by J. Alexander. F. H. Wiggins bid in the "Approaching Storm," also by George Inness, Jr., said to have been sold previously for $1,000, for $275. F. L. Montague paid $270 for a Holland scene by George H. Bogert, and another Bogert, "Autumnal Sunset," brought $275. H. Alloway paid $130 for a barnyard scene by A. F. Tait, twin calves.

The one picture by the Senior Inness in the evening's sale, "Mount Washington, North Conway," brought only $75. The sale will be concluded to-night.

HARMONY SEPTET

Meets to Sing in the Shepard Club in Brooklyn, but Finds Folks Deaf.

Officers of the Brooklyn Democratic Club, which is the old Edward M. Shepard organization, met again last night to try to harmonize the party in Kings. President Moynahan managed to get six members together to discuss plans for putting "ginger" into the organization. Last Saturday his call was answered by eight.

There was no debate. Another attempt will be made next week. President Daniel Moynahan asks all good Democrats to help out.

"It looks as though the party would finish third in the race this Fall," he said last night after the meeting. "Our leaders are taking absolutely no interest in this."

GUARDING CHINESE COURT.

Yuan Shi-Kai's Army Commands All the Approaches to Peking.

LONDON, Saturday, March 10.—According to the correspondent at Peking of The Tribune the Chinese crisis is entering upon a constitutional phase.

Yuan Shi-Kai, the correspondent says, commands all the approaches to Peking, and yesterday dispatched the Seventh Army Division by train to Shun-te-Foo. His son commands the army outside the wall which is opposing the bandits.

The dispatch adds that the Emperor and Empress Dowager will proceed to the Summer palace six weeks hence. Gen. Tich-Liang, President of the Board of War, will protect the palace with 5,000 men. The feeling in Court circles now is much less nervous.

BEQUESTS FOR CHURCH WORK.

Will of N. B. Harris Also Gives Three Nieces $10,000 Each.

The will of Nathaniel B. Harris, who died last month, was filed yesterday. Joseph H. Towne is executor. Three nieces—Annie B. Gilman, Josephine Pinkham, and Mary B. Frost—get $10,000 each.

The balance of the estate, which is declared in the will to exceed $50,000 in personal property, is left to the American Congregational Union, the American Missionary Association, and the American Home Missionary Society of this city; the Ministerial Aid Society of Boston, and Yankton College of Yankton, Dakota, for the endowment of a chair of mental and moral philosophy.

BEQUESTS FOR CHARITY.

Mrs. Talman Left Sums for Various Philanthropic Institutions.

Many philanthropic institutions are remembered in the will of Mrs. Frederica Talman, widow of William G. Talman, which was executed on Nov. 19, 1905, and filed in the Surrogate's office yesterday.

Mrs. Talman leaves $5,000 to the Brooklyn Society for the Relief of Respectable Aged and Indigent Females; $5,000 to the Faith Home for Incurables, $1,000 to Etta Campbell, who is in charge of the Faith Home; $3,000 to the Brooklyn Home for Consumptives, $3,000 to the Women's Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church in America, $3,000 to the Board of Domestic Missions of the same church, $2,000 to the Brooklyn City Mission and Tract Society, and $1,000 to the Brooklyn Industrial Home for Destitute Children.

The residue of the estate is left to Mrs. Talman's relatives.

BARNARD'S FRESHMEN GIVE A "DIPPYDROME"

Was Voted a Great Success, Though No Man Saw It.

"SHIVERS" MADE A BIG HIT

Claire Yellalot and Her Lions a Feature, and as for the "Hoop the Hoops" Dance—Well!

They had a "Dippydrome" at Barnard College yesterday. It was so good that the promoters say they could put the real thing Hippodrome out of business if they wanted to. They don't want to, though, so they refused to break the outrageous rule that barred men out.

The performers were the members of the freshman class, and the audience was restricted to the undergraduates and their feminine friends. Not a man was allowed anywhere about the college theatre while the show was on. Joe Dermody, the professional property man, pretends that he got a peek or two, but he wishes he had been allowed to see more. Joe is a great student of the drama.

Each year the freshmen give an entertainment of some sort, and 1909 hit on the idea of having a circus of the Thompson & Dundy pattern. Costumes and "props" were lent by the Hippodrome management, and an imitation of "A Society Circus" was the result.

Yesterday afternoon every girl who could prove that she was a Barnard student was on hand for the opening performance. King "Teddy" was there, too, and saw everything from his place in the mimic audience on the stage. Miss Jennie Wylie managed to look very much like the real article, "serried teeth," sombrero, "big stick," and all.

"Vaseline the Droll" was the hit of the show, and Miss Von Bauer's friends think she could make the real Marceline hustle to hold his job if she tried for professional honors. She had the English clown's walk, whistle, and acrobatic tricks. In fact, she did everything he does except walk on her head.

Vaseline was equaled in the funmaking by Shivers, (Miss Florence Wyeth,) and between them the audience had plenty of excuses for its overwhelming giggles. They roared at the "hoop the hoops" dance, which was contributed by four young women. Months of conscientious effort were devoted to the selection of the four, and the strain upon the Beauty Committee was great. The choice finally fell upon the Misses Louise Tiffany, Priscilla Stanton, Jessie Cochrane, and Mildred Woodhull. A description of the dance was not obtainable, but it ended with the girls popping their heads through paper hoops and winking at the front row.

Then there were some hard raps at the Faculty. Miss Gertrude Hearst, whose specialty is Latin, seemed to be the favorite target. Miss Myra McLean took her off. She was followed by the "Frenzied Fitful Freaks." They consisted of the girl who knew what she had come to college for; the girl who had studied so hard her hair wouldn't curl, and the unfortunate freshman who had committed the crime of not folding her Latin composition paper according to Miss Hearst's orders. This is one of the most serious offenses known to the Barnard penal code.

The closing act was an imitation of Claire Heliot and her lions. Miss Adelaide Richardson was "Claire Yellalot," and, like her prototype, she conversed with the animals in French and German. Miss Yellalot finished her turn differently from the original. Instead of Romeo, the 300-pound lion, being carried off by her, Romeo obligingly stood still while she climbed on a table and got on his back. She then went off amid great applause, in which the five other lions joined.

This was not all the show, by any means. There was a bogie man, "Billy Rooster, the Cock of the Walk," played by Miss Lilian Carson, the author of the verses and jokes; the Barnard Bear, impersonated by Miss Wylie's nine-year-old brother, and a troop of elephants, gracefully impersonated by unidentified actresses.

Everything wound up with a whoop. All the upper classes cheered the freshmen and the freshmen cheered all the upper classes. The juniors liked the show so much that they burst into song about it, and expressed their gratitude to 1909 in hexameters. Then the Barnard flag was waved by the little Barnard bear, and the Barnard yell put on the finishing touches.

The second and last performance will be given to-morrow. The profits from the sale of tickets will be devoted to a dormitory fund.

She does not propose to return to this country until September, when she probably will open Beechwood, her Newport villa, for a month or two.

Stage Students' Matinee.

The Stanhope-Wheatcroft Dramatic School gave a students' matinée at the Princess Theatre yesterday afternoon. The plays were a three-act comedy by William Wallace Whitelock, entitled "The Man Who Told the Truth," and a one-act piece, "The Aspirant," by Evangeline M. Lent. In the former play Ivor M. Lowrie, Emily Randolph, and Florence Fisher had the principal rôles, and in the latter Douglas Boyd, Dwight Danforth, and Dorothy Turner. The audience filled the little playhouse.

A CARROLL BECKWITH SHOW.

Oils and Pastels, Paintings and Sketches.

The small exhibition which runs until March 16 at the Powell Galleries, Sixth Avenue, near Fifty-sixth Street, is in some respects an ideal one, since it gives selections from the general work of a painter—pencil drawings, charcoal with colored crayons, pastels, and oils, sketches carried only so far, and paintings thoroughly matured. It shows the work and play of Mr. Carroll Beckwith in a very interesting fashion, since we see how he does things.

Here is a half-length of a lady in low neck and bare arms, pink-striped waist and curly locks, who turns her eyes in a provocative smile; she is Pimpante and flirtatious; the careful brushwork hardly fits the title, which is baldly "Study," perhaps because it is not a portrait, but a picture taken from a model. Here is an early likeness of Miss Florence Nesbit with ruddy lips and languid eyelids, also entitled "Study"—an excellent bit of painting. "Before the Mirror" is a small nude very carefully wrought, a woman seated with back turned, reflected in a glass. Among the small figures of this kind the best is called "Decorative Figure." It more than fills the narrow limits of the canvas. The nude seated woman touches her fingers to her lips in a gesture of hesitation—perhaps the best bit of composition in the exhibit.

Other oils are "Lady Reading," face in shadow, book on knees. The pale pink gown goes well with the dark red table cloth; scattered light sifts over the blonde tresses. "Sewing in the Shade" and "On the River" have something harsh in color and drawing; they might be called "studies" rather than the two large pictures just noted. "Studies" also, and very attractive unfinished studies, are the canvases which contain, one, a very excellent head of an elderly man and an unattached hand of a woman; the other, a handsome young priest in black baretta and an arch, perhaps oversweet, young girl.

Not less interesting, indeed it may be more so, are the heads in pencil, such as the woman in Greek dress seated in a Florentine chair; "Dramatic Motive," a man in Greek underdress with eyes upraised, and "Madonna." A small half-length in pastel, called "Gabrille," is the most delicate in coloring and charming in draughtsmanship. "Lady Seated Smiling" is beautiful in drawing, but suffers from the smile "that won't come off." "Profile Perdu" and "Reflected Light," charcoal and colored crayons; "Poppaea," a profile with eyes down and pink flowers in the hair, and "Robe Pailletée," a figure with black, red, and brown notes of color, are examples of the artist's skill.

Among the finished oils one of the most notable is "Spring," a draped woman with book on knees who sits in a tree surrounded by the pink blossoms of the apple; among the unfinished pastels a nude seated figure reading. The solitary landscape seems to have been struck out in a happy mood, so nice is it in perspective and so clever the management of clouds and towers reflected in a lake. This is a small view of the lake with the Château de Chenonceaux in the distance.

PINERO PLAY POSTPONED.

Frohman Arranges to Keep Lyceum for "The Lion and the Mouse."

Daniel Frohman returned yesterday from a nine days' stay in London, where he went to consult Arthur Wing Pinero, the playwright, with regard to the new play at the St. James's Theatre, entitled "His House in Order." Mr. Frohman had agreed to put it on at the Lyceum this Spring. He arranged with the author to postpone the engagement until next season, owing to the success of "The Lion and the Mouse."

John Drew and Margaret Illington will be seen in the piece at the Empire in September. Mr. Frohman has contracted for a new comedy, to be written for Lawrance D'Orsay by Cecil Raleigh.

Another Fight Against Speculators.

The Grand Opera House management followed the example of the Hippodrome last evening, and waged war against the speculators with megaphones, announcing that tickets bought on the sidewalk would not be received inside. The demand for seats has been large this week, George Ade's successful comedy, "The College Widow," being the attraction. Speculators were few outside the Hippodrome.

Forrest Centenary Celebration.

PHILADELPHIA, March 9.—The one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Edwin Forrest was observed here to-day. Forrest's grave was decorated and commemorative exercises were held at the Edwin Forrest Home. Addresses were delivered by Col. A. K. McClure and S. G. Thompson, President of the Home.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Charles Frohman has just arranged by cable with Clyde Fitch for the production in New York next December of "The House of Mirth," the play made from Mrs. Wharton's successful novel by Mr. Fitch and Mrs. Wharton.

A benefit at which most of the stars now appearing in New York will appear will be given at the Broadway Theatre on Thursday, April 19, for the New York Home for Destitute Crippled Children. Mrs. A. L. Erlanger, President of the home, has enlisted the aid of several of the leading theatrical managers.

Following Mrs. Fiske's engagement at the Academy of Music Wilton Lackaye will appear there for six weeks in revivals of "The Pit" and "Trilby." He will also present his own dramatization of "Les Miserables."

Mr. Carpentier a Columbia Trustee.

At the meeting of the Trustees of Columbia University yesterday afternoon, H. G. Carpentier was elected a Trustee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of E. H. Silliman. Mr. Carpentier has taken an active interest in Columbia affairs for many years, and has also made several large donations. The most recent was a gift of $100,000 for the study of the progress of civilization.

EARLY RUSH TO EUROPE FILLS OUTGOING SHIPS

Heavy Travel a Month Ahead of Time Due to Passing of Winter.

MRS. ASTOR DEPARTS TO-DAY

Booked on the Carmania—Many Bound for Mediterranean on the Konigin Luise.

The passenger lists of the seven transatlantic liners which will sail for Europe to-day show that the annual rush for Europe is about a month earlier than usual in starting this year. As a rule the departures for the other side increase between April 1 and 15. This Winter, however, has been so mild and there is so little indication of real Winter weather to come, that tourists have decided to take advantage of the unusual conditions and get a month's extra enjoyment out of the English and Continental resorts.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Market for Pig Still Dull, with Comparatively Few Orders.

The pig iron market continues quiet and dull. An order was placed yesterday for 5,000 tons of gray forge for early delivery and another order for 3,000 tons of Bessemer pig.

The steel market is more active. A contract for 20,000 tons of standard section rails has been closed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, deliveries to be made this year. This company is also making inquiries for 45,000 tons of basic open-hearth sections for delivery in 1907. The Tennessee Coal and Iron Company's output of open-hearth steel rails is sold ahead to February, 1907.

Small orders for structural and fabricated steel have also been placed for independent mills. Indications are that the market for nearly all classes of finished material will continue strong for months to come.

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

Copper metal in London closed: Spot, £79 15s; future, £78 5s. The market finished steady. Sales: Spot, 300 tons; futures, 150 tons.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Rise; Call Money Rates, 3½@5 Per Cent.

Foreign Markets Up on Cheerful Moroccan Outlook—Wheat Lower.

Following the improvement in prices in Thursday's stock market, there came from London yesterday before the opening of the Stock Exchange a higher range of quotations for American securities, and these were attended by heavy purchases of stock in this market for London account. From the opening on to the noon hour prices rose vigorously in all directions, the influences governing speculative temperament being much the same as those which played a similar part on the previous day, including further sharp rises in the Hill shares, renewed weakness in the grain markets, a resumption of the downward movement in foreign exchange rates, and ease in money. After the noon hour the market for a time displayed less activity, but throughout this period prices maintained a firm undertone, losing only the merest fractions from earlier high figures, and once again before the close the upward movement resume sway, carrying practically the entire list up to the highest prices of the day. The advances of 7¾ points in Great Northern and 4¼ points in Northern Pacific again directed attention to the probability of the reports that the long-pending "ore deal" was to be consummated, while the gains of 9¾ points in Anaconda Copper and 3⅛ points in Amalgamated, together with the advances in other copper shares in the outside market and in Boston, the primary market, indicated confidence in the copper position fully as much as compulsory covering of earlier sales. Reading, which on the previous day failed to participate in the sharp advances made elsewhere in the list, rose vigorously yesterday, although there was forthcoming no assurance that the anthracite difficulties had neared a settlement. The United States Steel issues also shared to a larger extent than in the recent past in the forward movement, the heaviness which has marked their course for some days disappearing entirely. American Sugar rose, in spite of the investigation to be made of alleged rebating practices on its part, while Consolidated Gas was unchanged in the face of adverse legislation. There were indications of a resumption of pool activity in many stocks, notably in American Smelting and National Lead, but commission houses also reported a moderate increase in outside buying, a fair portion of this concerning itself with Union Pacific, which rose in all 1¾ points and presented at all times the appearance of great strength displayed by it through the recent declines.

Interest in the money market centred in the movements of foreign exchange, the fluctuations of demand sterling undergoing close scrutiny, inasmuch as they are expected to reflect the opening of any important gold-import movement. Demand rates broke sharply early in the day, but recovered slowly, and at the close were unchanged from the level of the previous day. Nevertheless, expectations of an import movement were not dampened, but were, if anything, encouraged, owing to the receipt at London yesterday of over $9,000,000 of gold from South African and other points. Foreign banking houses reported further willingness on the part of their European connections to extend credit to this market and a continued disposition to purchase American securities. Call and time money rates were nominally easier. Preliminary estimates of the currency movement of the week foreshadowed a maximum loss of about $1,500,000 by the banks, a loss so small in comparison with previous drains that if the apparent reduction in loans involved in the week's liquidation and in the placing here of foreign money is borne out, surplus reserves may be increased, for the first time in some weeks. The wheat markets again displayed unusual weakness, a decline of over 1 cent occurring in Chicago, largely on favorable weather news and in expectation of a Government report to-day disclosing the largest reserves in farmers' hands in the country's history. The Union Pacific and Southern Pacific Railroads reported gains of $236,000 and $452,000, respectively, in net earnings for January, and other earnings statements were similarly flattering. Further improvement upon the Paris and Berlin markets, in consequence of the satisfactory outlook for an arrangement of the Moroccan difficulties, was reported, while prices rose at London under the same influence, coupled with that derived from a happy conclusion of the much-dreaded fortnightly settlement.

ERIE RATE NOT YET CUT.

Other Roads Waiting on the Chance That War May End.

The Erie Railroad, a representative of the road said yesterday, has not yet reached any decision concerning the question of reducing the passenger rate between Chicago and New York to meet the cut announced early this week by the Grand Trunk.

The Wabash, it was announced from Chicago yesterday, has already reduced its rate from $18 to $16, following the Grand Trunk's lead.

The delay on the part of the Erie Railroad in making a similar reduction suggests that time will be allowed for a possible adjustment of the Grand Trunk's grievance against the Michigan Central before all the Chicago-New York differential lines will join in the rate-cutting movement.

TO RUSH MOFFATT ROAD.

Denver Man Enlists Eastern Capital for His Western Line.

DENVER, March 9.—All arrangements have been made to go forward with the completion of the Denver, Northwestern and Pacific Railroad (the Moffatt Short Line) to its destination at Salt Lake City. A telegram received to-day from David H. Moffatt, now in New York, said:

"Have concluded financial arrangements for pushing construction of the road through to Utah. The work of building will be crowded ahead at once."

Work on the road will be rushed from both ends.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 9.—Rates for money were temporarily harder in the market to-day owing to settlement requirements. Discounts were quiet and easy.

On the Stock Exchange the tone continued to improve, and the settlement was being concluded with less difficulty than expected. No failures are now considered likely to occur. Now that the Moroccan question appears to have assumed a more favorable aspect, speculators and investors are more confident in their operations here, while the Continent buys more freely. Consols further advanced, and kindred stocks moved upward in sympathy.

Most of the foreign securities hardened, reflecting the optimistic feeling on the Continental Bourses. Japanese bonds were in especially good demand.

Americans opened firm and kept well above parity during the morning. They gradually strengthened throughout owing to Wall Street support, and closed firm. Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific were quite active and continued to improve.

Kaffirs opened firm and cheerful, hardened gradually, and closed firm after a slight reaction.

Japanese imperial sixes of 1904 were quoted at 103⅞.

Bar silver weak at 29 5-16d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 16.70; Lisbon, 4.50.

Bullion amounting to £150,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day.

CURRENCY MOVEMENT.

Estimates of the results of the week's movement of currency published yesterday indicated a loss of cash by the banks varying from about $300,000 to about $1,500,000. The Sub-Treasury yesterday distributed $300,000 additional on account of special deposits placed with the New York City banks, bringing the total deposited on this account up to $2,900,000. The New York banks have received about $500,000 additional of these special Government deposits for the account of out-of-town banks. In banking circles yesterday it was expected that to-day's bank statement would make a favorable showing. Despite the indicated loss of cash, it was said by representatives of some of the leading banks that the surplus reserve would show a substantial increase. It was estimated by some of the banks that the reduction in loans and deposits during the past week has amounted to something between $12,000,000 and $16,000,000.

Discussing the week's movements of currency, The Wall Street Journal says in its issue of to-day:

The reported movements of currency this week indicate a loss in cash held by the banks of $1,487,400. They received from the interior $6,314,800, and sent to the interior $9,171,760, including $2,000,000 transferred through the Sub-Treasury to San Francisco, supposedly for Japanese account, and $2,379,000 National banknotes sent to Washington for redemption. The loss to the interior was $2,857,400.

Receipts of new gold were $2,018,200, namely: $792,900 on New York Assay Office checks, $951,700 on San Francisco mint checks and telegraphic transfers, and $273,600 on Seattle Assay Office checks.

Ordinary disbursements by the Sub-Treasury were $21,031,800; extraordinary disbursements, being increase in deposits of United States funds in New York banks, were $2,900,000, making total payments by the Sub-Treasury $23,931,800. Payments by banks to the Sub-Treasury for customs, internal revenue, 5 per cent. redemption fund, retirement of circulation, &c., were $24,580,000. The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was $648,200. The total loss to the interior, $2,857,400, on Sub-Treasury operations proper, $648,200, was $3,505,600. Deducting from this the gain from new gold, $2,018,200, the net loss was $1,487,400.

Receipts of currency from the interior were about $300,000 more than in the preceding week. Shipments aside from the extraordinary transfer of $2,000,000 through the Sub-Treasury to San Francisco, on Japanese account, were $618,900 larger, showing that the high rates for money did not check the usual outflow to the interior at this season.

The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was reduced by the disbursements in increasing United States deposits in the banks. Payments into the 5 per cent. fund and transfers of internal revenue collections were on as large a scale as for several weeks preceding. And if it had not been for the increase in United States deposits, the loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper would have been $3,548,200. Customs collections were $3,881,500, comparing with $5,135,800 in the preceding week. Pension payments were $479,900, comparing with $1,228,000 in the preceding week.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Almost an hour before the publication of the bank statement each Saturday, certain people are able to forecast the principal changes with a degree of accuracy which could hardly be the result of guesswork. If it happened once or twice, or at irregular intervals, it might be argued that such forecasts were based upon carefully considered facts respecting the known movements of money, loan shifting, &c., but owing to the notorious disparity which exists about half the time between the changes reported by the Associated Banks and the known movements of money, no estimates based on general information could regularly approximate the Clearing House averages with the accuracy of the forecasts which are accessible each week only an hour or so before the publication of the bank statement. They are of an arbitrary nature, and often, when they differ widely from estimates based upon general information, they come within a few thousand dollars of the exact averages. Ever since the banks began to publish a joint weekly statement, on the average system, the task of forecasting its principal features has been a thankless one, because of the utter impossibility of anticipating the net results of a week's banking, but a method that is sufficiently exact has evidently been secretly discovered.

⁂

"From my experience as a news man," says Thomas F. Woodlock, former editor of The Wall Street Journal and now a member of the Stock Exchange, "I can say that it takes a piece of unexpected outside news fifteen minutes to half an hour to make itself felt in the stock market, and from later experience I can say that it takes about the same time for such information as develops on the floor of the Stock Exchange to reach the tickers outside. Floor information passes from one man to another until it reaches its outlet. If it is important and people outside, seeing its effect on the tape, make inquiries, it may gain general circulation in fifteen minutes, but ordinary floor events are usually half an hour old, at least, when reported outside. The response of the market to news from outside—unexpected news, I mean—is often very curious. I remember the Venezuelan message in 1895 very well. I was in the office when that news came from Washington. Jones looked at it and said: 'This will raise hell; it will create a panic in the market.' Dow looked at it and said that he didn't think it was so serious as all that, and my own opinion, as I remember and now confess, was that it didn't amount to shucks. We put it out on the tickers, disagreeing thus as to the effect it was likely to have. It took the market fully fifteen minutes to get its import, and then Jones was right. It created a very disastrous panic."

⁂

It seems a pity that with all these rumors of steel company mergers going around, Tennessee Coal and Iron stock, recently the most active of the independent steel and iron securities, should be in a position which is prohibitive of free speculation. It is practically cornered. The crowd responsible for its present condition could probably wish that the pretense of a free market had been kept up. Only 100 shares were traded in yesterday. The question now is What will be done with the stock? Nothing has been heard for a long time of the deal by which the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company was to be merged with the Republic Iron and Steel Company, the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company, and perhaps one or two others. There is nothing conceivable on which to base a bull campaign in Tennessee Coal and Iron from this level, and if the crowd that is holding it up wanted to sell some real stock there probably would be no market for it within 20 or 30 points of the present quotation.

⁂

The market suddenly was full of bull tips yesterday morning, referring to Union Pacific, Reading, Amalgamated Copper, American Smelting, American Sugar, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Distillers' Securities, and half a dozen other issues. A large percentage of them were redeemed in the course of the day, to the immense gratification of the few who acted upon them. Amalgamated Copper was the leader of the market, with an advance of nearly 4 points. Its net gain was more than 3 points. Union Pacific was the next in general prominence, with a maximum rise of 1⅞ per cent., of which 1¾ per cent. was left as a net gain for the day. The market was buoyant right from the opening, and generally the highest prices of the day were made in the last hour of trading. The buying of Reading on a recovery of more than 2 points was declared to be of a very excellent character, whereas on Wednesday the decline of that stock to 125 was the occasion for reflections of an extremely pessimistic nature, reports of good selling coming incessantly from the floor of the Stock Exchange.

⁂

At the close of trading yesterday, superficial sentiment was vastly improved. It was as if a bull market had got under full headway again in the short space of forty-eight hours. A good deal of the more urgent buying was doubtless for the short account.

⁂

From the low prices of the week there has been a pretty substantial recovery, amounting to 8¾ points in Amalgamated Copper, 4¾ points in Union Pacific, and 3 to 5 points variously through the active list, with much greater advances in a few stocks, notably Northern Pacific and Great Northern preferred. The Steel stocks have recovered with less vigor than might have been expected, their backwardness in this respect giving rise, indeed, to a good deal of dissatisfaction, and yet, at yesterday's highest quotation, Steel common showed an advance of 2⅝ per cent. from Monday's lowest. The recovery until yesterday was slow and hesitating. There was evidently a concerted movement in yesterday's session against the short interest, which probably has been substantially reduced. The recovery in prices, especially in a few stocks, has been sufficient to bring back upon the market some of the securities that were bought on the decline to Monday's low level, and if the recovery should continue, such selling doubtless would increase in volume, as profits became larger, and, therefore, more tempting. A violent advance, at the expense chiefly of the short interest, is likely to be short lived unless it is supported by a material increase of general buying. Brokers were able to report but a small improvement yesterday in business.

⁂

Thursday's spectacular movement in Atchison flattened out dismally yesterday. The stock was weak throughout yesterday's session. After having been made the most active feature of the market on Thursday afternoon it was not quoted yesterday morning until nearly fifteen minutes after the opening, and then, from a quotation at 95, it declined at once to 94⅛. It ruled during most of the day between 94 and 94½, and broke in the last hour to 93¾, where it closed, at a decline of 1 per cent.

⁂

Disgusted by the market's abrupt change of aspect a trader who probably had seen his profits on the short side disappear suddenly declared: "On the race track such a reversal of form as this would call for an investigation by the Stewards."

⁂

A large and very conservative Stock Exchange house writes: "We owe a great deal of money in Europe—more than is good for us—and the peaceable settlement of the Moroccan situation would be a great boon to the exchange market. The West is lending too much money in the East, and when industries are aroused to activity with the approach of Spring we fear that many of these funds will be ordered home. It seems a time to watch and wait. The dullness, in fact lethargy, of the bond market is proof that many securities are resting over the market that will not be absorbed for many months to come."

⁂

Some slight improvement in the bond market was reported yesterday from isolated sources. It could be very slight and still deserve notice, because conditions for several weeks have been utterly discouraging. The investment demand has been least for what dealers call the gilt-edged stuff. Only this week first-class bonds have been offered down 1 per cent. to find buyers. The prospect is not alluring. It is difficult to see how there can be any sort of market for bonds on a 4 per cent. basis with money worth 5½ and likely to continue to be worth as much for an indefinite time. There is a large body of investment capital in the country which pays very little attention to current interest rates, but it is not large enough to make a bond market. The best market for bonds recently has been found abroad. International bankers report that they have been able to place bonds steadily among their foreign clients. Some highly respected commentators, speaking privately, advance the theory that the bond market will have to wait for a while upon the stock market. It is their contention that the big financial interests, so called, are more anxious about the stock market than about the bond market, and will encourage stock speculation under favorable conditions, even at the expense of the bond market. Opinions of this sort are necessarily arbitrary. They are the result rather of information than reasoning.

⁂

The Hill following is very confident of a distribution on Northern Pacific and Great Northern preferred whether the ore deal goes through or not.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 9.—The local market displayed considerable strength until well into the afternoon, when a part of the improvement was lost. Reading started the ball a-rolling and carried Lehigh Valley with it. Lehigh Navigation issues were neglected, but held well around yesterday's level. Philadelphia Rapid Transit was a feature, advancing over a point on the granting of the privilege to begin Subway work on Market Street, to the Delaware River. This is taken to mean that the extension of time in which to complete the subway will be granted.

Cambria Steel was also in demand, and as offerings were light it easily advanced. Westmoreland Coal was up 1, General Asphalt preferred ½. Warwick Steel declined ¾. The Fort Wayne Wabash Traction issues came into prominence, the common advancing 1, and the preferred selling at 61 up to 64, against last previous sales at 50.

Total sales, 39,567 shares.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 9.—Strength in the shares of National Biscuit and Swift & Co. was the feature of the trading on the local Exchange to-day. The market for Biscuit stocks seems to have been transferred to New York along with the general offices. In that market there was good activity, and the stock sold up to near 69. Here the rise before noon was from 67½ to around 69.

Swift's sold at 109, the high price since the inside selling, in anticipation of the new stock issue. Gossip has said that there are plans to list the stock on the New York Stock Exchange. A corporation with $50,000,000 capital can find a broader market there than in Chicago, and if there are extensive expansion plans ahead of Swift & Co. it would seem to be of advantage to have that broader market. Other stocks were quiet. Match sold at 140, Booth at 40. Tunnel bonds went at the firm price of 93.

In the afternoon, Quaker Oats rose 10 points, to 135. Brick turned firm. Northwestern Elevated preferred lost three points at 65, and Kansas City Light common was easy.

Money, 5½ per cent.; New York exchange, 15c discount. The list:

DAYTON SYSTEM LOSSES $263,654 LAST YEAR

Receiver's Report Shows Net Earnings Shrunk $2,347,733.

OPERATING COST INCREASED

Belated Figures on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton and Pere Marquette Lines.

The belated annual report of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company, which is in the hands of a receiver as a result of its many calamities, was made public yesterday. With it was given out the report of the Pere Marquette, which was leased by the C., H. & D., and upon the stock of which the C., H. & D. guaranteed to pay $578,765 annually.

For the year ended on June 30, 1905, Eugene Zimmerman, who was President of the road when the tabulated statements were made out, reports a deficiency of $241,224 against a surplus of $793,530 on June 30, 1904. This means a falling off of $1,034,754.

The Pere Marquette's deficiency for the year ended on June 30, 1905, was $22,430, against a surplus of $1,290,549 on June 30, 1904, a decrease of $1,312,979. So there was less than nothing applicable to the dividends which the C., H. & D. guaranteed.

With the C., H. & D. report Judson Harmon, the receiver, who is in charge, submits the following statement:

To the Stockholders of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company:

When I took charge of the property of the company on Dec. 4, 1905, I found that the books for the fiscal year ended on June 30, 1905, had been closed and that certain tabulated statements with reference to the business of the year had been prepared, but not published or distributed.

I have now caused these statements and other data taken from the books of the company to be printed and submit them herewith for your information.

The comparative statement of earnings and expenses for the years 1904 and 1905 shows that in the latter year the gross earnings decreased $13,841 and the operating expenses increased $219,375. That made a decrease in net earnings of $232,716. Taxes, interest, and rentals increased $800,899.

The Père Marquette report, with which is issued a statement from Receiver Harmon similar to the one with the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton report, shows the considerable increase of $1,236,728 in gross earnings. But on account of a much larger increase in operating expenses the net earnings fell off $962,245. Taxes increased $9,103 and interest and rentals $697,633. The fact that "other income" increased $356,003 saved the deficiency from being larger than it was, $22,430.

The following table gives the earnings and expenses of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton for the two years:

	1905.	1904.

STOPS LAWYERS' GRAFT.

Canadian Minister of Justice's Bill Affects M. P.'s.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, March 9.—There is to be no more graft for lawyers in Parliament. The Minister of Justice, the Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, has given notice of a bill to amend the act according the representation in the Senate and the House of Commons.

It will provide that a member of either house, who is a barrister or solicitor or the partner of a member, shall not receive any compensation, directly or indirectly for services rendered in any proceeding or contract or claim in which the Crown is a party either directly or indirectly interested before either house.

Severe penalties will be provided. Any offender will be guilty of an indictable offense and liable to four years' imprisonment or a fine of $10,000, and for a number of years will be disqualified from being a members of the House or holding any office in the public service.

THREE WARD LINERS SOLD.

Orizaba, Yucatan, and Saratoga to be Used in the Alaska Trade.

SEATTLE, March 9.—The steamers Orizaba, Yucatan, and Saratoga of the Ward Line of New York have been purchased by the Northwestern Steamship Company for use on the Seattle-Alaska route. They are each 3,000-ton steamers and have a speed of fourteen knots.

The Ward liners Orizaba, Yucatan, and Saratoga are all passenger vessels well known in the West Indian and Mexican trades. The Orizaba was at one time one of the best-known vessels plying between New York and Panama. The places of the above vessels in the Ward Line service, it is understood, will be taken by new vessels for which the company will soon place contracts.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

Some irregularity has been noted in trade reports for the last week, but not more than is seasonable, and mercantile collections are generally prompt. A little conservatism regarding forward business in some industries may be attributed to high prices, although the greatest strength appears in building materials, and preparations for structural work are beyond precedent.

The few minor strikes do not seriously interfere with progress, and thus far the only noticeable effect of the coal controversy is the unusually large demand for this season of the year in all fuel markets and the disposition of small merchants in the immediate vicinity of the anthracite mines to allow stocks to become depleted. Should an amicable result attend the meeting on March 19, these dealers will provide wholesalers and manufacturers with much urgent business. There is little idle machinery in any of the leading manufacturing industries, and contracts for distant delivery come forward freely, except at the textile mills, where purchases are chiefly for immediate requirements.

Bradstreet's says:

Telegrams indicate that, barring some untoward development, the Winter wheat crop will emerge from the ordinarily cold weather period in good condition. Absence of severe changes through the Winter is apparently the basis for the flattering reports received from widely separated points. Thus, in Ohio the crop looks well and the acreage is larger than a year ago; in Indiana the plant is said to have never looked better; in Oklahoma it is said to be in excellent shape, and in Texas both wheat and oats are in good condition. Recent heavy snows in Kansas have given needed moisture. In California all grain crops look well.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 9.—Consolidated Cotton Duck common to-day advanced in sympathy with the Mount Vernon Woodberry Cotton Duck 5s, which moved ½ point higher, to 88, the figure around which they sold prior to the payment of the semi-annual dividend last week. At the meeting of the Directors of the company in New York yesterday afternoon it was announced that $1,000,000 of the Mount Vernon-Woodberry Cotton Duck 5s, which had been held in the treasury, had been sold at a satisfactory figure, which likely has something to do with the advance here. United Railways 4s were active, with a rise of a point. There was no change in the income bonds or common stock.

United States Fidelity ran off ⅞; Seaboard new common declined ⅛. Union Trust jumped 1 point, to 54½. United Electric Light and Power 4½s declined 1 per cent.

The market closed dull, but firm. Sales, bonds, $96,000; stock, shares, 2,894.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—Bears had all the news, and pushed wheat prices down to a point lower than they have yet been in several years. The selling movement began right at the opening, when it was found that Liverpool, instead of reflecting our steadiness of the previous day, had opened ½@⅝d lower in response to Argentine shipments of 4,392,000 bushels, compared with 3,488,000 bushels the previous week. After the regular close May sold down to 83c, rallying later to 83⅛c. Outside markets all shared the seaboard weakness, declining about a cent per bushel. The local close was ⅝@¾c under the previous night. Paris did not share the Liverpool net break of ⅝@¾d, and closed 5@10 points higher, while Budapest was 6 points up. On the other hand, Berlin was ¾@1 mark lower. There was considerable talk of 80-cent wheat in New York next week, unless the crop situation, which at present is very favorable, should change for the worse. The cash market closed weak, as follows: No. 2 red, 83⅝c, elevator, and 85⅝c, free on board, afloat, nominal; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 85⅝c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—At first the corn market resisted declining tendencies, but eventually, under heavy pressure, including stop-loss orders, became very weak, and in the local market closed ⅝@⅞c under the previous night. There was little news to account for the break other than unloading and the heaviness in wheat. Interior receipts were considerably under those of the previous year, and clearances amounted to 452,000 bushels. There was an export business of 40 loads. Cables closed ⅛@¼d net higher, and Peoria advices said country elevators were pretty well cleared of corn. The market lacked confidence, however, owing to the persistent heaviness in wheat, and some of the big holders were obliged to let go. No. 2 corn closed in the local market at 50c, elevator, and 47⅝c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 48⅜c, and No. 2 yellow, 47⅝c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market was very quiet yesterday and ruled generally easy. Sales for the day were estimated at only 100,000 bales, and prices were from 6 to 13 points net lower at the close.

The opening was steady at a decline of from 1 to 4 points, in keeping with rather disappointing cables and reports of good weather from the South, but there were evidences of a continued good trade demand. The close was barely steady and at the low level of the day. Southern spot markets as officially reported were unchanged to ⅛c higher.

A Treatise on Language Study for the Asking

This treatise, which we send gratis on receipt of the coupon below, contains Dr. Rosenthal's complete explanation, of his marvelously successful system of language study, and explanation of the language-phone, its origin, etc.

FRENCH, GERMAN, SPANISH, ITALIAN

The Marvelous The Thoroughly Proven The Incomparable

Language-Phone Method

The Most Perfect, Natural and Successful Method Ever Devised for Acquiring a Foreign Language.

With Rosenthal's Practical Linguistry

A Priceless, Lifetime Advantage in the Mental Equipment of Every Man or Woman. Upward of a million students, teachers, business men and others have availed themselves of the Rosenthal System with entire pleasure and satisfaction. Thousands have already used it with the wonderful Language-Phone, that tireless and precisely accurate up-to-date teacher.

Only 10 Minutes a Day for a Little While

If you knew how easily you could acquire speaking, reading, and writing familiarity with any or all of the four great living foreign languages, would you be content to remain longer ignorant of this delightful and important accomplishment? Only ten minutes a day for a little while in your leisure moments will give you speaking, reading, and writing familiarity with a new language.

The Natural Method of Study

The keynote of the success of this system is that it is the natural way in which the mind acquires language. It is almost exactly as a child learns to talk. Almost unconsciously you glide into thinking in a new language. You learn to use sentences rather than isolated words, and you avoid all the old-time drudgery.

The Voices of Living Native Professors

The Language-Phone furnishes ready self-instruction for one or every member of the family, unceasingly ready for service, repeating the living voices of native professors with absolute accuracy of pronunciation. It talks at any speed you require. It is simplicity itself, a child can use it as easily as a grown person. It is always in order. It affords the acme of accuracy, celerity, convenience. It offers pleasant mental recreation, and a delightful means toward self-culture. You can enjoy it at any time, and there is a certain fascination in its use.

Eye, Ear, Tongue and Mind

You learn the whole langue. All functions of language taught by this method at the same time. Eye, ear, tongue, and mind are all brought into play. It is no longer necessary to memorize lists of verbs, declensions and complicated grammatical rules. You hear the exact pronunciation of a native professor, whose accuracy and reliability we guarantee.

French, German, Spanish or Italian. To speak, to understand, to write there is but one best way. You must hear it spoken correctly, over and over, until your ear knows it. You must see it printed correctly till your eye knows it. You must talk it and write it. All this can be done best by the Language-Phone method. With this method you buy a professor outright. You own him. He speaks slowly or quickly, when you choose, night or day, for a few minutes or hours at a time. Any one can learn a foreign language who hears it spoken often enough, and by this method you can hear it as often as you like.

SAVOY HOTEL

LONDON.

OVERLOOKING THE RIVER AND EMBANKMENT GARDENS.

Never has the Press of England shown greater unanimity than in its praise of the additions and improvements to the Savoy Hotel, London, upon which have been spent upwards of one million pounds sterling.

The new building is characterized by extreme luxuriousness. The Times.

The magnificent buildings of the Savoy make a truly noble show. Daily Telegraph.

The building is palatial—the greatest possible comfort combined with luxury.—Morning Post.

One of the most sumptuous and costly interiors in London. Daily Graphic.

A remarkable addition to the architecture of the Strand.—Standard.

All is peace and refinement.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The last word in hotel luxury and magnificence.—Westminster Gazette.

One of the most luxurious and one of the most comfortable hotels in the world.—Referee.

The most striking innovation in building which London has seen of recent years.—World.

A scale of luxury hitherto unattempted in any hotel in London. New York Tribune.

More beautiful than ever.—Morning Leader.

A delight to the eye—no lavishness seems to have been grudged. Sportsman.

One of the handsomest of London edifices.—Globe.

Elegance and artistic character are everywhere. Nothing has been omitted that could conduce to the comfort and content of the visitor. Ladies' Field.

The most beautiful hotel in Europe.—Outlook.

An ideal home for twentieth century London—Queen.

The great pile of buildings included in this latest addition to the architectural sites of London forms a combination of luxury and beauty which cannot be surpassed in the wide world. The New Savoy is a vast palace of a thousand splendours, of a thousand surprising and delightful innovations. Nothing that could contribute to the comfort, the smoothness, and the joy of life is wanting which the inventive genius of America and Europe could supply, or that the taste and skill of the world's schools of art in all its branches could furnish. The place is, in its way, a very triumph of genius. Its match is not to be found in London, nor in Paris, nor, indeed, in any capital of this little planet. To do it justice in a necessarily brief article is impossible. Having rambled through its glorious salons and galleries, and ante-chambers, up and down marble staircases of noble breadth, beneath panelled ceilings, adorned in relief with exquisite golden tracery, one feels that all this royal magnificence, this opulent beauty, might well inspire a volume which should be bound in white satin and gold.—Western Mail.
